Prediction Reveiw

Our guesses on the outcome of the Thief River Falls city election on Tuesday were quite close, with the exception of Clayton Restad's strong showing in the defeat of 10-year veteran alderman Arnold Narverud. Let's take a look at the predictions and the results.

We projected a voter turn-out of 1,750 and 1,796 went to the polls. We predicted November 4 would be a good November day, partly cloudy with a brisk southerly wind and no reason at all for voters to stay away from the polls. It was a beautiful day with only a light southerly wind but with a few lacy clouds.

Our prediction was that Bob Carlson would win the mayor's race with 1,345 votes to 195 for his brother Gary. Bob polled 1,591 and Gary received 127.

We said Ambrose Wysoski was relatively safe in his reelection bid for third ward alderman and gave him a 100 vote cushion. He defeated Joyce Peterson 242 to 130 for a 111-vote margin.

We picked Milan Borsheim "in a squeaker" over incumbent Roger Worth in the first ward "by as few as 25 votes. Borsheim did register an upset, but by a 57-vote margin, 216 to 159.

Hedging a little bit, we said we could foresee the possibility of an upset in the race for alderman at large, but we picked Narverud as the winner by 138 votes. Restad out-polled the incumbent in every ward, however, winning 1,031 to 739 and more than doubling the plurality in the fourth ward, 232 to 112. The closest Narverud came was in the second and third wards—losing each by eight votes.

The two defeated candidates, Narverud and Worth, will continue council service until the end of this year. They are both due a vote of thanks for their service to the city and we know they will continue to discharge their duties until their terms expire.

Congratulations go to all winners in the election and we wish them well in their new or continued work in city government.

Fights Against Fighting

Following editorial is from the Fergus Falls Daily Journal:

Bobby Hull, regarded by many as one of the best hockey players of all time, chose a new way of demonstrating his worth recently. He refused to play.

Hull is one of an increasing number of players and fans who are concerned about the steady escalation of violence that is making hockey look more like a contest between Roman gladiators than an artful display of athletic skill.

Admittedly, hockey has always been a rather violent, aggressive game, just as is professional football. The trick is to control the violence, and where football seems to have succeeded, hockey has failed miserably.

One must assume that the fault lies with the owners and the coaches. Not only have they not taken sufficient measures to curb the brawls that have become commonplace in recent years, but they haven't even admitted that there is a problem.

Of course there are penalties for fighting, but they obviously are not severe enough to deter such behavior. And fines, when they are handed out, are paid by the team. Why?

The reason is clear enough. The owners and coaches condone the fighting because the fans like it. And that means more money in the pockets of the owners.

A second reason is that fighting is an efficient way of knocking out a superior player. Many teams seem to have hired second-rate hockey players for the primary reason that they are first-rate brawlers.

Hull is a tough hockey player who stated his one-day strike not out of fear, but out of concern for a sport he loves. There is artistry in hockey as well as combativeness and Hull seems to genuinely feel that the increasing violence is turning hockey into a "Roller Ball"-type sport.

It seems incredible that the sport has become so uncontrollable that it can spill over into the societal arena at large, but that is precisely what happened last year when Dave Forbes of the Boston Bruins was indicted for assaulting Henry Boucha of the North Stars in a game in Minneapolis.

That case, together with Hull's one-man show of defiance, ought to alert the owners in the World Hockey Association and the National Hockey League to the fact that if they don't take the initiative themselves to straighten out their game then someone else will.

Hull believes that setting an example for kids should be hockey's main theme. Not a bad idea. It would be nice if the owners and coaches agreed.

Why Editors Turn Grey

Following item appeared recently in the "Kansas Publisher":

You meet someone in the grocery store, (cafe, service station, in a shopping district)—who gives you a bit of news, money for a bill, a picture important to them, a correction or change on an ad.

The item is lost, strayed, put away, forgotten, and doesn't get in the paper.

You are called at home for a news item, or a change or order for a subscription, which you write down.

This item is promptly written on by a young child, thrown away by an enthusiastic cleaner, or eaten by the dog.

A picture is mailed, delivered, or stuck in the door, with no information at all on it.

Money is mailed to the office, always cash, with no bill, no address, no instructions for its use, and you don't know what it's for.

An important happening such as a party, dance, show, contest takes place, the paper isn't notified, and you are met on the street, or in the office or receive a letter, or phone call demanding to know why it wasn't in the paper, with pictures.

Your deadline is Tuesday noon, the paper is printed on Wednesday and someone calls at one o'clock Wednesday and says "I know I'm late but could you possibly put . . ."

Your phone rings at home, and a member of the family answers it, and is told, "I have an important news item for the paper. Please have the editor call me back." The caller then hangs up, no name, no phone number.

The best pictures your photographer ever took appear in the paper with no credit.

Your business phone rings constantly, people call to give information, place ads, or ask questions. And after a busy morning of taking care of the phone, and you settle down to get it all on paper, it rings again, and you hear an indignant voice say, "I tried to call you all morning and couldn't get in," and then they just want to visit.

An editor works seven days a week, and many evenings, and you decide to take a night off, not answering the phone, or attending a meeting, and the biggest story the town has had breaks.

You chase fire engines, check out ambulance calls, etc., and the fire alarm rings, and you decide not to go, and that fire is rivalled only by the Chicago fire.

You are reprimanded severely for mispelling a name, and decide it was probably Munchauesen, or Dinglehoffer, but find to your embarrassment it was Jones.

You are expected to recognize everyone in town (regardless of the size of the town), all county, city and state representatives, by sight or from their voice, so no one tells you their name.

Someone calls you or comes in late in the week, and says, "I was by twice this week and you were closed." One checking you find it was before office hours begin, and during the noon hour when you are closed.

And then there is that biggest headache of all. You are dependent upon your advertising, a sale ad is given you and somewhere between the taking of it and the printing a date, or the time, or the address have been omitted. You apologize, give free space to run it again, correctly, and then find that it wasn't on the original copy given you by the subscriber.

All these things make for a full and interesting life of an editor.

Borrowed Nonsense

The bookmaker acquired a particularly bright Mynah bird. The bird became so good at English that the bookie taught it some French. Once the bird could say a few sentences in French, he got a Spanish dancer to teach it some Spanish, and the bird became good at that language. Then he had one of his runners, Otto Schultz, teach the bird some German. He carefully kept the bird's lunguistic ability under wraps until one evening when he needed money. He walked into his favorite bar with the Mynah bird on his shoulder. The bird attracted attention, naturally, and the bookie bragged that it could speak three languages besides English. The bartender was skeptical, just as the bookie had expected, and wound up making a $50 bet. The bookie talked to the bird in French without getting the slightest response. Then the bookie barked out some German phrases. Still no response. Spanish did no better. The bartender took the $50 wager from the bar and stuck it in his pocket as the bookie stalked out, the Mynah bird still on his shoulder. Once outside, bookie screamed, "I oughta wring your blasted neck. Do you realize, you just cost me $50?" "Don't be a jerk," the Mynah bird protested. "Just think of the odds you'll be able to get in that joint tomorrow!"

North Dakota Lignite is part of the answer...

For years, North Dakota lignite was considered a marginal fuel in the coal industry. Now it has emerged as part of the answer in solving the energy crisis. North Dakota lignite can be used instead of oil or gas for the production of electricity. This electricity, in turn, can be used for virtually all energy needs. And with North Dakota lignite generating electricity, it will "free up" large amounts of oil and gas that are in short supply.

Our nation has reserves of nearly 450 billion tons of lignite and 78 percent of this is located in North Dakota. It is low in sulfur, making it much more acceptable environmentally than other coals. Intelligent land reclamation will restore the soil to productivity after strip mining. North Dakota can help the nation — and brighten the economic future of our state — with wise and prudent use of its coal resources. Lignite is part of the answer to the energy crisis.

Mother has even arranged to hold a fashion show, a local social highlight, in her home. Bobette is needed, much to her dismay, to model a very feminine evening gown on the night of the Dirty Dozen's big game!

Other cast members include Steve Hjelle, Rozanne Swanson, Debbie Bjorgaard, Bob Tunheim, Gerald Larson, Russ Holmaas, Bev Blawat, Bruce Von Wald, Janet Bjornrud, Janet Ranum, Tami Bjorgaard, Jenny Johnson, Rolland Roseland, Cecelia Swenson, DeEtta Pederson, Ardeen Hugg and Sheila Erickson.

Tickets are one dollar for adults and 50 cents for students. Tickets will be available at the door Friday evening.

Lincoln high school, the area vocational-technical institute and the Northwest Vocational center will all be open for visitation during regular school hours Monday through Friday of next week. Public visitation of any or all of these schools is encouraged.

Student guides will be available upon request at Lincoln school and counselors will also be available to answer questions from parents. A special visitation day will be observed at the AVTI on Thursday, November 20, when tours will be given and coffee will be served.

At Franklin middle school the open house will be held on Thursday from 1 to 3:20 p.m.

Elementary school open house hours will be as follows:

Northrop—9 a.m. to 11 a.m. Monday, November 17;

AVTI Approved For Part-Time Instruction

With rules and regulations authorizing part-time instruction for post-secondary students being approved by the state board of education, the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute has enrolled its first part-time student, according to Arnt Aune, director. Bryan Larson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Justus Larson of Thief River Falls, has enrolled in the AVTI accounting program for two hours of instruction per day. Larson holds a degree in hospital administration and felt the accounting instruction would be useful to him.

Aune said he believes the emphasis of part-time instruction should be on serving the needs of the adult whose normal work activities precludes his attendance during normal school hours.

The director proposes part-time instruction within the regular six-hour day on a space available basis in audio communications, office education, architectural drafting, welding, sales and marketing and farm operation and management. Part-time instruction after the regular six-hour day in those departments would require extra staff.

Part-time instruction only after the regular six-hour day could be given in electronics, aviation mechanics, carpentry, auto mechanics, auto body repair and cosmetology. This would also require additional staff. It is not believed part-time instruction can be given in the practical nursing department at this time.

Aune added that full-time students would have preference for available space, a situation which limits the number of part-time students who may attend during the regular school day. Persons interested in attending any of the programs on a part-time basis are invited to contact the area vocational-technical institute at 681-5424.

Fire Destroys Hog House On Goodridge Farm

Fire shortly before midnight last night destroyed a 12x14 log hog house on the James Smith farm east of Goodridge, causing the loss of a sow and eight small pigs. Smith estimated the loss at about $750.

Sparks from the fire were carried by the wind toward other buildings on the farm, Smith said, but snow on the roofs of the buildings helped reduce the possibility of further fire damage. The fire was believed to be caused by either a heat lamp or electrical wiring, Smith said, and the family kept watch on the fire until it burned down to embers.

City Gives OK To CETA Snow Shoveling Service

SPARTAN SPIRIT SHOP at Franklin middle-school—a store operated before and after school by students in the middle school lobby—is sponsoring a book fair to be held during the school day November 17-21. Hours will be from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and the public is invited to view the display and make selections in the main entrance area of the Franklin building. Officers of the Spartan Spirit shop are shown with a large bulletin board display in the school. Left to right are Lori Duke, Liz Vigen and Bill Reierson. The officers note that many types of literary works will be displayed, including classics, fiction, biographies, adventure, science, crafts and others with prices ranging from 29 cents to $2. A few records and books will also be offered for slightly higher prices.

Based on a letter that was introduced at a meeting of the Thief River Falls city council Tuesday evening in the city auditorium council chambers, it appears that a proposed program to provide winter snow shoveling services for elderly and disabled city residents is inching closer to reality.

The letter, dated November 10, was from M. J. Mongoven, park and recreation director, who said the park and recreation board recommended that the city participate in a program to provide CETA I enrollees for snow shoveling this winter. Lawrence Bjorkman, chairman of the park and rec board, has volunteered to supervise the program.

Lowell Koebernick, area CETA I supervisor, said he would be able to furnish four of his clients for shoveling, and that CETA (a federal program) will pay the wages and workmen's compensation, but medical expenses are not included.

Under the guidelines of a proposed application form that Koebernick prepared, applicants for the snow shoveling service would be required to release the city from liability caused by or during the removal of snow. To qualify, applicants would have to live within the city limits and fall within an income bracket or disability status. They would have to list the number of tenants, dependants and family members living at home, describe the nature of their disability (if any), list family income and sources of income, and employment status.

Although the program is still in its early developmental stages, city officials expressed hope that snow shoveling services would be available by December. No direct action was taken by the council last night, but it did express verbal approval of the program.

Mrs. Melva Owen, a prime supporter of the program, addressed the council last night and drew the momentary ire of some of the councilmen by stating that the council was not being entirely cooperative in the matter. Alderman William Penning assured Mrs. Owen that the council could do nothing more at the present time, and that the matter was in the hands of the Park and Recreation board.

In other matters, the council passed a resolution permitting the Thief River Falls youth center board to advertise for and interview applicants for the job of youth center director. The present director, Susan Smith, has announced plans to vacate the position. The council reviewed the center's budget, and agreed that center operations should continue in its present form.

There was extensive discussion regarding a proposed city-county agreement for the correction of drainage and erosion problems on ditch 70, paralleling Greenwood street. No direct action was taken, but a delegation of councilmen will address the county board at its next meeting to further discuss the

In Leech Lake Case . . .

Judge Finds Guilt In Case Only For Appeal

Three men who defied the requirement for a special license for fishing within the Leech Lake reservation on June 22, 1973, have been found guilty in district court of violating state law.

Judge James E. Preece of Bemidji, former Grand Rapids resident, declares, however, in an unusual 81-page memorandum on the case that he does not believe the defendants are guilty and that it requires appellate review:

"In order to achieve this appellate review (an appeal to a higher court), a finding of guilty was made, although the court feels it is not justified, for neither the state nor the defendants could appeal from a not guilty plea."

C. John Forge of Missouri, James Olson of St. Paul and Richard C. Larsen of Cass county were fishing from a dock in Leech lake between 8 and 9 p.m. on June 22, 1973. Each had a valid state fishing license but did not have the special stamps or licenses for fishing on the reservation.

County court Judge Keith L. Craft, who is not a lawyer, found the defendants guilty of violating chapter 124 of the laws of the state for 1973 (M.S.A. 97.431) and fined them $20 each. The late Judge James F. Murphy of Grand Rapids started hearing the appeal trial at Walker on Sept. 19, 1973. After his death, the parties involved agreed to submit the matter to Judge Preece in August, 1974.

After an in-depth review of back-ground, Indian treaties, constitutional implications, the nature of the Indian right to hunt and fish, the Nelson act, the United States district court ruling that the Leech Lake band retains

Two Sentenced In Dist. Court Mon.

Sentencing of two Thief River Falls men in separate cases took place Monday in Pennington county district court. Judge Warren Saetre sentenced the two defendants who entered pleas of guilty to the charges stated.

Dennis Barry, originally charged with attempted murder in an alleged attempt to run over Candace Passa with his automobile, entered a plea of guilty to aggravated assault before Judge Saetre Monday. A pre-sentence investigation had been ordered following an earlier appearance and had since been received by the court.

Barry was sentenced to nine months in the county jail, after which he will be placed on probation. If he voluntarily commits himself to either the Fergus Falls state hospital or veterans' hospital in St. Cloud, the time spent receiving treatment will be credited against his jail sentence.

A part of the plea bargaining agreement was that Barry not return to Thief River Falls for as long as Miss Passa continues to reside here and that he pay her medical expenses incurred as a result of the incident. The plea

Estimated Loss In Pipeline Fire Set At $192,000

Preliminary estimate of loss of product as a result of the puncturing of the Lakehead Pipe Line company line northwest of Viking last week has been set at 1,600 barrels, according to information received by Iver Blade, manager of the Viking pumping station. Value of the product loss has been set a $192,000, based on a price of $12 per barrel.

Blade said a final loss figure can not be determined until the shipment is metered at Superior, Wis., and that the preliminary figure is only an estimate. The material lost consisted on condensate, butane and propane gas.

The Viking station manager also said that about a 40-foot section of pipe had been replaced at the site of the fire and that it would be tested to determine if any weakness indicates a need for further replacement. Line pressure has been reduced pending results of the tests.

The $192,000 loss estimate does not include the $100,000 tractor lost in the fire nor the costs involved in handling the fire, bringing it under control and repairing the line.

Winning prizes in the basket contest were Mrs. Lynn Hanson, first, with her basket designed like a drum; Mrs. Ed Stucy, second with a log cabin basket; and Mrs. Eugene Fiedler, third, with a witch decorated basket. Jewel Box Will Observe 25th Anniversary

Twenty-fifth anniversary of the Jewel Box in Thief River Falls has been announced by Phil Hess, owner of the business which first opened in this city in 1950.

In observance of the event, a 25th anniversary tea will be held Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Thief River golf club. Free coffee, tea and punch will be served, free registration will be held for a 45-piece set of Franciscan dinnerware and each lady in attendance will receive a certificate for a silver butter knife, redeemable at the Jewel Box. A table top fashion show of china, crystal and silver will be presented by the Ladies golf association.

Hess started the Jewel Box as a one-man store in 1950 in the Falls Theatre building. In 1959 he purchased Watzke's Jewelers and moved to the present location on Third Street. In 1967 an addition was built to the rear of the building which allowed expansion of the china and gift department.

The store now employs five full-time and three part-time people. Phil's son Steve, who has been a full-time employee of the store for four years, became a member of the firm when the business was incorporated a short time ago.

The Jewel Box is a member of the Minnesota Retail Jewelers' association and the National Retail Jewelers of America, as well as a participant in Jewel House, a buying group headquartered in Minneapolis which includes more than 600 stores. Diamonds are bought by the Jewel Box directly from a diamond cutter in New York.

Phil served on the board of directors of the state association for 12 years and was president in 1965-1966. In addition to ownership of the Jewel Box, Hess was a partner for nine years in Wetzel's Diamond Jewelers in Little Falls until recently selling his interest to his partner, Monk Carlson. He was also part owner of a local store, Falls Jewelry, operated by Si Giere for five years.

Anniversary sale at the Jewel Box will begin Tuesday, November 18, with one of the in-store attractions being an appearance by Jim Erickson of Goldcraft Designs of Minneapolis. Erickson is a specialist in design and goldsmithing and in creating custom made rings and other specialties. He will be at the store Thursday through Saturday, November 20-22.

STAR SCOUT advancement was recognized Sunday evening at the city-wide Boy scout court of honor held at Redeemer Lutheran church. Kent Simons received the award from Morris Owen. Qualifying for Star scout rank but not present at the court of honor was Steve Geatz.

Judge Rules On Leech Lake Case To Allow Appeal

the right to hunt and fish on the reservation and other facets of the problem, Judge Preece makes the following final comments:

"As stated, this Court finds no treaty right to hunt and fish reserved to the Minnesota Chippewa Tribe at the Leech Lake Reservation. Thus, equal protection arguments must be determined solely on a rational basis theory in order to comply with the Federal and State Equal Protective Provisions. M.S.A. 97.431 clearly does not attempt to justify itself on any rational basis. It splits jurisdiction solely on the basis of race (and includes only some members of that race) and geographical area. It provides for different sets of laws and different courts for the various areas. It places a direct tax on all races other than the Minnesota Chippewa with the benefit of that tax going only to the Minnesota Chippewa. It excludes all races from activities which only the one race may take part in.

"As such, M.S.A. 97.431 goes far beyond what any other statute, Federal or State, has ever done as to race relations. Even with respect to the Indian race, the policy of Congress from the end of removal days had been to assimilate. Although PL 280 still reserved hunting and fishing rights, those already gone were presumed assimilated. We cannot now say that the equal protection clauses of the State and Federal Constitution permits separation rather than assimilation. Clearly that is what M.S.A. 97.431 has done and as such in the absence of a treaty right, violates the equal protection clauses of both the Federal and State Constitutions.

"It is apparent that his memorandum does not support the Court's finding of guilt as to these defendants. The defendants presented this case ot the Court as a test of the validity of M.S.A. 94.431, and the Court feels that the issues raised therein are of such an important and uncertain nature that appellate review is necessary. In order to achieve this review, a finding of guilt was made, although the Court feels it is not justified, for neither the State or the defendants could appeal from a not guilty finding."

bargaining agreement was said to be agreeable to all parties involved.

Larry M. Wollin of Thief River Falls entered a plea of guilty to charges of transporting illegally taken big game (moose) and using an artificial light to take big game. Wollin had been apprehended by state conservation officers on October 25 west of Thief River Falls.

problem. The city approved a request from the state department of highways to pass a resolution revoking the designation of federal aid urban route 5869 and redesignating it on the new CSAH 18 alignment. This was done to provide continuity in the federal systems.

A resolution was passed to begin reimbursement to city department heads for expenditures incurred during participation in civic activities. The plan, which is being tried on a one year basis, is designed to provide an incentive for department heads to become involved in community affairs.

Finally, the council discussed at length the status of the Northwestern hospital medical office building project, with some councilmen expressing concern that an agreement has not yet been signed with the hospital board for the repayment of interim hospital construction financing. Despite this, the council approved payment of two special bills for construction: A $65,700 bill from Witcher construction and a $12,600 bill from Roley electric.

ID Bracelet Project Set By Mrs. Jaycees

Mrs. Jaycees of Thief River Falls are again sponsoring a project whereby identification bracelets with name, address, medical alert and other information may be obtained for a small cost as part of a group project.

In previous years, information sheets have been distributed through the schools for children to bring home to their parents. This year the Mrs. Jaycees are foregoing that phase of the project and encouraging parents interested to order the bracelets directly.

Five lines of type may be included on each bracelet with a maximum of 19 letters or spaces per line. First line should include the child's name, second line the address, third line the city and state, fourth line the phone number and child's religion (P-Protestant, C-Catholic, CS-Christian Scientist, LDS-Latter Day Saints) and fifth line the birth date, next of kin or medical note (diabetic, allergic, etc.)

Mrs. Jim Sims, chairman of the project for the Mrs. Jaycees said that cost of the bracelets is $1.50 each or $1 each if ordered in groups of 12. That amount may be sent with a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Vital Products, Route 1, Box 111, Audubon, Minn. 56511. Information to be printed permanently on the bracelets should be typewritten or printed plainly.

Persons needing further information about the bracelets or the project may contact Mrs. Sims at 810 Alice Drive, or by calling 681-3795.

Art Mercier

The most listened-to outdoor reporter on radio was Art Mercier, the outdoor editor of WBBM-CBS, Chicago. Art died in his sleep October 1. He and John Case were planning to come to "Operation October" as soon as Art did his Thursday programs.

This column has been providing Art with Minnesota news for 14 years, and it will take time to get over his loss. He and his wife Millie attended many of our "Operation October fall parties."

In addition to being a great outdoorsman, Art was a wonderful human being. He had thousands of listeners in Minnesota as we learned when we traveled the state. Art's many friends are raising an "Art Mercier memorial fund." The fund will help a young outdoor reporter go to college according to present plans. Those of you who wish to take part may send your donations to: Art Mercier Memorial fund, p.o. box 302, Park Ridge, Illinois 60068.

Pheasant Opening

The pheasant season is living up to the pre-season predictions when the outlook told us there were 50 per cent fewer birds this year than in 1974. The White Bear area had a good opening weekend, but since that time, the hunters have had to work hard to get the birds. The season runs until November 23, with a daily limit of two cocks and a possession limit of four cocks. The season is closed in Douglas county. Habitat is the big problem with the pheasant.

Moose Report

Minnesota hunters harvested 509 moose during the October season. The moose hunting area is divided into a northwest and a northeast range. Hunting success was about 70 per cent in both ranges and hunters who did not get their moose in October still have an opportunity in December. In the northeast range October hunters took 196 animals out of a quota of 275. In the northwest range hunters took 313 moose out of a quota of 445.

Fall Fishing

It has been some time since we have had the excellent fishing produced this fall. Jim Kobler of White Bear Lake reported that northerns have been hitting for the shore fishermen. Sucker minnows have been very effective as a bait.

Bob John Kraavenbrink of Excelsior and Paul Fahlin in Crystal Bay say that fall fishing has been the best ever on Lake Minnetonka with northerns and bass leading the hit parade.

Waino Paavola at New York Mills reports Richard Baird caught a bass weighing five and on-half pounds in Boedigneimer Lake—a little lake northwest of Rush Lake in the New York Mills area. The bass was caught in the bullrushes with a frog being used for bait. The fish was such a beautiful specimen that he returned it to the lake. It was 20½ inches long and 15 inches in girth.

Black Bay Ducks

We agree with department of natural resources commissioner Robert Herbst that the Gold Portage Black Bay duck area should not be included in the Voyageurs' national park. It is the best duck hunting area northeast Minnesota. The bay has good stands of wild rice and other vegetation. The closing of this area has closed down duck hunting in the International Falls area.

Hunters Warned Of Fire Threat By State DNR

Minnesota's beautiful warm dry fall has carried over into the deer hunting season, raising additional risks of forest and grass fires.

The department of natural resources reported that over the week end of November 1-2—the opening of the 1975 deer season—25 wild fires occurred, most of them in the Brainerd, Cambridge, Moose Lake, Bemidji and Hibbing areas.

Dry conditions are expected to continue through the week, according to weather officials.

DNR foresters said that fire lookout towers are being manned and that aircraft patrols are being flown as an additional precaution.

The central and east central areas are said to be the driest parts of the state at the present time.

Forestry officials urged hunters and all others using the woods this fall to build campfires only in safe sites and to be careful with discarded smokes and matches.

Atlantic Brant Making Strong Comeback Try

Atlantic brant, small dark geese which spend nearly all of their lives on the sea, have bounced back from a low of 40,000 in 1973 to an estimated population this year of 150,000—allowing the reopening of hunting along the east coast this fall.

The season for brant will be short—30 days, opening no earlier than November 10—and a 48-hour emergency closure provision in the regulations calls for a last minute population count of the birds on their wintering grounds before the November 10 season opening to make sure population estimates that were the basis for the reopening of hunting were accurate. The Interior department's fish and wildlife service says that if the number of brant is significantly lower than anticipated, or if food supply is limited on the wintering grounds the season will be reduced or closed altogether, depending on the severity of the situation.

The gregarious Atlantic brant is tied inextricably to the salt water environment. Except during migration, they rarely fly over land. They waddle onto tidal flats at low tide, preen on the open sea in clusters at high tide, sleep bobbing at sea at night, and dip beneath the shallows in bays and estuaries for their favorite food, sea lettuce. Rather than flying as other geese do in a V-formation, they porpoise along almost on the water's surface, leaderless but undulating in concert with the ocean swells, sideslipping into grape-like clusters, then stringing out irregularly like an accordian gone awry, honking all the while in a characteristically plaintive croak all of their own.

Like other geese, the Atlantic brant is locked onto its migratory pattern so tightly that it will return year after year to the same wintering spots on the east coast from Massachusetts to North Carolina regardless of conditions there. They concentrate thickest along the New Jersey coast. In 1931 the species nosedived from a population of about a half million to 10,000 birds in one season when a fungus killed off the eelgrass crop along the entire east coast.

Most of the birds died of starvation that year, with the survivors consisting only of those shrewd enough to seek out another kind of food—sea lettuce. Slowly through the 40's and 50's Atlantic brant made a comeback, and with it was noted a distinct and basic shift in preferred diet from eelgrass to sea lettuce. Although eelgrass has long since returned to its former abundance, the brant still continue to feed primarily on sea lettuce, as if the species is now imprinted with a native suspicion of eelgrass for the troubles it caused their ancestors.

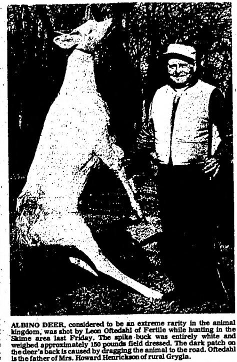
The urge in brant to migrate north in the spring shows up first in the flocks wintering off the North Carolina coast in late February. By mid-March their restlessness and hopscotch movements north have prompted the same urge in other brant and large flocks gather off Monomoy Island, Massachusetts. By early May they arrive on their feeding grounds in the northern part of the Gulf of St. Lawrence where they stay until the end of the month. Then they usually begin their long overland flight to James Bay or Ungava Bay. From these two bays the migration continues to their Arctic Circle breeding grounds as weather permits in early June

Atlantic brant nest on Southhampton island, the Mellville peninsula, and north into the Arctic archipelago. They prefer low areas of grassy tundra close to water in the deltas and valleys of the Arctic. Their nest cup is built on rocks, debris, or on grass and is lined with grasses, mosses, lichens and down. Brant nests are subject to destruction by summer storms because of their proximity to water.

Arctic breeding geese have precious little time to spare each summer to build nests, lay and hatch their eggs, and raise their young to flight stage. As soon as the goslings hatch in late June they are taken immediately to sea by the parents. By mid-September they are able to fly and make the southward migration along the eastern shore of Hudson Bay and James Bay, then overland to the Atlantic coast.

Brant hunting was closed for 20 years after the 1931 eelgrass dieoff. By 1951 when hunting was reopened the brant population had increased to more than 100,000. In 1971 the brant population was recorded at 150,000, but 1971 and 1972 proved to be disastrous years in terms of reproduction for these birds. If snow or ice remains on the Arctic nesting grounds in June when the brant arrive, egg laying is delayed and the young of the year may not have enough time to reach the flying stage before onset of the Arctic winter. No nesting is started if snow remains on the nesting grounds into late June.

Moreover, heavy rainfall along the east coast in the fall of 1971 destroyed the sea lettuce crop when the salinity of coastal bay waters was diluted. This forced the brant to fly into salt marshes and even into upland fields to feed. This atypical behavior exposed them to more hunting pressure than normal. By January 1972 the population was down to 40,000 birds; hunting was closed that fall.



ALBINO DEER, considered to be an extreme rarity in the animal kingdom, was shot by Leon Oftedahl of Fertile while hunting in the Skime area last Friday. The spike buck was entirely white and weighed approximately 150 pounds field dressed. The dark patch on the deer's back is caused by dragging the animal to the road. Oftedahl is the father of Mrs. Howard Henrickson of rural Grygla.

Second Holiday Snowmobile Race Set In Alexandria

Second annual holiday spectacular snowmobile race will be held in Alexandria, December 27-28.

Featured race of the two-day event will be the 440-X experimental class international championship. Larry Rugland of the Polaris racing team, Roseau, will be on hand to defend his championship against an expected 30 challengers.

At last year's running of the spectacular, Rugland raced away with the majority of the glory. In addition to winning the 440-X championship and its $4,000 first place purse, he added wins in the 340cc and 650cc professional driver's circuit (PDC) classes. This made him an easy overall point victor and winner of the "Edgar Hetteen Cup" given in honor of the founder of snowmobiling in the United States. Arctic Enterprises, Inc., Thief River Falls, donated the five-foot high traveling trophy.

Hetteen is a co-inventor of the snowmobile and founded Minnesota's two largest snowmobile companies, Arctic and Polaris.

More than 600 racers are expected to compete in 17 different races for professionals, men, women and juniors.

Remind Hunters Hawks, Eagles Owls Protected

Hunters should be particularly vigilant while hunting birds, the regional director of the U.S. fish and wildlife service, Great Lakes region, said.

In a brief announcement ot the hunting public, regional director Jack Hemphill noted that all hawks, owls and eagles are protected by federal and state laws. The service is soliciting cooperation from hunters to ensure that birds of prey will be protected during the hunting season.

Hemphill explained that winged predators are highly mobile birds. More-over, he added, birds of prey are commonly observed in fall migratory movements by hunters in the field. Young birds are unwary when flying and resting along raptorial flyways. The young migrants are vulnerable to indiscriminate shooters, ornithologists claim.

To stay on the safe side of the law, hunters should accurately identify quarry before shooting, the fish and wildlife service recommends.

"For those of us who hunt, and I'm referring to hunters who are recognized and accepted as true sportsmen and gentlemen, it would behoove us to consider the responsibilities of hunting by the highest ethical standards; which means we cannot tolerate the slob hunter among us," Hemphill said. Any illegal or reckless incident in the field can generate critical backlashing that works against true sportsmen and the legitimate sport of hunting, he added.

Laws protecting birds of prey evolved after years of controversy and heated debate. In spite of the legal protection insulating birds of prey from buckshot, conservationists have noted that winged predators are shot each year by "plinkers" and a few counterfeit sportsmen.

In a profusely illustrated book titled "Birds in Our Lives", a department of the Interior publication, biologists John and Frank Craighead wrote that birds of prey are readily recognizable, although they do differ in size and in the habitats they frequent. Because they are predatory birds, or raptors, the winged predators are controversial animals and "demand a special sort of understanding among all of us," the biologists stated in the Interior publication.

Highly skilled in the art of hunting, winged predators—hawks, owls, eagles, falcons, and ospreys have long been considered competitors with man. The raptors are still locked in the monds of America's citizenry.

Time was when sinister tales of predation were passed from one generation of people to the next. Descendants took option to expand or modify the legends to suit their needs or whimsies. For many years the random killing of raptors was dismissed as a "good thing," insignificant to the whole of nature's pyramid. Birds of prey were undesirable creatures in the grand drama of man living with nature.

Scientists gradually entered the arena of controversial predation. Objective studies disclosed that while predation is an awesome force, it is, in many cases, largely or remotely beneficial to man and the wildlife community.

Elementary predation is beneficial in that raptors help control populations of lesser animals. Nature has even established a free sanitation service that benefits man. Winged Scavengers consume carrion strewn along highways and byways. And new emphasis is being placed on an esthetic ethic. Bird enthusiasts derive pleasure from seeing birds of prey or in knowing they are occupying their respective niches in nature.

Sophisticated research is being conducted to investigate the feasibility and worth of treating immobilized and injured raptors. In related projects, independent researchers are breeding raptors in captivity. Progeny of captive-bred birds are subsequently released to reestablish lost populations.

In still another project, federal biologists are transplanting normal eagle eggs from nests to problem nests in areas where pollutants have adversely affected adult eagles to the point where the mature birds are no longer able to produce eggs of normal shell thickness.

Wildlife researchers report that it takes rare perception to comprehend the sometime-hidden benefits associated with many forms of natural predation. Witnessing a predatory kill may provoke a negative impression of predation. Witnessing a predatory kill may provoke a negative impression of predation as a useful force in nature.

The random killing of predators is not only illegal, but illogical, researchers warn. Predators are highly specialized flesh eaters. They also serve as indicators of a healthy environment. As a reference, they are useful when contemplating the quality of habitat, or degree of habitat destruction, conservationists say.

Conservationists are encouraging the public to separate counterfeit sportsmen from real sportsmen. This is essential, they say, because the legal hunter performs a useful service by harvesting surplus wildlife. The unethical hunter, however, is a problem for everyone. The slob hunter serves no useful function and works against wildlife and conservation-minded sportsmen. The U.S. Fish and wildlife service suggests that anyone witnessing an illegal kill should report the incident to the nearest wildlife conservation officer.

To spare raptors would not only contribute to wildlife, it would have immense moral value in a society trying hard to coexist with raw nature, Hemphill concluded in his announcement.

Many Don't Feel New Stadium Is Needed In Cities

More than four out of 10 Minnesotans think that a new stadium for the Twin Cities area is not needed at all. Only about one out of 10 Minnesotans seems to strongly favor building a new Twin Cities stadium. The rest either are lukewarm about the idea, which has been much in the news in recent months, or have no opinion at all.

That is the result of a statewide poll, conducted as a public service by Mid-Continent Surveys, Inc., of Minneapolis.

In the survey, 1,000 adults from throughout the state were asked: "Now that the football season is coming up, there may be more talk about a new stadium for the Twin Cities area. In your opinion, is a new stadium for the Twin Cities area needed very much, somewhat, a little, or not at all?"

Eleven per cent replied "very much" and 44 per cent said "not at all."

Between those two extremes, 18 per cent said "somewhat" and nine per cent replied "a little," with 18 per cent expressing no opinion.

Twin Citians were stronger in their attitudes than people in the rest of the state—with an additional two per cent "very much" favoring and two per cent "not at all" in favor.

Greatest support came from men (16 per cent, compared to the overall 11 per cent) saying a new stadium is "very much" needed, and the least from people 65 years of age and older (five per cent).

Only seven per cent of the women queried replied "very much."

Fifty-six per cent of those 65 and over said a new stadium at all.

Horses and the people who rode them have played eventful roles in American history. Although horses no longer serve as primary transportation, they provide meaningful educational and recreational experiences for almost 4,500 Minnesota young people enrolled in the 4-H horse project. Special awards and national college scholarships are available through state 4-H horse events and the national 4-H awards program.

Good Luck Karlstad

Good luck wishes go out today to coach Phil Johnson and his Karlstad high school football team. The Rabbits meet Esko Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Walker in the championship game of the Minnesota state Class C football playoffs.

Although we don't normally include Karlstad in our sports coverage, we do follow Newfolden. And since the Nordics are a member of the Top of the State Conference our coverage does flow onto other conference members, including Karlstad.

Making Karlstad's state title quest even more local-orienated is the fact that the Rabbits met McIntosh-Winger in a first round state playoff test on the Prowler athletic field in Thief River Falls last week.

The feeling seems to be growing that the Rabbits will not be representing Karlstad alone, but will be playing for all of northwestern Minnesota.

Estimate Playoff Game Attendance

Although official attendance figures have not yet been released by the Minnesota State High School League, Thief River Falls athletic director Russ Smith estimates a crowd of about 1,200 attended Friday night's MSHSL state Class C football playoff game in Thief River Falls that matched Karlstad against McIntosh-Winger.

There were some 700 tickets bought at the gate the night of the ball game and it's estimated that at least 250 tickets were purchased on a pre-sale basis at the Karlstad and McIntosh-Winger schools, bringing the total to at least 1,200.

"I think it was a great crowd," offered Smith who feels he might have even underestimated the attendance figure.

LHS Basketball Schedule Is Tough

Pre-season practice drills began Monday for all Lincoln high school winter sports teams. Once again we'll make the rounds talk to each coach about the upcoming season. Basketball, under new head coach Glen Peters, is featured today.

Although Thief River Falls has been reclassified as a large Class AA school this year, the Prowler basketball regular season schedule is basically unchanged from past years with several area smaller Class A schools still scheduled.

"It's a tough schedule," said Peters in spite of the Class A competition. "A majority of the smaller schools we're playing are good basketball teams. Sometimes smaller schools have better ball clubs than if we went 200 miles to play a large school.

Peters admits that criticism has surfaced because of the few Class AA opponents on this year's schedule. "It's not our fault," he said. "We tried to get AA schools but they didn't want to travel. We did contact AA people, but they weren't interested in playing us."

Five Class AA teams have been scheduled for the Prowlers, including Bemidji, Crookston, East Grand Forks and Fergus Falls in the Northwest Conference and Iron Range power Hibbing. The Prowlers play Bemidji, Crookston and East Grand Forks twice. In addition, the Prowlers face Grand Forks Central, a Class AA size school.

Mahnomen, Bagley and Karlstad are expected to be amond the strong Class A teams the Prowlers face this winter.

Tournament time is when the Prowler Class AA status will surface. Thief River Falls, Bemidji, Crookston and East Grand Forks are grouped in Sub Region Four of Region Eight AA. The Sub Region Four winner will advance to the Region Eight AA tournament where teams like defending state champion Little Falls, Moorhead and St. Cloud Apollo will be waiting.

Smith Draws Starting Assignment

Lincoln high school graduate Kent Smith received his first starting role with the University of Nebraska football team Saturday when he filled in for injured All-American candidate Wonder Monds.

Smith, a sophomore monsterback in the Nebraska defensive secondary, was credited with five tackles, broke up two passes and intercepted a pass to help the number two ranked Cornhuskers shutout Kansas State 12-0.

Miscellaneous

+Warren Harrison has been named player-coach of the Warroad Lakers hockey teams for the 1975-76 season, it was announced by Laker manager Cal Marvin. Warroad returns to the Manitoba Eastern Hockey League this season after a year's absence. Warroad, Steinbach, Labroquerie and Transcona make up the league. The Lakers are beginning their 29th consecutive year in amateur hockey.

+Jeff Anderson of Mesabi community college in Virginia, was recently named the MVP in the five-state area Region VIII football circles by NJCAA coaches.

Mike Wiebolt Selected As 1976 Lincoln Football Team Captain

HIGHLIGHT OF Tuesday night's annual Lincoln high school football team banquet was the naming of the 1976 Prowler captain. Jeff Lindquist (left), captain of the 1975 squad, announced that Mike Wiebolt had been selected as the new team leader. Both ball players are quarterback-defensive backs.

Lincoln high school football team officially put the finishing touches on its 1975 season Tuesday as the squad was feted at the 13th annual post-season team banquet in the Lincoln cafeteria.

Several individual awards were presented and the 1976 Prowler captain was named when 1975 team leader announced the junior quarterback-defensive back Mike Wiebolt had been selected next year's captain.

Senior fullback Bryan Olson was named the team's most valuable ball player for the 1975 season. He received the third annual "Ole Olson Award" symbolic of the MVP honor. Terry and Betty Olson, members of the Evonne "Ole Olson" family, presented the award in memory of the long-time Prowler fan.

Other individual awards were presented to senior Terry Sullivan as the team's top offensive and also the top defensive lineman; Olson as the top offensive back; Lindquist as the top defensive back; senior Duane Gonsorowski as the top linebacker; Wiebolt as the team's most improved ball player; and Doug Dallmann as the squad's outstanding sophomore.

Nearly 200 players, parents and guests attended the banquet. Don Olson served as toastmaster for the 13th straight year and long-time Thief River Falls coach Quent Jones was the event's guest speaker.

The father-son response was presented by Pete and Terry Sullivan. Rev. Paul Biegner gave the invocation and benediction. Prowler coach Jim Sims and athletic director Russ Smith presented the awards and letters to the players.

Glen Peters Opens Prowler Basketball Practice Drills

New head coach Glen Peters welcomed a squad of 45 ball players Monday as the Lincoln high school basketball team began its 1975-76 pre-season conditioning drills in the Lincoln gym.

Peters takes over the Thief River Falls basketball program after serving as a Prowler assistant coach for five years. He was named Prowler head coach following the resignation of Lee Swanson at the end of the 1974-75 season. Peters served as head coach at Goodridge 10 years before moving to Thief River Falls. His 1964-65 Huskies were District 31 champions and Region Eight runner-up.

Peters' first Prowler squad includes five seniors, eight juniors and 12 sophomores. The balance of the 45 first day ball players were freshmen. Eight lettermen return from last year's fine 20-5 ball club, but none of the monogram winners were starters on that Region Eight runner-up squad.

"We're definitely inexperienced," reported Peters, pointing out an immediate flaw. We're going to probably take our licks here and there, but as the season goes along we're going to surprise some people. The kids have a lot of pride. I think we'll come along and by tournament time I hope we'll be a respectable ball club."

Heading the list of lettermen are senior co-captains Jeff Neelan, a 6-6 center, and Don Forney, a 5-7 guard.

The other lettermen on hand include 5-10 senior Dave Peterson, 6-3 senior John Larson, 6-2 junior Dave Poole, 5-10 junior Brian Peterson and 5-8 junior Terry Dyrdal.

Peters' entire complement of lettermen comprised his junior varsity team a year ago, earning letters as members of the Prowler tournament squad. However, Neelan and Forney did see some varsity duty throughout the year.

Another problem facing Peters concerns size. "We're small," he admits. "We have one big man (Neelan), but a lot of our opponents will be bigger both height and weight-wise than us."

There are several strong points on the ball club, though, including cat-like quickness in the backcourt where Forney, Dyrdal, Brian Peterson, Dave Peterson and 5-6 junior Murray Semanko will manufacture fast breaks and pressing defenses.

Inside strength is expected to be supplied by Neelan. "He's our big board man," stated Peters who hoped additional rebounding and close-in scoring will come from the likes of Larson, Poole and 6-1 junior Mike Wiebolt.

"We're going to be playing eight or nine kids a game," said Peters. "They're all equal in ability and if we run like we hope to, everybody will need a breather now and then. It's the style we used on JV squad and the kids like it. We have good balance and a majority of the kids are pretty fair shooters. We'll have all eight or nine kids scoring for us, I'm sure."

Peters expects to install a different style of offense into the Prowler scheme of things this winter, using a more conventional two-guard offense instead of a one-guard arrangement used by Swanson.

"We'll be running, trying to fast break if we can get the rebound and the shot," explained the new Prowler coach who said his team is "a better passing ball club than what we've had here in the past." However, if the fast break doesn't produce the desired results, Peters says "we can become a disciplined type ball club."

Prowler defensive sets will vary according to opponents, said Peters. "We'll probably try to press, than fall back into a man-to-man or zone," he noted.

"The kids really have a good attitude and a strong desire to play basketball," offered Peters.

Peters' coaching staff includes Vern Treat who will be the varsity assistant and head sophomore team coach; and Tom O'Brien who will serve as a varsity assistant and head sophomore team coach; and Myron Peterson who will be the head freshman team coach. "It's a good, dedicated coaching staff," stated Peters. "We're enthused and anxious to play some games."

Thief River Falls will start its 1975-76 season with back-to-back home games against Roseau and Kennedy November 25 and December 6, respectively.

TRF Swimmers Win Junior High Meet Thursday

Thief River Falls defeated Fergus Falls 121-65 Thursday in a junior high school girls' swimming meet.

Thief River Falls swimmers won nine of two events, including double event wins by Andrea Lia and Kathy Dillon.

Lia won the 200-yard individual medley in 1:17.3 and took the 50-yard butterfly in 36.5 Dillon captured the 50-yard backstroke in 36.0 and triumphed in the 100-yard freestyle in 1:09.5.

Other Thief River Falls individual winners included Kathy Beito with a 2:24.5 in the 200-yard freestyle; Frankie Kuyath, 41.9 in the 50-yard breaststroke; and Robyn Dallmann, 1:29.4 in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Thief River Falls also won both relay events as the 200-yard medley relay unit of Angie Sinn, Kuyath, Lia and Teresa Ness was clocked in 2:28.9 while the 400-yard freestyle relay squad of Dallmann, Beito, Beth Hallstrom and Dillon turned in a 2:05.9.

LINCOLN HIGH school girls' swimming team will enter post-season tournament competition this weekend when the Prowlers take part in the North Central Region swim meet at the University of Minnesota-Morris pool Friday and Saturday. Members of the Thief River Falls squad include, front row left ot right, Angie Sinn, Shelly Lund, Joan Jury, Beth Nichols, Kari Worner, Johanna Desrocher, Brenda Lund and student managers Patty Sampson and Jodi Ripley; back row, Sue Botner, Kim Wigness, Deb Williams, Joy Grant, Kathy Omdahl, Karla Reed, Jodi Dallman, Georgi Desrosher, Marci Pluth and coach John Hustad.

LHS Swimmers Seek Region Title, State Meet Spots

Lincoln high school girls' swim team will be among the favorites this weekend when the Prowlers take part in the 1975 North Central Region swimming meet at the University of Minnesota-Morris pool.

Twenty teams are expected to take part in the state meet-qualify event. Brainerd, Thief River Falls, Fergus Falls and Moorhead—probably in that order, too—are rated as strong tournament title contenders.

Coach John Hustad's Thief River Falls team enjoyed a brilliant regular season when the Prowlers won eight of nine dual meets, won all three triangulars they participated in and captured championship honors at Fergus Falls in their only invitational meet appearance. The only blemish on the otherwise perfect season was a 105-98 dual meet defeat at the hands of Brainerd, a meet decided by one second in the final race.

"If we get top performances from everybody, and if everybody improves, we'll win it," predicts Hustad. "Basically, it depends on our relay teams. If our relays come through for us we can win," added Hustad who pointed out that first place in the relay races are worth 32 points compared to 28 for second place. Individually, first place is worth 16 points and second place is 13.

The Prowler relay line-ups include an all-freshmen 200-yard medley relay squad of Beth Nichols, Deb Williams, Georgi Desrocher and Kathy Omdahl; along with a more experienced 400-yard freestyle crew of junior Shelly Lund, senior Joy Grant, freshman Marci Pluth and junior Joan Jury.

The top two finishers in each event will advance to the state meet in St. Paul November 21-22. Although the North Central Region team title will be a highly sought commodity, a region championship does not earn an entire team a team state meet berth.

"I think we have a possibility of sending quite a few kids (to state)," pointed out Hustad whose team will number 14 swimmers and two divers, one of the smallest squads at the region meet.

The Prowlers have not taken part in a meet since an October 28 win over Detroit Lakes. But the inactivity has not hindered the team, according to Hustad. "We've been tapering," he noted. "Where we had been swimming 8,000 to 9,000 yards during practice, now we're only doing 2,500 to 3,000 yards. It (tapering off) should be condusive to faster times. The kids should be physically and mentally ready to swim their best times of the year."

The rest of the Prowler region line-up includes Jury, Grant, Pluth and freshman Karla Reed in the 200-yard freestyle; Georgi Desrocher and eighth grader Johanna Desrocher in the 200-yard individual medley; Nichols and senior Kim Wigness in the 50-yard backstroke; Williams, freshman Kari Worner, freshman Angie Sinn and junior Sue Botner in the 50-yard breaststroke; Omdahl and Lund in the 50-yard freestyle; and Georgi Desrocher in the 50-yard butterfly;

Also, seventh grader Brenda Lund and senior Jodi Dallmann in the diving competition; Pluth, Omdahl, Lund and Reed in the 100-yard freestyle; Nichols, Wigness and Sinn in the 100-yard backstroke; Jury and Grant in the 400-yard freestyle; and Williams, Worner, Johanna Desrocher and Botner in the 100-yard breaststroke.

The region event starts with the preliminaries in the diving and 400-yard free style events Friday. All other prelims start at 10 a.m. Saturday, with the finals scheduled to start at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Karlstad Challenges Esko For State Class C Crown

Karlstad will try to put the finishing touches on an outstanding 1975 football season Friday when the Rabbits clash with Esko in the championship game of the Minnesota state Class C football playoffs.

Friday's climatic season finale will be a 7:30 p.m. ball game at Walker.

Both teams enter the contest with sparkling 11-0 season records. The Top of the State champion Karlstad ball club defeated McIntosh-Winger 18-6 in a first round state playoff game last week while Esko racked up an impressive 32-0 triumph over a supposedly very strong Blooming Prairie ball club in a first round state playoff test.

"We know Esko has an excellent ball team," explained Karlstad head coach Phil Johnson as he cited scouting reports on the Eskomos. "They have a good quarterback with a good arm and three very good receivers. But their main attack is on the ground. They have a very fine runningback."

Kevin Lindell is Esko's strong-armed quarterback and Dale Tondryk spearheads the Eskomo running game. Tondryk, a 5-10, 180-pound senior, scored four touchdowns and rushed for 125 yards on 21 carries in last week's rout of Blooming Prairie. Tondryk's touchdowns were all short runs of one, three, four and one yards. Lindell passed to Joe Campbell, one of the Eskomos' talented receivers, for the other Esko touchdown, a play covering 20 yards.

Lindell, Tondryk and compnay use a variety of formations, running mostly with the I or wing-T sets.

In addition to Esko's offensive talents, Karlstad must cope with a strong Eskomo defensive unit that uses a not-too-common six-man front. Johnson admits the six linemen may give his ground-orientated ball club problems.

"We've faced very few six-man fronts," offered Johnson, "and because of our running game, we could have some trouble adjusting." The Rabbit boss pointed out Warroad put six men on the ine of scrimmage in his team's season opener and althought the Rabbits won 14-7, they had problems. "And I would think Esko will be a little better ball club than Warroad," be quipped.

Karlstad played an exceptionally strong defensive game in its win over McIntosh-Winger and more of the same type of hard-hitting play will be needed this week, mentioned Johnson. "I thought we had a good defensive game (Friday), but I would think we'd have to play even a little better if we're going to beat Esko," he said.

The Rabbits may find themselves strapped for offensive production, however, since hard-working fullback Rick Olson is still hobbled by an ankle sprain. Olson, Karlstad's main man on offense with over 1,000 yards rushing for the year, first suffered the injury in the Rabbits' 23-6 Top of the State Conference playoff game win over Roseau two weeks ago. He further aggravated the injury against McIntosh-Winger, leaving the game with 5:56 remaining in the third quarter.

"He (Olson) doesn't look too good yet," admitted Johnson who said 180-pound somphomore Jim Cardinal would fill in for his injured star if he isn't ready to play Friday. Todd Carlson was also abused against the Scots, but he still starred with two touchdowns and a 112-yard rushing effort. He's back to 100 per cent health-wise now, though, reported Johnson.

The appearance of chilly late-fall weather has caused some problems for the Rabbits, but not too many, explained Johnson. "It's getting dark about 5:15 now days and it's cold," be said. "We've been shortningthings up, cutting out some things and just mostly going over the scouting reports."

A new state champion is assured in the Class C playoffs this fall. Battle Lake won the Class C crown in 1974 after back-to-back titles by Gaylord.

New Champions Assured In State Grid Playoffs

Five new champions will be crowned Friday when the Minnesota State High School League state football playoff championship games are played across Minnesota.

Defending 1974 champions have been eliminated in all five MSHSL classes for the fourth annual playoffs. Finals in each class will be played Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Richfield meets Stillwater in the Class AA title game at Parade Stadium in Minneapolis.

St. Peter plays St. Thomas Academy in the Class A finale at the college of St. Thomas in St. Paul.

Karlstad challenges Esko in the Class C title-deciding test at Walker.

Audubon and Ruthton clash in the nine-man championship tilt at Cottonwood.

The ten teams have an accumulative 99-1 won-lost record. Every team is 11-0 going into the championship game except for the 10-1 Audubon ball club.

Past MSHSL state football champions include:

1973—Rochester John Marshall, Class AA; Eveleth, Class A; New Prague, Class B; Gaylord, Class C; and Lake Benton, nine-man.

1975—Rochester John Marshall, Class AA; Alexandria, Class A; New Prague, Class B; Battle Lake, Class C; and Lake Benton, nine-man.

The MSHSL football calsses are divided by average enrollment by conference. The Class AA teams include enrollment of 950 students or more in grades 10-12; Class A enrollment ranges from 400 to 949 students; Class B is 200-399; Class C is 199 and under; and nine-man includes all schools playing nine-man football.

Snowmobile Race Starts Carnival Bicentennial

A St. Paul start on January 19 will signal the official beginning of the 1976 St. Paul Winter carnival bicentennial edition with the 11th anniversary running of the International 500 snowmobile race.

Only one other St. Paul start for the "500" has been held, that in 1974 in honor of Winnipeg's centennial.

The finish in Winnipeg four days later is being planned as a bicentennial exchange between the two cities. "Top state and provincial officials are being invited to officiate at the awards ceremonies," race vice president C. Donald Rieck, 904 west Montana, St. Paul stated, "with added color by top sports personalities. The International 500 snowmobile race has become the "Indy 500" in the snowmobile circuit," Rieck claims. "We intend to compliment this stature by involving personalities who will help us attract broader international attention to the sport of cross country snowmobile competition."

In addition to the reversal in direction, the race will return to four days, after a three-year period of three days competition. "The snow and blizzard conditions last year made the second day-200-mile run too much of a challenge," race director Herb Howe reminisced. Howe, a race crew member for his son in the 1975 race, speaks of the difficulties with an appreciation for both sides of the race, "Race officials and drivers alike did not want to drop the longest leg of the race last year, but running it eliminated 80 per cent of the 236 starters that day. We were all unhappy with that result."

The race route over the new four-day schedule will take it through country roads more attractive to the race. The first days stop is at Alexandria, with overnights the second day at Walker, and the third day at Thief River Falls.

Drivers will face a new challenge this year, that of no machine repair at the end of the second day in Walker. "We have had suggestions over the years to eliminate all repairs throughout the race," Howe notes. "This is a step in that direction. Depending upon the experience, it could lead to further repair reductions. Drivers are permitted a maximum of two hours and two persons to perform machine maintenance at the end of the first and third days. Repair, but not complete replacement of major assemblies, such as the clutch, skid frame and tracks, are allowed."

Economics of entering the race will be enhanced by a new provision this year allowing a driver to update an older stock snowmobile, back to 1972 model years, with engines updated or replaced by latest stock engines or components.

Winnings have been increased from $35,000 to $39,000. Cash awards offer $10,000 for first place, with higher awards offered through 20th place. Daily lap prizes of $500 first, $400 second and $300 third offer an incentive to the driver who may not finish the grueling run.

Drivers must be 18 years of age, with the ladies being urged to join the competition. Dorothy Mercer still holds the best women's finish with third place in 1972.

Complete registration material and entry blanks may be secured by contacting the St. Paul Winter Carnival association, metro square, St. Paul. Canadian residents may contact the Winnipeg convention and visitors bureau, 400-365 Hargrave street, Winnipeg.

Team Arctic Profiles . . .

Bob Elsner Newest Team Arctic Member

(Fourth in a five-part series dealing with individuals involved with the 1975-76 Team Arctic snowmobiling recing team.)

Bob Elsner

An old saying "If you can't beat'em; join 'em" doesn't really apply to 32-year-old Bob Elsner who spent many years as an independent racer before joining Team Arctic team in mid-season last year.

The saying doesn't fit because Elsner was beating the factory teams and had become something of a hero among race followers as a giant killer against factory teams.

"73 was a good year for me to beat the factory," said Elsner. "They knew I was there. I remember taking a Team Arctic driver on a 25-lapper on a mile track. I beat him out of the hole and held the lead on him—to the finish."

Now as a member of Team Arctic, Elsner is optimistic he'll be even better. "It should give me more time to concentrate on racing, and I'll try even harder to live up to the reputation of a factory race team like Arctic," he mentioned.

While an independent, Elsner always ran Arctic machines. Now he's glad to be on a Cat he says, because "it's got to be the trend setter of handling. When you come to a corner, the Cat turns," he said.

He says he was amazed at first to find out how factory machines are set up. "They surprised the heck out of me. On an icy track, my own machine would sit and spin; the factory machine 'bout went out from under me."

Elsner grew up in a snowmobiling hotbed, in the northeast part of Wisconsin. His home town, New London, has produced a disproportionate number of finalists for the Eagle River race.

Elsner is making particular efforts at races like Ironwood, Eagle River and Rhinelander which are nearest to his home territory.

Quiet, friendly and somewhat soft-spoken, clean-cut Bob Elsner, with blond hair, blue eyes and a toothy grin, doesn't strike you as a man with the aggressiveness to be a top snowmobile racer. But when he gets on the track, the instincts—that for so many years helped him compete against snowmobiling's best—take over. Elsner, who at six-feet, 180-pounds is considered among the bigger drivers on the circuit, is known to be tough in the corners and curves. His extra strength and his personal concentration and work on cornering make him good there. "You've got to corner well if you want to win a race" is his race philosophy in a nutshell.

During the off-season he works on blacktopping crews near New London, which is about 40 miles west of Greeen Bay—getting up at 4:30 a.m., home at 8 p.m. The job ends in November when it's too cold for any more work. Consequently, how he does in the race season, when he's not working black topping, determines how much extra income he will have.

At Eagle River last season Elsner got aboard the injured Dave Thompson's 650 machine and walked off with a first. Then on to Syracuse, New York, where he picked up a first and in a 50-lapper on a muddy, muckey track. No one ever challenged him.

"I've done a good job in '72, '73, '74 and last year; now I hope I can do a good job this year," concluded Elsner.

The 1975-76 Team Arctic squad will open its newest season December 13-14 at Ironwood, Mich.

3 Hunting Gear Thefts Reported

A total of $852.25 worth of hunting and sporting equipment were stolen in three incidents reported to the Thief River Falls police department within the last week.

Arnold Ergen of Big Lake and William Cox of Monticello reported Friday that while their locked vehicle was parked in the 300 block of Main Av. N. between 10 and 10:30 p.m., it was entered. Three guns, a pair of binoculars and a quantity of ammunition valued at a total of $690 were taken.

Sunday, Duane Glass of the city said that on Thursday a metal ammo box containing seven boxes of shotgun shells and a hunting knife was taken from his garage at 117 Kneal av. S. His loss was set at $86. Also on Sunday, Bill McGann of 719 Kendall av. S. told police that 15 duck decoys, two goose decoys, four goose decoy heads, 17 lead anchors and two army clothes bags valued at a total of $76.25 were taken from his garage. Some of the items were later recovered in the alley down the block.

In other incidents, Mrs. Art Brown of the city reported that while she was at work at Valley Dairy the billfold was taken out of her purse, which had been left in the back room.

On Wednesday, November 5, it was discovered that a 16-year-old male juvenile had shoplifted a stereo tape player from a local store at an earlier date.

Mrs. Gyro Holen of the city reported Thursday that sometime during the night a stone was thrown through a window in her storm door, causing $5 damage.

Friday at 4:21 a.m., Jerry Thompson of Karlstad was driving south on Merriam avenue when he reached a dead end at Norn street, crossed over the curb and entered a city park, where he struck two steel posts. Damages were estimated at $200 to the Thompson car and $10 to the posts.

The same day, the soil conservation service office reported that during the night five gallons of gas valued at $2.80 was taken from one of the office pickups parked near the building. Sharon Risdahl of the city said that the side of her car had been scratched during the night, causing $25 damage. The scratch was apparently caused by an instrument resembling a knife or a pop can opener.

In one of two incidents reported Sunday, Palmer Sistad of the city reported that his wallet was taken, and then the money was removed and the wallet left on the ground in the Eagles parking lot. Three female juveniles, 11, 11 and 12, are being questioned. A citizen reported seeing two boys break a window on a car parked behind the E & B car wash. Later, two boys, ages 14 and 15, were apprehended and one admitted committing the damage.

Two incidents were reported Monday. Mrs. Halvor Holen of the city told police that two windows were broken in her garage. Three male juveniles, ages 10, 9 and 8, are being questioned. A local store apprehended a male juvenile, 15, for allegedly taking a toy gun valued at $2.77.

Opinions Voiced By Teachers At House Meeting

A large number of teachers, in Minneapolis for the Minnesota federation of teachers (MFT) and the Minnesota education association (MEA) conventions in October, appeared at the Capitol to voice their opinions before the House Labor-Management relations subcommittee.

The teachers were objecting to the public employment labor act of 1971 (PELRA). They said there has been "stalling and foot-dragging" by school boards in negotiations with teachers. The "injustices" of the fair share section of the 1971 law, the binding arbitration aspect of the law (employers automatically get permission for arbitration, while an employer can refuse a request from an employee), and the professional negotiator provisions of the law also came under fire by the educators.

The chairman of the MEA negotiation council told subcommittee members that the number of hours in a school day and the number of school calendar days in a year should be nonegotiable items and not something the school board would set.

The president of the St. Cloud MEA said bargaining processes should include all teachers and that "professional negotiators hired by the school board should be paid the same rate that teachers are paid."

Other officers from various Minnesota MEA organizations throughout the state spoke on the system for filing grievances and the make up of school boards that include those who aren't qualified teachers (administrators, nurses, janitors, cooks, clerical personnel, etc.).

The large audience at the subcommittee hearing applauded the comments of Tom Begich, a teacher from Inver Grove Heights, when he said "Fair share is being used as a union-busting technique."

Gov. Anderson Declares Week For Education

Gov. Wendell R. Anderson has proclaimed November 16-22 American Education week in Minnesota and encourages "local citizen support and active participation in the improvement of education." Theme: "Our Future Is in Our Schools."

The observance is sponsored nationally by the American Legion, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, the U.S. office of education and the National Education association and, in the state, by their state counterparts.

"Public concern about public education," the governor proclaims, "should be not only year-around but should also reach far beyond the local community."

He cites as "well understood" such benefits to the local community as greater tax yield from higher-income residents, lure of business and industry and reduced cost for welfare, unemployment and law enforcement. But, he adds, "we might not realize fully we also have a stake in the quality of education in states and neighborhoods outside our own."

Anderson cites, too, our increasingly mobile society and the effects this has on communities distant from the ones that educate.

"High population mobility and the greater resources of the federal government," he concludes, "argue strongly for increased federal support of education and concerned citizens are looking for ways to carry that message more forcefully to our representatives in Washington."

EVERY DAY YOU WAIT IT'S MONEY THROUGH THE ROOF

Put 6" Fiberglas* Insulation in your attic today. Save $50 to $200 a year on your fuel bills.

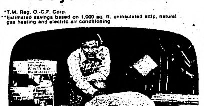
Estimated savings based on 1,000 sq. ft. uninsulated attic, natural gas heating and electric air conditioning



High energy costs, escalating every year. Continuing energy shortages.

Two good reasons why you should take another look at how much insulation you have.

Come in and ask for a free Owens-Corning Fiberglas brochure that tells you how much you can save by adding insulation, whether you heat with gas, electricity or oil.

But remember. Every day you wait it's money through the roof.

The Board of Education of Independent School District No. 564, Pennington County, Thief River Falls, Minnesota will receive sealed bids for 2 or 3 sixty (60) passenger school buses until 2:00 P.M. on November 21, 1975 in the School District Service Center, Zeh Street and South LaBree Avenue, Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

SPECIFICATIONS: Copies of the bid form and specifications are available in the Business Manager's office located in the School District Service Center. Before you buy any Color TV listen to the experts

...those who build them

The people who build the receivers can best testify to their quality.

Hector Castillo, Quality Control General Foreman—"What I'm after is a television that will last me, last the customer and function properly for a long time."

Adler "Andy" Andrew, Plant Supervisor—"They try like heck. We try like heck. And from my experiences being around, even before I became foreman they put a big emphasis on quality here at Zenith."

Betty O'Kelly, Quality Control Inspector—"I always say 'quality goes in before my name goes on, then the Zenith name goes on.' I don't put my seal on anything I don't approve."

Juanita Christopher, Relief Inspector—"But then I look at the set and I say—definitely it's a good set because everybody puts their whole heart and mind in it."

The foregoing statements typify the pride and dedication to quality of the Zenith workers which make it possible for us to say . . . At Zenith, The quality goes in before the name goes on.

...those who service them

PUPPET SHOW

Someone else is pulling the strings. Someone else is speaking behind the scenes. Someone else is making the audience laugh, or even cry a little.

By any chance, does that remind you of yourself? Do you sometimes feel that you are a puppet, not a person? That someone else is putting words in your mouth, calling your plays?

Well, the Church won't stand you on your own two feet and cut the strings. But it will help you find the right kind of scissors . . . to get a new perspective, to reassess life, and yourself . . . to be your own person.

Who, after all, wants to be the star of a Punch and Judy show?

Insurance Hike Additional Cost Of DWI Charge

If the threat of fines, possible imprisonment, or the loss of your driving privilege is not enough to convince you that driving under the influence of alcohol is a losing proposition, perhaps a call to your insurance agent will further enlighten you on the subject. A drunk driving rap can cost you a bundle at premium payment time.

According to Minnesota department of public safety records, there were over 13,000 convictions for driving under the influence of alcohol in the state, last year. Over 2,500 of those convictions were repeat performances; drivers who had already been convicted of the drunk driving charge at least once before in the past. For a very small number of drivers, it was their third, fourth, fifth, sixth or even seventh conviction.

These convictions resulted in a wide variety of legal sanctions for the offenders because the law provides for wide latitude in the treatment of this violation. However, after facing these legal penalties, a good number of these drivers ran head on into another penalty, an economic one, that may have proven even more severe than that which they received in court. The cost of their automobile insurance took a substantial upward leap. At the same time, the limits of their coverage may have gone straight down to the minimum an insurance company can offer.

According to representatives of various insurance agencies, you can expect an approximate 50 per cent increase in your insurance costs if the company runs across an alcohol related conviction on your driving record. If your present insurance company drops you on discovering your alcohol conviction, the consequences can become even more costly as you will have to approach a new insurance company, one which specializes in "questionable risk" policies.

As a "preferred risk" (before your alcohol offense conviction), you received the best rates available on your auto insurance. The alcohol conviction changes all that. Insurance companies know that alcohol is a major factor in about half of all motor vehicle accidents in the U.S. They know that last year in Minnesota, half of the fatally injured drivers who were tested for alcohol after their deaths were found to have been too drunk to drive.

Thus, an alcohol conviciton puts you with a class of driver sho costs money. Cold hard statistics and plain common sense dictate that the alcohol impaired driver is more likely to have an accident which will cause damage to property and injure or kill another human being.

Convicted of an alcohol related driving offense doesn't mean you are an alcoholic, although a good number of drivers in this situation have proven to be problem drinkers. The length of time that you will pay higher insurance rates will depend to a large extent on what you do after you are convicted. If you are convicted of the same offense again in the future, you are going to be buying even more expensive insurance for an even longer time.

However, some insurance companies will be relatively forgiving to the driver who maintains a good driving record for a period of time after his conviction. How long? The offense will remain on your driving record for at least three years. You should probably count on paying higher premiums during that time.

Other insurance companies place great emphasis on the importance of a treatment program for the problem drinker who drives. Undergoing treatment and staying away from liquor can substantially reduce the amount of time that you will be a questionable risk in the eyes of your insurer. That is of course up to each individual company.

Specific cost increases and the amount of time that a person will pay high premiums is not the point at hand however. The point is that it is a needless expense and one that can be avoided. Insurance compnaies don't expect that all policy holders be non-drinkers. But they do expect that their drivers be responsible people who don't drink past the limits of the law. If convicted of driving under the influence, you have informed your insurance company that you have chosen not to accept that responsibility. In turn, the company has little choice but to tell you that that lack of responsibility is going to cost you money.

HELP YOUR CHILDREN MAKE THE GRADE

It happens in every family: you find yourself doing your kid's homework. Education experts say this is NOT the way to help him do better in school.

You can help by letting him "learn" from the world around him.

Children are best in subjects that interest them, and strong interest is often the result of being exposed to new things. Parents of young travelers may find that their children have picked up geography, history, foreign languages and art appreciation from visiting other countries. And they have developed a better understanding of science from seeing the places where great scientists worked.

They can acquire a taste for foreign foods, yet still get American food and an American standard of cleanliness all over the world when they register at one of the 1,700 Holiday Inns, where under-12s can stay in their parents' room free. And children can learn to appreciate foreign customs and cultures.

Let the world be their classroom, and it may make a world of difference in how they do in class.

Imported Palm Oil Poses Threat To MN Farmers

Minnesota farmers were advised recently of a new foreign competing crop by Agriculture commissioner Jon Wefald, who said federal action could be necessary to alleviate an extremely serious threat to farmers and the domestic economy.

He identified the new crisis as the skyrocketing imports of palm oil, a cheaper edible vegetable oil that is rapidly replacing domestic soybean and cottonseed oils in processed food products, including margerines, shortenings, and some pre-fried foods.

Soybeans are Minnesota's second most valuable cash field crop. Last year Minnesota farmers grossed nearly $673-million from the sale of soybeans.

Unrestricted palm oil imports that more than doubled during the past year, exceeded soybean oil exports in July, and which have increased over 600 per cent since 1967, are a major factor in the severe decline in soybean prices, processing industry spokesmen agree. The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently warned that increasing world out-put and trade in palm oil may have a significant effect on the national fats and oils economy.

Commissioner Wefald said that the value of this year's Minnesota soybean crop dropped by over $30-million between the mid-September and mid-October official farm price averages. This October's Minnesota soybean price was at one of the lowest levels in three years at $4.94 per bushel. That was down $3.21 from a year ago and indicated a one-year loss in value of $238 million due to declining prices for this year's eight per cent larger soybean crop.

Palm oil production in Asia and West Africa and U.S. imports are forecast to double again by 1980. It currently enjoys a three to 15 cents per pound lower production cost than soybean oil.

Currently, with one of the largest soybean crops in history just harvested and farm inventories at near-record levels in Minnesota and throughout the Midwest, the processing industry is operating at only 75 per cent of normal capacity.

Palm oil also is severely displacing soybean oil in the world export markets. This July, according to one local industry spokeman, more palm oil was imported than domestic soybean oil was exported.

According to soybean processors, palm oil has already replaced soybean oil in the potato processing industry. In Minnesota alone this represents an annual loss of some $30 million in soybean oil market.

Commissioner Wefald said that several courses of action should be taken by the federal government ot avert the obviously severe economic consequences beyond those being experienced by American agriculture.

No duty has been imposed on palm oil, although practically all foreign nations collect a duty on our exports to them. A fair duty should be immediately imposed.

The President should use the authority he has under the Agricultural act of 1956 to negotiate impert quotas on palm oil with the governments of the foreign suppliers, principally Malaysia and Indonesia.

Congress should fully investigate the economic consequences of the forecast rate of increase in palm oil imports and be prepared to legislate import quotas in the event the President fails or refuses to use his authority.

The Interstate commerce commission must reject as discriminatory the pending application of five railroads; the Southern Pacific, Sante Fe, Burlington Northern, Union Pacific and Western Pacific, to reduce the present freight rate on palm oil imported through the west coast for shipment to the midwest.

The railroads have applied to cut palm oil freight rates by $6.20 per ton or $465 per tank car below the present uniform rates for vegetables oils.

"This is a discriminatory subsidy favoring foreign sellers at the expense of midwest farmers. The timing of the request also is curious, filed September 19, while Congress was debating the desperate financial condition of the nation's railroad system and considering spending billions of taxpayers' dollars to help out that industry," Wefald observed.

He suggested that Congress also should investigate the need for more acute labeling information on agricultural imports, including nutritional values and potential health problems.

Palm oil is classified as a semi-solid fatty oil, a member of the spectrum of animal and vegetable oils that some medical authorities regard as hazardous to the health of consumers who have heart, weight or cholesterol related body chemistry problems.

Cancer Research At 'U': Focus On Cell Membranes

by Louise A. Rollins
U of M News Service

The statistics are alarming—this year cancer will account for a predicted 665,000 new patients. Of these new patients and more than 1 million patients already under treatment, 335,000 will die.

Cancer will strike in two out of every three families, over the years afflicting one out of every four Americans now living.

Cancer is a disease of cells, the tiny building blocks that make up our bodies. There are many different kinds of cells and each kind has a specific role to play in the concert of functions that make up a living being.

In the normal development of a human baby, the cells gradually adopt separate functions according to their position within the body. This gradual emergence of an organized pattern from a seemingly disorganized egg is very carefully regulated in healthy human beings.

Even as we grow into adults and throughout adult life, the pattern of organization maintained by the living cells persists. The loss of this cell regulation results in cancer. The cells do not die. Rather, they begin to grow and divide out of control.

Every cell has a "brain"—called a nucleus—containing the instructions for the functioning of the cell in the chromosomes. Surrounding the cell is an envelope made of fat and protein called the plasma membrane. Between the membrane and the nucleus is the rest of the cell, the cytoplasm.

Cancer appears to be a disease of the cell nucleus because the malignant change is inherited from one cell generation to the next. However, it is a well known principle of cell biology that the activity of the nucleus is under the control of, or acts in concert with, the cytoplasm. Further, it is becoming more and more clear that the cell membrane is not just a passive envelope, but is a dynamic regulator of what meterials enter the cell.

Dr. Ronald Barnett, associate professor of chemistry and laboratory medicine and pathology at the University of Minnesota, said that the cell membrane is like a "switchboard" determining what materials enter and leave the cell.

"In normal cells the cell membranes are very highly organized. In cancer cells, the membrane seems to have lost much of its organization." Thus the "switchboard" becomes scrambled.

Barnett attached a chemical label to some of the fatty material (lipids) of the membranes of normal and cancer cells. He then observed the mobility of the chemical label in both types of cells. His results suggest that the membrane becomes more fluid as cells become cancerous. That is, both lipids and proteins which maintain the organization of the membrane are more free to move.

Barnett and his co-workers have now turned their attention away from whole cells to isolated and purified membranes. They are looking at the activity of a number of important lipids and proteins in normal cells, both slowly dividing and rapidly dividing (analogous to cancer cells.).

One important membrane protein they are studying is an enzyme called adenylate cyclase. Adenylate cyclase produces a small molecule called cyclic adenosine monophosphate, "cAPM" for short.

Researchers at the University of Minnesota, as well as many other scientists, have been exploring the role of "cAMP" in normal and cancer cells.

When some cells become malignant, they change shape, their membrane components change, they acquire increased mobility, and they divide more rapidly. Coincident with these cell changes is a decrease in the amount of intracellular "cAMP".

It may be that the agent that causes the cancer alters the membrane in such a way that "cAMP" production is reduced. Then those normal cell functions dependent on "cAMP" are lost. In several experiments in which cancer cells were treated to elevate their "cAMP", they lost some of their cancer-like properties.

It is clear from the work at the University of Minnesota and elsewhere that the integrity of the membrane is very important for the normal functioning of the cells.

There are many questions yet to be answered before a "cure" for cancer will be found. Cancer is a family of diseases, each one with different characteristics. Finding cures for them all will probably take many more years of research. Yet it is basic research of this kind which ultimately provides the basis for clinical cures.

Drug Abuse: A Changing Scene In The U.S.

Little more than one year ago, in January 1974, there was evidence of a downturn in heroin addiction in the United States, reports the Northwestern mental health center at Crookston.

This was due in part to efforts of federal, state and local agencies in making treatment services available to any addict who wants them, to prevention programs, and to more effective enforcement of drug laws nationwide.

Another factor seemed to be that the supply of heroin had been reduced. The reduction came about partly as a result of negotiations with Turkey which led to that country's decision, recently reversed, to ban cultivation of the opium poppy from which herion is derived.

But now, all the indicators of heroin use and addiction, which had been going down steadily for two or three years prior to fall 1974, have either turned up again or at best are remaining steady.

"We can no longer talk confidently of having turned the corner on heroin addiction," said Dr. Robert L. DuPont, director of the national institute on drug abuse, a part of HEW's alcohol, drug abuse and mental health administration, in telling a Congressional committee that we are still far from winning the war against drugs.

"I think the most important lesson we have learned in the past three years is that drug abuse is a constantly changing phenomenon," Dr. DuPont said.

"For instance, in recent months, we have become aware of a very important phenomenon—an unexpected increase in heroin addiction in some smaller cities. Sample cities where this has occurred are Eugene, Ore., Des Moines, Ia., and Jackson, Miss. This has led us to speculate that drug use radiated out from the major population centers, and can be expected to hit some smaller cities, and eventually perhaps even some rural areas, after a predictable time lag."

All smaller cities, of course, do not have the growing heroin problems that are apparently occurring in some places. "But we do have a genuinely new situation and a worrisome one," Dr. DuPont continued.

Much progress has been made in combating drug abuse. Some 160,000 addicts and drug abusers are being treated in federally funded programs; many thousands of others have already completed treatment. Fifty-five state and territorial drug abuse prevention agencies are now in operation. These local agencies are aided by the national institute on drug abuse which can and does shift federal resources available for prevention and treatment around based on the agencies' reports on treatment needs and other aspects of the drug problem.

Progress is also being made through research and development of new methods of treatment. And the quest is continuing for effective techniques of prevention.

"What is required now," Dr. DuPont concluded, "is continuing vigilance and effort by treatment agencies, law enforcemnt agencies and parents, educators and young people themselves."

Committee Says 'U' Should Get A Radio Network

University of Minnesota Senate committee says the university should develop its own statewide broadcasting capacity rather than complete a proposed merger with Minnesota public radio (MPR).

The Senate committee on educational policy (SCEP) approved the report of its subcommittee recommending that the University acquire a 24-hour FM station in the Twin Cities and work to get WDTH, the newly acquired FM station in Duluth, on the air.

The subcommittee report was made public in August, but was amended by SCEP to encourage the University to develop a statewide radio capability.

SCEP recommended "that the university acquire and utilize additional operational capacity for radio broadcasting in the Twin Cities through the establishment there of a 24-hour a day FM channel and encourage the expansion of such facilities throughout the state."

"This recommendation recognizes that an increase in radio broadcasting facilities throughout the state (as endorsed in the Regents' 1972 policy) would require added staff and other resources; and we believe that such additions deserve high priority in University planning," the SCEP report said.

The report will go to the university senate November 20. If it is approved, the faculty and student government will be on record against the merger proposed late last year by members of the MPR board and the university administration.

Faculty leaders say they have sent the SCEP report to the governor's task force established to study the public-educational radio issue and hope for a university Senate action to strengthen their position before the final task force report is due in early December.

Members of the senate consultative committee and SCEP "commend the committee for its extensive and careful review of the merger issue and urge members of the University community and the broader community to study the findings of the report carefully," said Paul L. Murphy, history professor and chairman of the consultative committee.

The report suggests close cooperation and coordination between MPR and University radio personnel and a continuing joint audience research survey program.

Walter H. Bruning, university vice president for administrative operations, said he agrees with many of the report's recommendations on better cooperation between the university and MPR.

"I think it's a good report, although I do not believe the university should secure a wholly owned FM license," Bruning said in an interview. "We're working with the faculty right now trying to make elements of their report operational."

"I still believe in the merger but we're going to have to take it one step at a time. We're still working on ways to cooperate with Minnesota public radio," he said. "There are too many unknowns and too many programmatic problems that haven't been addressed."

Bruning said that lot of coordination and cooperation can be done without the merger of facilities.

He said he is particularly supportive of the subcommittee's recommendation that a faculty-student policy board be established for university radio station KUOM.

The subcommittee chaired by Maynard C. Reynolds, professor of psychoeducational studies, met over the summer and heard representatives of the many constituencies involved in the merger issue.

The amended report is silent on the proposed student-run FM station for the Twin Cities campus. The earlier report had recommended against a student radio station at this time.

Reynolds discussed the report recently with members of the governor's task force.

WDTH has been off the air since it was purchased by the university last December, pending an agreement between the University and MPR to avoid what high officials of both MPR and the University administration feel would be needless competition.

Sather Attends State Meeting On Tuberculosis

Dr. R.O. Sather, medical director of the Northwest tuberculosis control clinic in Crookston, was in Anoka recently for a statewide conference on the chemotherapy of tuberculosis today. Dr. Sather served on a panel of physicians which presented TB cases and related problems for discussion by the group.

The meeting was sponsored by the Minnesota lung association and the Minnesota department of health for the purpose of bringing together physicians who are actively involved in the diagnosis and treatment of tuberculosis. It was chaired by Dr. Richard Johnson, director of the Hennepin county chest clinic. Mary Vattendahl, program director of the Northwest clinic, also attended the meeting.

The Northwest tuberculosis clinic serves Region 1 of the state of Minnesota including counties of Norman, Pennington, Red Lake, Roseau, Kittson, Marshall and Polk.

For Frantic Fans

Minnesota state high school league bulletin listed an open letter to the "Frantic Fan", written by a writer for the Pennsylvania PA'THLETE. In part, the open letter states the following:

High school athletics were not developed as a sounding board for your immaturity, not developed as a vehicle on which you may "let off steam", rid yourself of "frustrations", etc. This is fine in professional sports, as you are paying a premium price to vent your emotions on athletes who are paid a premium salary to put up with your antics.

However, you token payment to an interscholastic contest, often less than a dollar, entitles you to one thing—the privilege of watching the more talented students of two schools exhibit what they have learned in the athletic classroom.

For the athletic, field, court or diamond is merely an extension of the classroom, and if it were any different there would be little reason for interscholastic athletics to survive.

You would not think of entering a math, history or English classroom, flask on hip, and berate, often curse and physically abuse the math, history or English teacher. Yet, all too frequently you think nothing of harassing players and coaches in their classroom, the athletic classroom.

If, indeed, you are sincerely interested in the continuation of interscholastic athletics, then keep a few basic points in mind.

(1) There is no such thing as a "right" to participate in interscholastic athletics. Math, history, English, physical education and certain other subjects are mandated by the proper authorities, and each student has a "right" to be properly exposed to them.

Not so with interscholastic athletics—they are a "privilege"—and the player or spectator who takes advantage of this "privilege" is expected to conduct himself or herself in a way so that the "privilege" is not rescinded.

(2) Your team does not belong to the community. It belongs to the school, and that school has voluntarily agreed to abide by a certain set of rules, so that all athletes may compete under the same standards. If these rules offend any special interest groups or individuals to the point where they cannot conduct themselves in a rational manner, then, by all means, these persons should direct all their energies toward some other level of athletics, but not the high school level.

(3) Accept the fact that all high school athletes make mistakes. They are not perfect, and never will be. There is compensation though, for these same mistakes make high school athletics exciting and unpredictable.

(4) Remember that your coach is also a teacher. He or she is a teacher first, and coach second, and any time you join the misguided souls in trying to reverse this order, your program is in the first stages of collapse. Remember, no coach, player or administrator wants to see a program fail. In most cases, failure can be attributed to the unrelenting, merciless pressure of you, the fan, who played little or no part in the building of the program. Small wonder that the high school coaching field has the highest turnover of any coaching level.

(5) Make an attempt to learn the rules of the game and then leave the officials alone. Unending time and effort is spent in the training of these officials so that a contest may proceed smoothly. Historically, the spectator who constantly criticizes game officials is ignorant of the rules under which the game is played.

(6) Finally, keep in mind that you are a guest of the school, and that while winning is certainly an admirable goal, victory is hollow if it comes at the expense of morals, ethics and just plain common sense.

A beloved president once said that the world would soon forget his words, but remember the actions of his soldiers.

As the years pass, the score of a contest becomes relatively unimportant, sometimes forgotten. However, your conduct will remain ingrained forever in the minds of those who were most affected.

Will they be proud or ashamed? The choice is yours!!

Keep An Eye On It

Following editorial is from the Roseau Times-Region:

One of the results of overall land-planning brought on by everincreasing government power in England is a new plan which practically kills the citizen control of private land ownership. If one desires to develop a piece of land he must sell it at its old value to a commission which revalues the land at the increased valuation based on its proposed use and then sells it back on the original owner.

This means that the government solidly controls all land, even farmland, and extracts a price which many people cannot afford to pay if they wish to use their land for purposes which will make its value greater. Land planning on the national and state level is gaining ground rapidly in this country . . . and if socialist planners have their way, we can expect some such outrageous plan to be proposed here as is in effect in England.

Americans should keep their eye on land-use planning on the state and national levels and the people who propose such schemes to rip off the taxpayer-landowner.

Domestic Communism

The following was written by William A. Rusher, publisher of William Buckley's conservative magazine, the "National Review":

It has now been more than 27 years since Whittaker Chambers rose in a crowded hearing room on Capitol Hill and identified Alger Hiss as a man he had known as a fellow-member in a Communist cell in Washington in the 1930s. And it is nearly 21 years since the Senate more or less rang down the curtain on the ensuing controversy over communism in government, by censuring Joe McCarthy. No one under 35, therefore, can have any worthwhile personal recollection of those days, and only those 45 or older can claim to have lived through them as adults.

This is probably fortunate in the broadest sense, for it has long been plain that only time would heal the wounds inflicted by that controversy—or, more precisely, that only death would still the impassioned partisans on both sides. In the long run, when comparatively impartial historians can get to work on the whole period, the factual record (which is ample) will assure that the truth is known.

Meanwhile, however, the continuing iron grip of liberal interests on our major media has insured that the upcoming generation of Americans—roughly, anyone born after 1935—hears only one side of the matter. Scarcely a week passes without some ancient Communist being hauled into the public limelight and interviewed sympathetically on the ordeal to which he was subjected during those dreadful days, and how he feels about it now in the mellow light of hindsight.

To one who has lived through those times attentatively, the current retrospective articles frequently rank as minor works of art. The typical story unfolds beneath the umbrella of an unstated assumption that there was, in fact, nothing to those monstrous charges of secret communism, that the whole controversy was invented for purely political purposes by a bunch of evil politicians, most of them named McCarthy.

But never do such articles quite get around to saying, in exactly so many words, that the interviewee in truth was not a Communist. Usually, indeed, there is a good deal of simple fact-suppression in this important area. Quite often the person in question was identified, under oath, as a secret Communist party member by persons who had been in the party with him.

Yet the article about him mentions none of this: we merely get the "victim's" sonorous (and self-serving) remarks about it all—or rather about so much of it as he cares to duscuss.

So it is important for young Americans to know and remember the truth, which is: That almost every serious student of the subject would now concede that during the 1930s and '40s members of the Communist party worked their way quietly into important positions in government, in labor, in Hollywood, and elsewhere. And it is useful to remember, too, that these were the days of Joseph Stalin's heyday. The Americans who silently served communism in those years were, quite simply, serving him.

Beyond the certainties, moreover, there is one likelihood that should also be borne in mind: the likelihood that the decade of the 1960s, which spawned so many noisy zealots, also spawned a great many zealots far less noisy. Someday, I predict, we will discover that while thousands of overheated dissidents were rioting and burning buildinbs and dodging the draft, thousands of others—equally alienated, but temperamentally less demonstrative and more determined—were quietly signing up with the really deadly enemies of this country. Where they are now, and what they are doing, remains, as the familiar saying goes, to be seen.

FIGHTING INFLATION

NUCLEAR POWER SAFE AND LOW COST

ELECTRICITY

An increasing number of scientists agree that with nuclear power plants taking the place of oil and gas power plants we will no longer be burning our energy candle at both ends.

Nuclear power means lower electricity bills for the American consumer as experience with the 55 nuclear power plants already operating has proved.

Nuclear power is not only the cheapest way to generate electricity, it is also safe because reactor safety is carefully designed into nuclear power plants from the start.

The excellent safety record of commercial nuclear power plants has not happened by accident. It has resulted from the painstaking effort which accompanies the design, construction and operation of nuclear power plants.

notes from the governor

Wendell R. Anderson

Last week I suggested some steps that individual Minnesotans can do to conserve energy and reduce their energy bills this winter.

Since then, Minnesota's 3M Company has publicly released a proposal to provide federal tax incentives to business and industry for major energy conservation.

The proposal, which was prepared at the request of the Minnesota Energy Agency, does not have any official endorsement. It is intended to be submitted to Congress after other businesses, agencies, and the public have an opportunity to respond to it.

This is an interesting proposal for two reasons. First, it claims that industry and business in the the United States could save up to 30 per cent of their current energy usage by making operations more energy-efficient. Second, it proposes federal tax incentives to encourage business and industry to make alterations of existing plants and equipment for energy-saving purposes.

Since business and industry consume about 46 per cent of our national energy usage, a 30 per cent saving would be a substantial step toward U.S. independence from foreign oil sources. The potential savings could be as great as 5.5 million barrels of oil per day. If all of that oil could be subtracted from our imports, it would mean a reduction of $27 billion annually in what we currently pay other countries for their oil.

The plan suggests that business and industry receive a tax credit of 25 per cent for the plant and equipment changes made to achieve that conservation, and suggests that full depreciation of the investment be allowed the first year. The tax savings would thus pay for some of the costs of the changes immediately, with the remainder to be recovered through energy savings.

The maximum cost of such changes over a five-year period are estimated to be $60 billion. Under the 3M proposal, the companies would receive $45 billion in tax credits and depreciation allowances, compared to the $36 billion that they would receive under current laws. No doubt that this proposed increase in benefits will be the subject of intense discussion, as it should be.

The 3M proposal helps to illustrate the immense cost, to individuals, consumers and business and industry alike, of the tremendous energy waste that has characterized the American life style.

And it focuses on two real issues — whether to emphasize conservation or the development of more energy resources, as well as whether there should be special government incentives to achieve either of these objectives.

Chronobiology Is Study Of Rhythms Of Body Functions

by Mike Finley
U of M Writer

We may think we're resting. We may think we aren't doing anything at all. But inside us, our bodily functions are constantly accelerating and slowing down.

Some of these rhythmic changes have the duration of a heartbeat. Some occur daily, some monthly, some seasonally and some yearly. A lifetime itself may be thought of as a single, complete biorhythm.

Our bodies—and our minds—are part of an interlocking ecology of rhythms. The study of these rhythms, the time structures in living things, is called chronobiology.

In 1962, Michel Siffre, a French cave scientist, descended to the bottom of a cave and spent two months there, apart from the day-night cycle of us surfacedwellers. While he was there he undertook a series of experiments—counting to 120 on various occasions, for instance, in order to test his judgment of time underground. He shaved every day, mailing his beard clippings to the University of Minnesota. He tried to estimate how much time he was spending awake and how much asleep.

The results of Siffre's experiments were measured by Franz Halberg, director of the university's chronobiology laboratories, among others. And the results were peculiar. Siffre's counting, which must have seemed quite regular to him at the time, was full of speed-ups and slow-downs. His beard growth seemed to have rhythms as well. And when Siffre finally emerged from the cave after 60 days, he thought he'd been there for only 35 days.

Much chronobiological research is conducted along the lines of Siffre's and Halberg's pioneering work. Often the challenge of an experiment is to remove the subject from the continually changing environment. That is an impossible task, but until it is accomplished the data collected can never square with traditionally held scientific concepts of control.

The question almost seems to be: Where can you go where nothing changes? How can you be certain, even at the bottom of a deep, dark cave, that the light cue isn't still having its effect? That the tidal rhythms caused by the moon have been nullified? That geomagnetic forces, sunspots, or mysterious subatomic "ether tides" aren't threatening the constancy of the experiment?

For that matter, if all these forces are always in play, what validity do the millions of experiments conducted in laboratories for the past few centuries have?

Halberg sometimes says that if he could have any wish, he would cajole NASA into helping him put laboratory mice on the moon. Once away from the earth's schedule, how would the animals behave? Would they cling to their old rhythms, even though in a lunar environment, the rhythms were no longer relevant? Would they resynchronize themselves to match the new rhythms? Or would they desynchronize themselves, their rhythms deteriorating into a chaos of unmatched and free-running waves? That's what Halberg would like to find out—an indulgence he admits would be expensive.

Erhard Haus, a university professor of laboratory medicine and pathology and the head of St. Paul-Ramsey hospital's main laboratory, has conducted many studies on circadian and other rhythms, especially in glands. While in medical school, he once spent 18 days in the basement of Cambridge state hospital, shut off from normal light cues. His rhythms began immediately to drift away from their usual regularity. He studied for his Ph. D. preliminaries down there, while his friends outside worried about him.

When he reemerged, he had somehow lost two days—he'd counted 16 but had actually endured 18. "I didn't care," Haus said. "And I did fine on my exams"

Haus recalled one outstanding study by a former president of the Endocrinological society, who collected his urine several times a day for 16 years. Analysis of his data revealed the existence of not only a daily cycle, but a weekly cycle, a 17-to-21-day cycle, a 30-day cycle, and yearly cycle as well.

Our rhythms coincide with the astronomical rhythms of the planet we occupy, Haus concluded. But do we have "weekly" rhythms to match our social schedules, or have we designed our society and our calendar to coincide with the rhytms of our bodies?

Haus described it as one of the classic questions of chronobiology: Which came first, the week or the body—the social custom or the generic physique?

Different chronobiologists have different hunches. Otto Schmitt of the department of electrical engineering went to considerable effort to learn whether human beings can detect significant magnetic fields. He concluded that they cannot. Frank Barnwell of the department of zoology has studied the effects of magnetic fields and gravity on homing pigeons and sea coral. He suspects that external factors do play a large role in regulating behavior.

Subscribers to Franz Halberg's beliefs about rhythms, however, find the notion of totally external control—fields, tides, light—anathema. Halberg believes that almost all rhythms have an internal operation. The rhythms arise from within the body, and they are synchronized from without.

Halberg points to the cave experiments, and to other kinds of experiments, to back up this doctrine. The 24-hour cycle is indeed altered by removing the external cues—by going underground, or by blinding laboratory mice. But the cycle still hovers around 24 hours, whether it speeds up to 22 or 23 hours or slows down to 25 hours. The idea of a body-day is very ingrained. It is, in Halberg's book at least, a part of the body itself.

Given that there is a great variety of rhythms, two questions suggest themselves. What good are rhythms? And what good is studying rhythms? One question at a time.

Andrew Ahlgren of the Center for educational development is the clearinghouse for all public chronobiological information on the University of Minnesota campus. Probably the best explanation he's heard of the reason for rhythms is that of Philip Regal, a curator at the Bell museum of natural history and a herpetologist (a specialist in reptiles).

Why is it, Regal asks, that the early bird gets up in time to catch the worm? Because if it didn't, it would lose out to birds that were early risers. Biorhythms, then, give us a better chance of succeeding in the world.

Biorhythms give living beings three evolutionary advantages, according to Regal: economy, anticipation and navigation.

There is a biorhythm of alertness. Some people believe they are morning people. If they had to be alert all day, they would be exhausted. But if an organism is alert only when it has to be, it conserves its own energy. Thus, economy.

Something inside that early bird wakes him up in time to get that worm. If he didn't wake up until noon, the worms would already have been eaten. Therefore, anticipation.

Certain kinds of fish can tell time. Imagine that you have a fish tank and a lightbulb burning over it. If you put fish food on one side of the tank, the fish will go to it. If you feed the fish later that same day, the fish will go to a defferent part of the tank to find the food. To the fish, the lightbulb is the sun. Just like people, the fish expect the sun to be in a different place at suppertime than it was at breakfast. Biorhythms help the fish locate food. Hence, navigation.

What good is knowing about biorhythms? Andrew Ahlgren can answer this question as well as anyone.

"I have a favorite reason for studying chronobiology," he said. "It's interesting to know about rhythms just as it's interesting to know that the sun is just another star, or that people are animals. It helps you put together a picture of what the world is like."

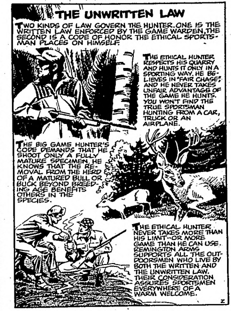
Chronobiology also has many practical benefits to offer. Certain studies have indicated that shiftwork runs counter to most people's internal clockwork. Therefore, people who change shifts—people with dangerous jobs, like firemen, jet pilots, and policemen—have one strike against them from the start. These studies may result in a reforming of current shiftwork practices.

Perhaps employers and schools will schedule work and class time according to the individual's peak-efficiency hours. There is already an elementary school in California for young "owls" who perform best late in the day.

Chronobiology does seem to be on the verge of greater acceptance within the scientific community. But Halberg complains that it is still very slow in coming, that foundations prefer to invest their money in more traditional kinds of studies.

The Sportsman's Corner

by Clark Webster, Remington Wild Life Expert



THE UNWRITTEN LAW
TWO KINDS OF LAW GOVERN THE HUNTER. ONE IS THE WRITTEN LAW ENFORCED BY THE GAME WARDEN, THE SECOND IS A CODE OF HONOR THE ETHICAL SPORTSMAN PLACES ON HIMSELF.
THE ETHICAL HUNTER RESPECTS HIS QUARRY AND HUNTS IT ONLY IN A SPORTING WAY. HE BELIEVES IN "FAIR CHASE", AND HE NEVER TAKES UNFAIR ADVANTAGE OF THE GAME HE HUNTS. YOU WON'T FIND THE TRUE SPORTSMAN HUNTING FROM A CAR, TRUCK OR AN AIRPLANE.
THE BIG GAME HUNTER'S CODE DEMANDS THAT HE SHOOT ONLY A FULLY MATURE SPECIMEN. HE KNOWS THAT THE REMOVAL FROM THE HERD OF A MATURED BULL OR BUCK BEYOND BREEDING AGE BENEFITS OTHERS IN THE SPECIES.
THE ETHICAL HUNTER NEVER TAKES MORE THAN HIS LIMIT—OR MORE GAME THAN HE CAN USE. REMINGTON ARMS SUPPORTS ALL THE OUTDOORSMEN WHO LIVE BY BOTH THE WRITTEN AND THE UNWRITTEN LAW. THEIR CONSIDERATION ASSURES SPORTSMEN EVERYWHERE OF A WARM WELCOME.

IRS Explains 5% Tax Credit On New Homes

Publication that answers the most asked questions about the five per cent tax credit for the purchase of a new principal residence is now available free from the Internal Revenue service.

Besides presenting questions and answers on the credit, IRS publication 591, "Tax Credit for the New Home Buyer", reflects the recent change in the law which allows certain homes that were originally ineligible to now qualify a buyer for the credit.

According to the IRS booklet, new home buyers are entitled to a credit against their federal income tax equal to five per cent of the purchase price of a new principal residence, up to a maximum of $2,000. Married persons filing separate returns are limited to $1,000 on each return.

The pamphlet further explains that to qualify for the credit, a home must be new and be the buyer's principal residence. The taxpayer must attach to his return a certification, signed by the seller, that construction of the home began before March 26, 1975, and that the purchase price is the lowest at which the residence has been offered for sale after Feb. 28, 1975. A suggested certification is contained in the publication.

According to the IRS, the principal residence must be acquired and occupied after March 12, 1975, and before Jan. 1, 1977. The residence must be purchased under a binding contract entered into before Jan. 1, 1976, except in the case of self-construction.

The publication explains that legislation enacted June 30 changed the lowest-price requirement for the credit. Taxpayers who purchased residences that did not qualify because of the original lowest-price provision should check with the seller to determine whether the residence now qualifies and, if so, obtain the necessary certification.

For more information or a copy of the pamphlet, call the IRS, toll-free at 800-652-9062.

Warn Forgotten Child Diseases Could Reappear

Were you there for the diphtheria epidemic of the early 1900's, or the whooping cough epidemic of 1934? Or do you remember the tragic effects of the 1964 rubella epidemic or the polio years from 1946 to 1956?

All of these diseases were wiped out of the childhood experience in the USA years ago by mass immunization programs.

In fact, things have been going so well for so long we've even forgotten to worry about them. As a result, a large number of children today have not received proper immunization.

Pediatricians and others working in health care are worried about a recurrence of these diseases in large numbers.

Twenty-three groups are sponsoring an immunization action program to remind doctors to remind you all through the year to check your child's immunization record, particularly if he's between the ages of one and four, to be sure he is protected against polio, measles, rubella, mumps, diphtheria, pertussis (whooping cough) and tetanus.

The uncontrolled spread of these diseases could mean death, crippling, brain deterioration or damage to your child's nervous system.

Immunizations are a "must" to keep your child safe until he reaches adulthood. At the ages of two, four and six months a child should receive DTP and TOPV (DTP includes diphtheria and tetanus toxoids combined with pertussis vaccine, and TOPV is trivalent oral polio-virus vaccine); at one year, measles, tuberculin test, rubella and mumps; one and one half years and four to six years, DTP and TOPV; and 14 to 16 years, Td (a combined tetanus and diphtheria toxoid, adult type, for older children), and thereafter every 10 years.

For clean, minor wounds, your child does not need a tetanus booster dose if he was immunized within the last 10 years.

For contaminated wounds, your child should have a booster if he has not had one for more than five years.

In 1974, a national survey indicated that approximately 5.3 million, or nearly half, of the 13.2 million one to four-year-old children are unprotected against either polio, measles, rubella, diphtheria, pertussis or tetanus. An estimated eight million children in this same age group are unprotected against mumps.

Take ummunization action now to protect your children and the children around them.

A handy folder and immunization record card are available to help you keep your child's immunizations up-to-date.

The folder was produced by the Minnesota department of health with the approval of the State medical association.

To get free copies for all of the children in your family, write to the Public relations office, children's hospital, 311 pleasant ave., St. Paul, MN 55102. Be sure to state the number of folders needed.

Legends Of Jazz Concert Follows Dixieland Style

by Robert Davidson

Sunday evening the sounds of Bourbon Street flowed through the Lincoln high school auditorium in a spirited performance by the Legends of Jazz. Oldtime Dixieland jazz, 1915 style, was performed by true oldtimers who were playing jazz when jazz was spelled and pronounced "jass".

These were men who listened to and played with the likes of Buddy Bolden, Leon Rappola, and later Joe "King" Oliver, men who were true jazz pioneers. The program opened with the old standard "Hundustan" which easily lends itself to the Dixieland style. Later, Alton Purnell, the pianist, sang the vocal of "Body and Soul"—very well indeed—while Louis Nelson displayed the sweet and quiet side of his trombone styles on that great melody.

Not all of the songs played were part of the historic tradition of Dixieland jazz, but no program of this king of music would be complete without such numbers as "Bourbon Street Parade" and "Milenberg Joys" which were done in good taste at lively tempos. The final number "Just a Closer Walk With Thee" was sung by the drummer at very slow tempo (as at a jazz musician's funeral); with the last three choruses picked up to a lively Dixieland bounce.

The trombone man, Louis Nelson played the kind of trombone you might hear on the streets of New Orleans, a very racous style which could suddenly give way to a very soft lyrical style. Andrew Blakely, 77, played fine lusty trumpet and sounded like a man half his age. Bassman Edward Garland who, at 91, when it's a miracle to be alive to say nothing of plucking a string bass at a torrid tempo, played in surprisingly good tune. He sometimes searched for the notes, but always managed to find them.

Clarinet man Joe Darensbourg, 69, played and sang in the old 1915 New Orleans style and—amazing as it seems for a clarinetist—apparently without teeth. Alton Purnell, 64, the pianoman also played with the fire and zest of a man half his age. Barry Martyn, 34, the drummer-leader was the only kid in the bunch. He played like a man who loves only Dixieland jazz.

At first one was amazed to hear men of their ages play so well, and later forgot about their ages entirely because of their fine musicianship. These men not only played well, but their fine showmanship and general appeal (they obviously thoroughly enjoyed themselves) caused the audience to get involved and participate with rhythmic hand clapping. It was a completely enjoyable program.

BSU Bald Eagle Center Offers Weaving Class

The folk art of weaving will be among the classes offered soon at the Bald Eagle outdoor learning center, located ten miles east of Cass Lake. Part of the Spectrums in change program, a course on making wooden toys will also be held on the November 15-17 dates. "Carving Decoys" is to be taught November 21-23.

In each instance, one credit of Art 496 or 896 may be completed for a cost of $27 to an undergraduate or $29.50 for the graduate student. This includes meals and lodging for the weekend. Enrollment is limited and registration must be received at least ten days prior to the beginning of the class.

The Partners in learning series is another educational offering designed for adults and children working as a team. On November 15-17, "Outdoor Learning in social studies" will be the topic, while on November 21-23 mathematics will be the subject. A section for elementary teachers and a section for people teaching in these specific areas will be provided. One credit of Outdoor education 496 or 896 may be completed.

The cost including tuition, meals and lodging is $27 for undergraduate and $29.50 for graduate credit. As in the folkways classes, registration must be received at least ten days prior to the beginning of the course. Those ages 10-15 may participate in the Partners in learning classes for a $16 fee and those under ten may pay $14; both do not include tuition.

Enrollment may be completed by filling out a registration form and sending a check for the correct amount to Program coordinator, fall programs, Bald Eagle outdoor learning center, Cass Lake, MN 56633.

An extension of BSU, the three million dollar Bald Eagle center is located in the Chippewa national forest. Its existance is the realization of an effort to explore trends in education, philosophy and the sciences, while emphasizing the value and potential of the individual.

Trail, Minnesota got its name from the Indian trail used by the Chippewa tribes from Cass Lake, Bemidji and Red Lake on their way to the prairies to hunt buffalo. Back in 1906 a store and creamery were built along the trail, when the railroad came through in 1910, business places sprang up quickly and the town was moved to its present site. Within a few years, Trail had a hotel, a restaurant, two hardware stores, three grocery stores, two lumber yards, a doctor, butcher shop, bank, livery barn, creamery, barbershop, pool hall, telephone office and jewelry shop. Three churches, St. Charles Catholic, Sand Valley and Mount Olive had their beginnings between 1897 and 1906. The first school was built in 1897. The teacher Mr. Schneider divided his time between Gully and Trail. A consolidated school was erected in Trail in 1913 and a high school added in 1915. In the early days the blacksmith shop was an important place in any town. Herman Eglund and Pete Johnson were Trail's first blacksmiths doing welding, sharpening plow lays and keeping the horses in the community shed. Welding was done, in those days by heating and pounding the pieces together.

Martin Hoveisrud was the first mail carrier using a horse and buggy and later on a Model T Ford. Joney Wichterman was the first postmaster and in addition to operating a store and post office he had the first telephone exchange in Trail and also owned the first car, a Reo.

In 1960 Trail celebrated its Golden Jubilee with a barbecue, German band, old style threshing bee, a large parade, a dance, and fireworks. The Golden Jubilee queen was Kathy Aaknes Bakke, who lives in South Milwaukee, Wis. She reigned until 1970 when her sister Paulette Aaknes Milan of Milwaukee took the reign. She still reigns over Trail as queen.

They also had the Indian pow-pow as a tribute to the early days of its existence.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Halum of Bemidji were visitors at the Albert Aaknes home on Thursday evening.

Albert Aaknes called on Ole and Paul Jorgenson on Thursday afternoon.

"WHERE THE SIGN FLASHES TIME AND TEMPERATURE TWENTY-FOUR HOURS A DAY"

Autorhythmology Is Monitoring Body's Change Each Day

University of Minnesota Writer

Remember Rudy Valle's "My Time is Your Time?" According to that song, the affection that the singing organism bore for the organism-being-sung-to would somehow erase all temporal differences between the two.

From a chronobiological standpoint, Rudy Vallee was wrong. Affection, while a potent force in its own way, is not an effective synchronizer. Time is never the same for any two people, at least not biologically.

"There are two kinds of time," said Otto Schmitt, professor of biophysics, bio-engineering, and electrical engineering at the University of Minnesota. "There is physics time and there is biology time. While we are accustomed to thinking that time is just one single, static thing, it is actually two separate entities, running more or less together."

You know how it is: Perhaps you remember attending an afternoon lecture. It seemed interminable at the time. When it was over you were amazed that only an hour had elapsed. And everyone has mornings that, for one reason or another, seem to "go quickly."

Schmitt calls the one concept biotime and the other astrotime. Astrotime is fixed, while biotime speeds up and slows down, running in episodes roughly parallel to astrotime.

Neither time, Schmitt asserts, is "real" or "right." Both exist only in our minds, both are human creations. The one happens to be mathematically modeled, the other biologically modeled.

Schmitt is a troubleshooter. He takes on projects that cross the lines between different scientific disciplines—he has doctoral degrees in physicis, mathematics and biology—and tries to resolve the differences. Some of his most interesting projects have involved reconciling mathematical technology—computers—with biological problems.

"Mathematics might turn out to be a great bio-unifying tool," Schmitt said. "Compare the human body to a telephone circuit. The circuit is terribly complex. No single human could monitor all the calls passing through it at any given moment. But computers do it with no difficulty.

"The human body is also complex, much more complex in fact. No one by himself can watch all his own functions. But a computer could—one that understood biological principles, anyway," he said. There is a new science that monitors the body. It is called autorhythmometry. Schmitt is talking about developing computers for home health-monitoring.

"Perhaps the worst thing that can befall a body is something I call control disease. No single part of the body stops functioning or 'goes bad' in a person with control disease. Instead, there is a general organizational foul-up, a malad-ministration, if you will, within the body's government. We have to realize that body activities occur at all levels of this government. Some of them are at the county, or cellular, level. Others are at the state and federal, or organ and nervous system, levels."

At present, Schmitt said, we have tests for everything that can go wrong with a body, on a part-by-part system. But there aren't any tests for the whole body, the administrative level.

Autorhythmometry will try and get at that elusive "federal" level of body government. "Every household may someday have a health computer," Schmitte said. "After all, who will be able to afford to have a plumber or an electrician or a doctor come to the house except in an emergency? It will be no different from the average person now owning a power spray-painter."

In Schmitt's vision of the future, we may well learn to pay as close attention to our bodies as we currently do to our cars. "After all," he said, "we wouldn't dream of running a car without gas. Fuel is something we understand pretty well. We eat well enough. But how many of us let our oil get old in our systems, how many of us let our bodies rust away, how many of us let our engines go on 'missing' long after tune-up time?"

Otto Schmitt's idea of autorhythmometry is for every home to have a computer. How would such a unit work?

Let's say you go for your annual medical check-up. The doctor takes your pulse rate, your blood pressure and your oral temperature. He then writes the figures onto your records. These figures are the index of your health for the past year and a standard for the coming year.

But there's something wrong with those figures. Before you're dressed and ready to leave the examining room, your body fuctions are already changing. They speed up or slow down. Your temperature may increase by a fraction of a degree. Your systolic and diastolic blood-pressure levels may begin to diverge, however slightly.

Your body is never still while you're alive. And the changes it undergoes are not always slight. One example is something called odd-hour hypertension. A person with this problem could have his blood pressure measured every morning and show no signs of danger. Then he might suffer a crippling stroke and no one would understand. Had his pressure been taken every afternoon, the stroke might have been averted.

Schmitt's household mini-computer would theoretically detect such sudden changes.

Andrew Ahlgren of the university's center for educational development has spent several years now in what may be described as the "selling of chronobiology." This has involved endeavors as scholarly as publication of journal articles, and other, less academic, duties. One of the latter had him as a special guest on a pair of Mike Douglas television programs.

In between all the TV commercials and splicing, Ahlgren managed to explain the basics of chronobiology and also to show off an autorhythmometry kit: a Squeezer bulb that measures grip strength, a blood-pressure gauge, a stopwatch, a thermometer and other measuring gismos.

Also on the show were Gladys Knight and the Pips. They took self-measurements off and on for four days and had some graphs of their data shown on the air by Ahlgren. The self-measurement sessions seemed to provide islands of serenity in the performers' hectic schedules—they insisted on keeping their kits when the week was over.

One of the three Pips, Bubba by name, turned to Ahlgren and said, "Well, if your rhythms are always changing, how can the doctor take your blood pressure just once and go by that?"

Right on, Bubba. That really is the point.

Most often onions are used as a flavor ingredient only. But not so with mild Idaho-Oregon Sweet Spanish onions. Creole Onions show off their ability to be turned into an exciting side dish.

Thick slices of onion are baked until tender in a tomato-wine sauce. Bits of crisp bacon and green pepper are sprinkled over the top as a flavor accent. Delicious with fried chicken, meat loaf or roast beef.

In addition to their delicate flavor, Idaho-Oregon Sweet Spanish onions have an enormous size, giving them the title Gentle Giant. They also have excellent keeping qualities. For storage a cool dry place with good circulation is recommended. Cut onions should be wrapped and refrigerated; if chopped, they can be frozen.

Look for Idaho-Oregon Sweet Spanish onions from September through March.

Creole Onions

- 2 large Idaho-Oregon Sweet Spanish onions
- Salt and pepper
- 2 slices bacon
- ¼ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- ½ cup tomato puree
- ¼ cup dry white wine
- ¼ cup water
- ¼ teaspoon thyme

Peel and slice onions into ½-inch slices. Arrange in buttered shallow baking dish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Fry bacon until crisp. Drain and crumble. Add green pepper and garlic to bacon drippings. Saute a few minutes. Combine tomato puree, wine, water and thyme. Pour over onions. Sprinkle with crumbled bacon and green pepper. Bake, covered, at 375 degrees 30 to 35 minutes, or until tender. Baste occasionally with pan liquid. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Libraries Should Have Freedom To Read Rights

Freedom to read should be as protected as other First Amendment rights and librarians must take an active role in insuring that freedom, according to David K. Berninghausen, director of the University of Minnesota library school.

"Preserving the freedom to read is and will continue to be a responsibility for librarians," Berninghausen has written in "The Flight From Reason," a book published recently by the American library association (ALA).

Berninghausen's book, which is written primarily for librarians, advocates the protection of the right to read under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which guarantees the freedoms of speech and press.

In his book, Berninghausen draws on case studies of library censorship and his personal experience as a professor in the Library school and chairman of the ALA's committee on intellectual freedom to illustrate the relationship of the First Amendment to libraries.

There are threats to individual freedom from both the political left and political right, he said. In the library field, he said, "it seems to be beyond the understanding of ardent, partisan advocates of worthy causes that politicization destroys the integrity of the profession.

"It is especially harmful to the principle of intellectual freedom for the users of libraries if a public library becomes an advocate for one side of a dispute, rather than a provider of information on all sides," he said.

Berninghausen wrote that librarians must be careful to select books in such a way as to avoid infringing on other people's right to read.

"Every book has both supporters and opponents, and when librarians approve the contents of one book and reject those of another, they destroy any hope of maintaining intellectual freedom," he said.

He also feels that librarians should have the same responsibilities and enjoy the same freedoms as news people and college and university professors and that all three groups face the same threats.

Therefore, he said, the freedom to read should be guarded through institutionalized protection for librarians, similar to the academic freedom provided to college and university professors.

"The proper approach to ideas for the liberal university—and the liberal library—is to make accessible a variety of viewpoints so that all citizens may examine and criticize, modify, approve, or reject them as guides to action, but never to ban them," he said.

Berninghausen said he hopes the ALA will develop the professional muscle that the American association of university professors (AAUP) can bring to bear on an institution which has violated a faculty member's academic freedom.

To achieve such a "reputation for integrity and 'clout,'" the ALA must investigate cases carefully before declaring a position for or against a library in the case of a dismissal. "In time, ALA's influence may even approach that of the AAUP," he said.

Ask Comments On Proposed Bike Carrier Change

Bicyclists, motorists and even everyday pedestrians may be interested in responding to a recently released request for consumer comment on a proposed rule concerning the design and mounting of bicycle carriers used on the exterior of motor vehicles, the Minnesota department of public safety advised recently.

In an advance notice of proposed rule making, the National highway traffic safety administration (NHTSA) has requested comment from consumers on a rule which would apply to bicycle carriers used on passenger cars, trucks and buses with a gross vehicle weight of 10,000 pounds or less. It would require that all mounting hardware for the units be installed in a manner that would minimize any hazards to pedestrians; sharp edges be reduced or eliminated on the carriers; projection of any supporting arms for the bicycle be limited to a specified distance when the carrier is not in use, and the units be labeled to warn against installation on the front of vehicles.

Reflecting a growing consumer concern over the hazards which these units pose for pedestrians, NHTSA is requesting any pertinent information or comment concerning injury or property damage resulting from use of these units, safety and design hazards encountered, or economic data relative to sales or costs of the carriers.

Interested persons are invited to submit their comments on the proposal by December 2, to: Docket section, National highway traffic safety administration, room 5108, 400 seventh st., SW, Washington, D.C. 20590.

Radial Tires No Substitute For Snow Tires

Contrary to the impression of many motorists, radial tires are no substitute for snow tires for winter driving, according to new findings released by the national safety council.

Reporting on tests conducted by the council's committee on winter driving hazards at Stevens Point, Wis., Ray Prince, the committee secretary, said, "These tests show that snow tires provide more traction over a reasonably wide range of snow-covered road conditions that conventional radial tires that do not have a snow tread."

He added that the range of performance of the radial tires was quite broad, in some cases exceeding but in some cases even poorer than some conventional highway tires.

In these tests, seven brands of radial tires were compared with bias belted highway tires and bias belted snow tires. Both peak and spinning traction were measured with the vehicle standing still and also moving forward at a speed of five miles per hour. Snow conditions ranged from approximately one inch of medium packed snow to as much as eight inches of loose snow.

In an earlier test program, according to Prince, the committee found that radial tires offered no advantage over conventional tires in either stopping, traction or cornering performance on glare ice.

Prince said that the current snow tests were undertaken to help municipalities decide whether to modify their snow ordinances to permit radial tires in lieu of snow tires.

"Considering the outcome of these tests and earlier findings by the Council, it is obvious that conventional radial tires (without a snow tread) are not a substitute for snow tires," he concluded. "Motorists should still be advised to use snow tires for mild-to-medium snow and ice conditions and to use reinforced tire chains for severe snow and ice conditions."

Summarizing the council's previous test findings, Prince said that conventional snow tires provide only a small improvement in pulling ability on glare ice although they produce half again as much pulling ability as regular tires in loosely packed snow. Studded tires are appreciably more effective on ice, giving about three times the pull of regular tires. And reinforced tire chains provide from four to seven times the pulling ability or regular tires on snow and ice.

Long before people of foreign origin ever reached central Minnesota, groups of eastern Dakota Indians lived near the shores of Lake Mille Lacs in what is now Kathio state park. Two settlements there, known now as the Cooper and Wilford sites, have been under investigation by University of Minnesota archaeolical field crews for nearly 10 years.

Summers of digging are punctuated by winters of analysis, as University researchers attempt to reconstruct the flavor of life near Mille Lacs between 1300 and 1750.

Excavating ancient villages is slow and precise since too much haste might muddle the evidence. Bits of pottery, chips of stone tools, and animal bones tell their stories based partly on how deeply they are buried and what is found near them.

Janet Spector, assistant professor of archaeology at the University of Minnesota, explained the metholds used by archaeological detectives in the state park at Mille Lacs and similar sites.

"First, the site itself has to be found," she said. An archaeologist may excavate a few small samples of soil along an ordinary lakeshore or river area, for example, and discover and elk bone near a fish bone near a bit of bowl. Or a farmer may turn up dozens of pieces of pottery in his plow furrows and alert the Minnesota Historical society or Elden Johnson, state archaeologist and professor of anthropology at the University of Minnesota.

According to Spector, once an expedition of a dozen or so archaeologists and students arrives, the site is measured and mapped off into excavation units with a surveyor's transit and tape measure. Every square is numbered so that all objects and soil samples from it can be catalogued.

The archaeologist begins by digging down below the 30-centimeter area that has been disturbed by pioneer and modern plows. He then strips the soil down, a two-centimeter layer at a time, with trowel.

Working painstakingly slow and watching carefully, he may unearth clues. If there is a large, sloping discoloration of the soil, it could be a pit used for food storage at one time. If seeds and bones are found inside, the likelihood increases.

One summer's digging generally uncovers a whole year's worth of material for the archaeologist to study. Each soil sample is sluiced in a container with water. This "flotation" brings light materials, such as bits of snail shells and tiny seeds or bones, to the surface. Heavier materials, such as pebbles, will sink to the bottom.

The seeds and bones can be compared and identified under a microscope. Larger artifacts, such as animal bones and charcoal, are compared to materials from other sites in the Great Lakes region, to form a wider picture of the technology, economy, subsistence and lifestyle of the pre-historic or early historic inhabitants.

Determining the original use of an artifact can be extremely difficult, Spector said. A tiny stone bear head found at Mille Lacs is still a mystery. Items that are probably clues to ancient games have been found deep in the ground elsewhere: an unusual ball, some dice. . .

Much has been learned so far at the Mille Lacs sites. The most recent evidence, bits of guns and metal knives, dates from the 18th and 19th centuries and points to trade between residents of the area and Europeans.

Nearby and somewhat deeper, storage pits for processing wild rice, impressions of decayed posts used to support large wooden structures, fish bones, vegetable storage pits, fruit and other wild food, elk bones, bits of pottery, scrapers and many stone tool fragments have been found.

Researchers now hope to find out much more from the information they've accumulated including the reasons why the village was abandoned, what changes occurred during that time period in the use of resources, the economy and ceremonies, whether the site was used year round or just seasonally, and how many people lived at the lakeshore settlement.

The native Americans living at Mille Lacs some 200 to 650 years ago collected and hunted food, built and maintained their structures, protected themselves and engaged in ritual. Archaeologists will gradually be able to detail these activities. But they will not be able to guess what they said as they pounded the wild rice or what they joked about around the fire. Some of the mystery will remain.

BSU Chemical Ed Dep't. Receives ACS Approval

Chemical education department at Bemidji State university recently received approval by the American chemical society (ACS). According to Dr. Kenneth Lundberg, associate professor of chemistry at BSU, the professional organization serves as an accrediting agency "to certify our operation meets their standards."

"Most of the private schools in Minnesota have received ACS approval. To the best of my knowledge, the only other state universities are Southwest, Mankato and Moorhead," Lundberg said.

To evaluate BSU's standing against the specific criteria, evaluation and investigation was made into all aspects of the academic program.

The Committee on professional training, ACS, determined the department is well developed and "incorporates some interesting educational innovations." Examples noted are the close guidance and counseling the faculty offers, the high quality of these educators, and the enthusiasm directed towards the unique scientific approaches.

The report states: "The 'open' laboratory concept which your program encompasses and the flexibility which the student thus enjoys to select his own experiments, has attractive features from an educational point of view."

Besides being included in an official ACS listing, Bemidji State university can add a new dimension to a student's future. Those who major in chemistry and fulfill the society's requirements for professional education, are eligible for admission as members of the society following graduation.

"An ACS rating may aid a student from the standpoint of seeking employment. One can utilize the society's placement opportunities or use it as a reference in a pre-professional program," Dr. Lundberg explained.

"Being approved by the American chemical society is simply a yardstick to measure our program to that of other schools. For some time now we've been operating under their guidelines."

VIEWPOINT

THE REGULATORY MORASS

President Ford has chosen as a theme for his election campaign deregulation in a number of American industries. He has called for a reversal of the decades-old trend toward Federal regulation of key industries and national resources.

REGULATIONS

This appealing proposal aims at reducing regulation and its concomitant bureaucratic paperwork in 10 existing Federal agencies — a move overburdened tax payers can only applaud. The President's philosophy in this regard, should also be adopted by the Congress on the matter of proposed legislation.

One such bill, before Congress now, deals with further regulation of actual and potentially toxic substances. During the past five years Congress has built a regulatory cocoon around industry to protect the environment through the passage of ten major laws, two not yet implemented, and countless minor laws.

An unfortunate by-product has been still another bureaucratic logjam.

Because this new law is designed to supplement rather than override the 27 existing laws aimed at protecting the environment, it would also create an interagency committee to decide just who handles the paperwork. Stated simply, the effect would be to give more control to Washington, with more monies added to the Federal budget.

Chemical producers, who would be most directly affected, certainly, favor protecting the environment but feel this could best be achieved under existing regulations and within the natural marketplace. They correctly point out that for many years they have been testing successfully for toxicity, independent of any regulation.

Allowing the chemical industry to continue its own approach to social responsibility through self-regulation would be an interesting test of the President's proposal and one which Congress should be called upon to consider.

Subcommittee Checks On State Fair Operation

The Minnesota State Fair is always fun, educational, and unfortunately, expensive. Or is it?.

That's something the State Fair Investigating subcommittee of general legislation and veteran's affairs hopes to find out.

The Minnesota House of Representatives organized the subcommittee to answer a number of complaints representatives have been getting about fair costs. Complaints center mostly around this year's 50 cent increase in adult admissions and the prices fairgoers paid once inside the fairgrounds.

Secretary-general manager of the fair board, John Libby, appearing before the subcommittee, compared the cost for a family with two children attending the fair to what that same family would pay to attend a Vikings game. The fair, he said, would cost $7 including parking; the football game, $39.50.

Libby said, if people "shopped around a little," they could bring down the prices at some of the fair concessions. And, according to Libby, you can still get a soft drink for 10 cents, a hamburger for 30, and all the milk you can drink for 20. Members of the committee voiced concern over the lack of competition among operators of concession stands with one individual owning 18 ice cream stands. Another, has 13 "pronto pup" stands, the fair beer gardens, an interest in both the "Space Needle" and the "Skyride," formerly operated the fair's carousel, and produces signs and displays fair exhibitors purchase.

Rep. Stan Fudro (D-Mpls.) said "There's no reason in the world why somebody should have 20 stands when 750 are applying." He asked Libby why some people could have so many concessions when others can't get one.

Libby said this sort of situation began in the '30's and '40's as an incentive to interest the then hard-to-get exhibitors. He told the committee it's difficult to tell people who have invested a great deal of money in a business that they cannot come back the next year. Some of the people Libby referred to have buildings and equipment on the fairgrounds all year long.

The lawmakers brought out that the state fair is free from hiring standards, such as civil service. There are 10 members on the fair board responsible for hiring department supervisors, who hire the personnel for their departments. This gives each board member the power or influence over the employment of up to 300 people. Committee members cited the lack of regulations governing the hiring of relatives and the fact that there is no mandatory retirement age.

Sarna said, "There should be some system where everybody has an equal opportunity."

All Tax Exempt Plated Vehicles Must Be Marked

All motor vehicles owned and used by state, county, municipal, or other governmental units which bear tax exempt license plates must have the name of the department or public subdivision printed on both sides.

"We are restating the requirements of this Minnesota statute," Minnesota department of public safety commissioner Edward G. Novak said, "because we are receiving reports of many cars not properly identified.

"The statute is specific in this requirement," Novak continued, "specifying that the name of the department or subdivision be plainly printed on both sides in letters not less than 2½ inches high, one inch wide, and of a ¾ inch stroke. Also, the color of the lettering must be in marked contrast with that of the vehicle, and the printing must be on the vehicle itself and not on a removable plate or placard.

"The only exemption to this provision is for state hospitals or institutions for the mentally ill or retarded which may have one vehicle without the identification.

"From the number of reports we have received, it is possible that some administrators and local officials may not be aware of this statuge. I recommend that all administrators check their vehicles to ensure compliance with the statutes."

1776: American Revolution Seen As Conservative

The American revolution was really a conservative movement to protect colonial vested interests against economic threats from the British crown, and the innovative social changes begun by the revolution were not planned by the Founding Fathers.

That's the view of the Revolution being accepted by a growing number of American historians 200 years after the event.

These and other issues related to the American Revolution are discussed in essays by 11 historians in "The American Revolution: A Heritage of Change," published by the James Ford Bell library at the University of Minnesota.

Land and the pursuit of wealth attracted many of the settlers to the New World in the first place.

"Attainable land was the attraction that brought the greatest number of settlers to America, in the colonial period and later," according to Louis B. Wright, historical consultant for the National geographic society.

"Land insured independence, and even the small landowner was fierce in his defense of his rights, whether from marauding Indians or from what he considered interfering neighbors, unjust traders or tax-gatherers," Wright wrote. "For three centuries and more the rural landowner, the American farmer, symbolized the acme of freedom and independence."

By the time of the rebellion in the colonies, a landed aristocracy had been developed with enough time and money to become a community of professional politicians who had an interest in independence, wrote Jack P. Greene, history professor at Johns Hopkins university.

"The emergence of the colonial elites with a solid nucleus of men with a primary and professional commitment to politics thus led to a significant differentiation and specialization of roles within the colonial political systems and represented an important example of political development in the most technical sense of that term," Greene said.

Property became the major claim to power of the social elite, he wrote. The view of the small landowner became the ideal of the Jeffersonian vision of the new nation.

The relationship between public and private interests developed in opposite directions in England and the colonies, according to Michael Kammen, history professor at Cornell university. In America, public interest became subordinated to private enterprise.

"Economic individualism, self-help, and competitiveness had been ideologically unleashed," Kammen said.

"In 1609 private enterprise was supposed to be subordinate to the common weal," he said. "By 1809 the public sector—government—sought to be minimal and subordinate: dismantle the military, cut spending, be unobtrusive. In sum, do only those things that no one else can or wants to do."

With the dignity attached to the common farmer came an insistence on fuller political participation, according to Pauline Maier, a St. Paul native and history teacher at the University of Massachusetts in Boston.

"Social change of this sort," she wrote, "was unanticipated by many revolutionary leaders of 1776, who had struggled over a decade to effect an orderly revolution."

A "Cultural revolution" was necessary to train people for the new government through public schools and universal education, she wrote. Maier said other reforms were also undertaken, such as the liberalization of legal codes and a beginning of the abolition of slavery.

"Yet many causes that failed, or that produced only limited results in the earliest years of the republic, were revived in the nineteenth century," Maier said.

More than social and cultural issues were involved in the revolution. The economics of independence were encouraged by British actions that inhibited the free marketing begun by colonial merchants, wrote Staughton Lynd, of the Institute for policy studies.

"When the military struggle was over and political independence was assured, the struggle for economic independence continued in resistence to what then became British neocolonialism," Lynd wrote.

Lynd said the revolution was the result of two general movements: the struggle for economic sovereignty and the contest for political independence and home-rule.

Urge Caution When Driving In The Dark

The end of daylight savings time and the decreasing hours of daylight bring increased hazards for pedestrians and motorists, according to the Minnesota safety council, pointing out that driving in the dark, on a mile-for-mile basis, is more than twice as dangerous as daylight driving.

The night mileage death rate in the U.S. is 7.4 fatalities per 100 million vehicle miles travelled compared with 2.9 fatalities during daytime hours, according to the council.

Traffic congestion and haste contribute to increased fatality tolls on weekdays during the early morning and evening rush hours. To help in self-protection as well as the protection of others, the council urges motorists to use their headlights during morning and evening dusk periods.

In addition to observing extra caution in areas where children are going to school and people are going to work, the council advises, that a clean windshield, inside and out, is an important safety factor.

Pedestrians are also urged to be especially cautious and to protect themselves by wearing light colored outer garments and using retro-reflective markings for additional visibility.

HHH Concerned Of Tree Losses In Great Plains

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey recently warned that the windbreak of trees stretching from North Dakota to the Texas panhandle, planted 40 years ago, is "threatened."

"Existing trees are dying," he told the Senate. "Badley needed renovation and replanting of trees are not being undertaken. Worse than this, some corporations and farmers are bulldozing the trees to increase the amount of available cropland.

"The deterioration of the shelterbreaks cannot continue without an adverse effect. The Great Plains will be damaged because of wind erosion. Valuable croplands will be lost. Both people and the environment will suffer.

"This is a serious problem. For those of us who lived in the Great Plains in the 1930's, the wind and dust storms are still remembered. They were seared into our bodies and souls."

To restore this windbreak, Senator Humphrey has urged secretary of agriculture Earl Butz to give "priority consideration" to an "action program" by his department to maintain the trees.

In a letter to the secretary, dated October 20, the Minnesota Senator indicated that "new legislation is not needed to combat the problem of deteriorating shelterbreaks.

"Existing authorities of the ASCS (agricultural stabilization and conservation service), SCS (soil conservation service) and the extension service could be used in a cost-sharing windbreak renovation program," Humphrey wrote. "This would not be costly, but it would provide significant dividends."

Humphrey pointed out that the General accounting office has reported that from November 1973 to May 1974, 3.8 million acres in ten Great Plain states were damaged by wind erosion.

While "some people feel that other conservation practices are sufficient in fighting soil erosion," Humphrey maintained in his letter to the secretary that "windbreaks are still needed to supplement these practices.

"They remain a permanent protection during periods of drought when most other conservation practices become less effective."

Minnesota Milk Gross Income, Production Drop

Minnesota's depressed dairy industry continues caught in a severe cost-price squeeze and leads the nation in lost production and lost gross income from milk sales, agriculture commissioner Jon Wefald said recently.

September milk production was the lowest in the nation and Minnesota's lowest monthly output in 10 years, 490 million gallons.

Milk production for the first nine months of 1975 is the state's lowest in 20 years, 6,008 million gallons.

During the first nine months this year, estimated gross cash receipts from Minnesota milk marketings are down nearly $34.5 million compared to the same period last year.

Prices paid Minnesota dairy farmers are just recovering back to early 1974 levels, after a disastrous 20 per cent cut due to federal import and price policies. But current prices are still far short of parity, or offsetting the ever-record costs of production. Farmers averaged 70.4 cents a gallon for milk sold in September.

Even declining feed grain prices, alarming for cash crop farmers, haven't helped alleviate the cost-price pressure appreciable for the dairy industry.

Average production for Minnesota milk cows in September was only 56 gallons per cow, the lowest level in 10 years, although the current cow inventory, intensively culled to the highest volume and quality prodicers, is capable of producing upward of 40 per cent more milk than the state's dairy herd of 1965.

Minnesota's September milk production was 47.5 million gallons below that month last year, and the nine month total is 310 million gallons short of the same 1974 period.

In 1965, the previous low year for January-September milk production in Minnesota, 5,969 million gallons of milk was produced by 1,378,000 cows. That is 501,000 or 36 per cent more cows than were in Minnesota's September inventory this year, 877,000, just 2,000 above the all-time low set this July.

Minnesota still ranks fourth, behind Wisconsin, California and New York in milk production but has dropped from second to third behind Wisconsin and New York in total milk cows.

Sign Vandalism Costs Minnesota Motorists Plenty

Highway sign vandalism costs Minnesota motorists more than $111,200 annually, state highway commissioner Frank D. Marzitelli said.

More than 7,200 signs were stolen or damaged by paint and bullet holes during the last year. Replacement costs vary from $60 to $90 per sign.

Highway sign vandalism costs for the northwestern Minnesota area with maintenance offices at Bemidji and Crookston, totaled $11,607 for the replacement of 661 signs.

Bullet holes, including buckshot, caused the greatest damage: 4,480 signs costing $62,400 to repair or replace.

Sign theft can cause more than inconvenience to motorists. It can cost lives. Recently, a stop sign was removed at a Dane county, Wis., intersection where a woman subsequently died in a two-car crash. "Stealing a road sign is not just a prank (in this case)," a Wisconsin highway official remarked "It amounted to murder."

Disfiguring signs with paint is another dangerous practice particularly when speed limit signs are altered. Paint has also been used to create population changes and to modify sign spelling.

Commissioner Marzitelli reminds Minnesotans that sign vandalism is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $300 and-or a jail sentence of up to 90 days.

American Press Freedoms Have Uneasy History

A free and responsible press is a major safeguard against government and social corruption, but the history of press freedoms in the United States has been an uneasy one, according to Paul L. Murphy, history professor at the University of Minnesota.

Murphy wrote about the history of American freedoms and civil rights in "Certain Unalienable Rights," a 16-page pamphlet for the American issues forum, a national Bicentennial program.

Long before Richard Nixon put reporters on his "enemies list," journalists faced public and political pressures for conformity, Murphy said.

"To the old Federalist party of the late 1790's, written criticism of the government, during an international crisis and period of undeclared war with France, was, in itself, dangerous, and Anti-Federalist newspaper editors served jail terms, when they attempted to change that policy," he said.

In the following century, abolitionist editors were subject to attacks by proslavery advocates and one editor, Elijah Lovejoy, was hanged by an angry mob after he continued to oppose slavery despite the destruction of his printing shop. "President Andrew Jackson sought to obtain legislation keeping abolitionist material out of the mail," Murphy said.

During the Civil War, President Abraham Lincoln called for self-censorship by the press to protect the national security which depended upon the dissemination of the proper kind of information to carry out the war effort, Murphy said.

President Theodore Roosevelt tried to sue newspapers that were critical of his purchase of the Panama canal and President Woodrow Wilson signed a Sedition act making it illegal to publish any "disloyal, profane, scurrilous, or abusive language" about the U.S. government. Wilson also established a censorship board during World War I.

Freedom of the press was begun by early American leaders seeking ways to limit the authority of the British king, Murphy said. Colonists developed rights of man as determined by natural law.

The first famous case for freedom of the press was the trial of John Peter Zenger, who was brought to trial in 1732 for his criticism of the crown, Murphy said.

Zenger's attorney, Andrew Hamilton, argued one of the basic free press principles. "Here," the attorney said, "the issue is not simply one of a poor printer. The cause is liberty. . .the liberty both of exposing and opposing arbitrary power by speaking and writing the truth."

"The variation in press freedom issues, from the days of John Peter Zenger, and the question of whether truth should be a defense in a libel action, to the days of Daniel Ellsberg, and whether the government can stop the New York Times from printing the Pentagon papers, has been far greater than in the free speech and free assembly area," Murphy said.

Without free speech, however, society would stagnate, he said. "Certainly strong evidence exists, through American history, that silencing the agitator is counterproductive," Murphy said.

"Few Americans would now deny that critics of our Viet Nam policy pointed out serious and fatal flaws in that policy, and ultimately forced government leaders to rethink that policy. Just as over 160 years earlier, critics of the government's belligerent policies toward France in 1798 and 1799, led President John Adams to disengage the country from hostilities with that nation, and led other thoughtful Americans to urge new and permissible limits of legitimate criticism of the government," Murphy said.

Murphy said the nation still faces the dilemma of "unequal access to basic freedoms" by women and minority groups. Their calls for equality have led to demands for equal treatment by welfare recipients, prisoners, mental patients, gays, and children.

"De Tocqueville, in the 1830s recognized the dilemma of an egalitarian society which also encourages individualism. The resolution of this dilemma continues to confront the nation," Murphy wrote.

American Church Music Draws On African Roots

American church music draws on a rich heritage of soul music, much of which had its roots in Africa, according to Johannes Riedel, professor of music and American studies at the University of Minnesota.

Riedel presents his views of the impact of Afro-American music on every facet of American music in "Soul Music Black and White: The Influence of Black Music on the Churches," which has been published by a Minneapolis publishing company.

"The nationwide popularity of black soul music is undeniable," Riedel wrote. "It can be heard on the top 40s, in the suburbs as well as the ghettos, and on midwestern campuses as well as in Harlem's Apollo theatre."

A number of recent developments have raised interest in the black influence on American music, Riedel said. Among these are the renewed interest in the ragtime sound of Scott Joplin and the academic contributions of university Afro-American studies departments.

Most Americans are aware that black musicians created jazz, he said. "Few of us are aware that for the non-American, American music means an embodiment of rhythm, of the beat. Rhythm has decisively shaped the nature of American popular music in the 20th Century, the fox trot, the boogie woogie, swing and rock," he said.

Americans followed European musical fashions until the current century when the rhythmic qualities of American popular music became popular throughout the world, he said.

"Through the beat of black music and its application in popular music, America in the 20th century became a world power in popular music for the first time in her history.

"The music of black America has had its impact on every facet of American music—church, folk, classical and especially popular music," Riedel said. His book discusses the nature of black music and how it developed in the American environment.

Church music was primarily influenced by two factors, Riedel said, the transfer of the Protestant French and English music and the transfer of African music to the new world.

The transfer of the Puritan music was voluntary, while the transfer of African music which came with the slaves was a less smooth transition, he said.

"However, once it had found its own Afro-American expression in the form of the spiritual, blues, and gospel songs, it left its mark on American church music in the form of its concepts of rhythm and beat," Riedel said.

Because of slavery, blacks were forced to give up many of their African musical instruments and had to adapt their music to singing froms and the white man's religion. One result of the blend of African and European music was the American spiritual, Riedel said.

"Blacks concentrated on the Christian church as a 'legal' place to use up the emotional and spiritual reservoir dammed up by the experience of slavery," Riedel said. "Through shouts shouts, often the formal ring shout ceremony, blacks maintained their African heritage under the guise of a white man's religion."

White as well as black soul music has influenced church music, he said. Many Jewish, Catholic, Lutheran, Quaker, Polish Socinians and Moravian groups have contributed to America church music.

A number of religious groups such as the Amish, Mennonites and Shakers, provide examples of "white soulful music" which show "music's capacity to transport man beyond his physical environment."

"The reality of soul music," Riedel said, "knows no limits of race or time."

Construction crews and heavy equipment are back on the University of Minnesota's Minneapolis campus this fall. The broad, grassy area on the south side of Folwell hall is only a memory, replaced by a large excavation that marks the site of the new east bank bookstore and admissions and records facility.

The design for the structure is representative of recent significant achievements in architecture and energy conservation. For one thing, 95 per cent of the three-level, 83,000-square-foot building will be underground, resulting in energy savings of nearly 25 per cent.

The $4.2 million facility will consolidate the two east bank bookstores now located in Nicholson hall and main engineering. According to James L. Duffy, director of University bookstores, the building will provide students with easy access to a central location and the additional space will allow a greater variety of books and educational materials.

The design of the facility will also improve the internal working structure of the University's admissions and records offices, thus improving the offices' ability to handle and process student records, according to John M. Fisher, associate director of admissions and records.

Although the building is below ground level, a series of terraced planters will act as louvers to screen out intense sun while allowing an exterior view and penetration of daylight to all levels. Interior lighting will be provided by movable fixtures that are not only cost-efficient, but may be shifted and arranged to respond to future space reassignment.

Also included in the building's design is a heat-recovery system that converts exhaust from the building into heat.

The facility will take advantage of the constant underground temperature, eliminating the heat-loss factor characteristic of above-ground buildings, which are subject to variable temperatures.

Because the building will incorporate a number of new ideas in energy conservation, a series of instruments will be placed in the walls of the structure to monitor and measure the amount of energy saved.

Thomas P. Bligh, assistant professor of geo-engineering, will supervise a research project of measure the energy performance of the facility when it becomes operational next fall. Under a national science foundation grant, Bligh and his colleagues will monitor the soil temperatures around the walls of the building to determine where and how incoming energy is distributed. The results amy well help pave the way for future underground construction as energy-conservation awareness grows.

Another major advantage of the facility will be its unobtrusive presence on campus. A diagonal pedestrian concourse on the ground level will form an attractive green-shrubbed plaza and preserve the visual integrity of the campus.

Although nearly a year from completion, the building has already received national recognition for its design. The project's chief architect, Myers and Bennett architectural studio, Minneapolis, received commendation during Progressive Architecture magazine's twenty-second annual awards ceremony, held last January in New York.

MAKING FAMILY LIFE MORE FUN

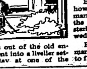
PUT LOVE BACK IN YOUR LIFE

One of the main reasons husbands and wives don't get along as well as they might, many marriage counselors agree, is that they don't fight enough.

A half hour of healthy shouting back and forth, once the source of disagreement has been uncovered, can eliminate weeks of sulking.

Other faults that are marital virtues? Be nosy. Don't search your partner's pockets, but be wise about his or her work and interests. Discuss things freely.

Be frivolous. Cultivate some fun things to share: reading, gardening, dancing. Travel is an especially good awakener for dulling marriages, since it takes both partners out of the old environment into a livelier setting. Stay at one of the world's 1,700 Holiday Inns and you will find an escape from cooking, cleaning and caring for the kids, and, possibly, you'll find each other. The Inns offer intimate dining rooms, free parking, swimming pools, room service and nightclub attractions.



Be vain! Tell the world how lucky you are to have married your mate. Boast of the outstanding virtues and sterling qualities you wedded.

Put the fun back in your marriage, even if you have to fight to do it.

Twenty-two met at the center Oct. 30. It was our fun day, so we just sat and talked about the queer things happening in the world today. Later we played games until all had won two prizes.

Lavern Swan of Hallock visited our center and gave a talk on the hot meal program for Senior citizens. Dinners served at the school will be lowered in price. Come and give it a try. There must be more taking part in this project ot have it continue here. The few that have taken part so far, are not enough. If we don't show more interest in this program, we may in time lose our right to engage in future programs. What could be allotted to us, will be given to others where more interest is shown.

Other visitors Thursday were Dagny Bergren, Shari Henrickson, Vanette Lefrooth, Jim, Kline Jr., Kevin and Lenny.

Thanks to Mrs. Lois Lindstrom of New Lennex, Ill. for the $5 donation. She enclosed with the payment for a quilt she purchased from the center recently.

MEA President Speaks At Teacher Rally Here

Mixing some homespun philosophy and personal experiences with a general message on the importance of educators in education, president Don Hill of the Minnesota Education association spoke Wednesday afternoon at a teachers' rally held in the Lincoln high school cafeteria.

Hill's presentation, followed by a standing ovation, was preceded by comments by several local teachers active in the bargaining effort for teacher contracts. James Cuppett, president of the Thief River Falls Education association, opened the meeting. Speakers included Clarice Gallither, former chairperson of the negotiating council; Patrick Klemisch, member of the council; and Don Hejlik, current chairman of the negotiating group.

The speakers expressed a desire to continue negotiations rather than seek arbitration; criticized the board of education for its methods in negotiations and lack of good faith in bargaining; complained about shabby treatment given teachers in the bargaining process; and reaffirmed commitment to seek and secure whatever the teachers of the district wanted by way of a settlement.

The assemblage—which included teachers from Goodridge and Red Lake Falls who appeared in support of the local organization—carried a number of signs and responded with "yes" or "no" in unison to reactions elicited by the speakers.

Hill told the teachers that they have too often been making speeches to each other rather than the public. Noting that there had been over 200 editorials written following his comments at the state MEA convention, he said he "wears those editorials like a merit badge". And he speculated that one of the reasons the media takes exception to his comments on the monetary value of teachers is because members of the media are themselves underpaid.

Hill made four points which he said he and the MEA were fighting for: (1) To establish and protect the sovereignty of individual classrooms; (2) uphold the dignity of the profession; (3) right to bargain for contracts; and (4) improve quality of education by lowering class size.

Regarding the first point, he emphasized his belief that teachers are already accountable and that teaching is a self-culling profession. "I don't believe there are bad teachers," he said, adding that there are plenty of former teachers on the outside who culled themselves out of the ranks of teachers.

Supporting the dignity of the profession, the MEA president said that teachers should not be compelled to shoulder the responsibility for all of the nation's social ills. Indicating that educators have had much to do with scientific advancement, including the space program, Hill expressed the opinion that "we don't take the credit, why should we take the blame?"

He indicated a dislike for the increasing use of paraprofessionals in education, particularly as they are being employed for classroom use. "I don't want my kids taught by a volunteer," he said, "I believe in our profession as a profession."

On the third point, Hill said that the law of Minnesota now states that teachers have the responsibility to bargain. He added that no school board in the state had given grievance procedures, bargaining rights or other teacher rights without being compelled to do so by legislative acts supported by teachers.

Improvement of education by lowering class size is one of his major goals during his term as president of the association, Hill said. He stated he is not convinced that taxpayers have reached the limit of their ability to pay for education.

A procedure of putting 30 youngsters in a classroom and letting the cream rise to the top is not the best way to serve children, he said. "I'm afraid we miss too many," he added. "I'm not saying a little bit of failure isn't good for someone, but a whole lot of failure is no good for anyone."

Hill said he believed in local control of education and that the taxpayers should be able to run the school district. A parent should be able to call a teacher and effect change, he said. "I hope the time never comes when all the money for education comes from the state or federal government and a teacher can tell a dissatisfied parent to go see his or her congressman."

The speaker said he would like to see no teacher strikes in

Select Panel Arbitrators

Panel of three arbitrators was selected Friday to effect a settlement between the Thief River Falls board of education and teachers' negotiating council. The three-member panel was selected from a list of seven provided by the state public employment relations board.

Don Hejlik, chairman of the negotiating council, and Dr. William Corliss, superintendent of schools, followed the designated procedure of alternately striking out names of potential arbitrators until three remained. Two of those were then stricken to create a convenor for the panel.

Selected as the convenor was John W. Boyer Jr., professor of business administration at the University of Minnesota, Duluth. He was a member of the arbitration panel which settled the local teacher contract situation here a year ago. Boyer has been a labor relations consultant in the private sector and has experience in arbitration.

Also named to the panel was William J. Lloyd, St. Paul, director of bar admissions for the state board of law examiners. He was professor of law at Syracuse university college of law from 1938 to 1966 and has been a labor arbitrator since 1943.

Third panel member is Richard P. O'Connell, St. Paul, a professional labor arbitrator. He was formerly employed by the labor relations board and is now active in general arbitration in Iowa and Minnesota. His efforts have been directed in the areas of discharge, discipline, seniority, hours, work schedule and contract interpretation.

Specialized programs and demonstrations throughout the week will mark the theme, "Our Future Is In Our Schools", according to James Cuppett, local MEA president.

Events included open house in each school, slide presentations in the lobbies of Northern state bank and First Northwestern state bank on Thursday evening and an elementary poster contest which was judged last week. All of the posters entered by classrooms in grades two through five in Thief River Falls schools will be displayed in the windows of local business places.

Hydra Mac Has Annual Meeting

Toreq Annual Meeting Hears Of Optimism

Stockholders and directors of Toreq, Inc., of Thief River Falls were greeted with an optimistic outlook for future sales and company growth during the company's annual stockholders meeting held at the Thief River Falls golf club Friday.

According to company president Douglass W. Steiger, "The 1976 forecasts look extremely favorable, with a market very much in damand for our farm and industrial line scraper. Toreq sales for our first year of operation greatly exceeded our management's forecasts."

Toreq, Inc., manufactures and distributes, as the company's major product line, two models of farm and light industrial scrapers. Both model scrapers, an 11 cubic yard scraper and the smaller eight cubic yard scraper, are designed for the 200 plus horsepower rubber tired and crawler type tractors.

Reelected as officers of Toreq, Inc., were Douglass W. Steiger, president; Lowell T. Swenson, corporate vice president; J. J. Womack, secretary treasurer; and Clifton Johnson, corporate vice president and general manager.

Newly elected to the board of directors were Mervin Prestebak of Thief River Falls and Francis Bogner of Beaver Dam, Wis.

Prior to the annual meeting, the stockholders and directors viewed the new Toreq facilities during a special guided tour earlier in the day. A luncheon was held after the tour at the Thief River golf club.

Topical issues will be discussed, and reports from the association convention will be given. All parents of children with learning disabilities are invited.

Over 65 persons were in attendance at the annual stockholders and directors meeting of Hydra Mac, Inc., held Thursday afternoon at the Thief River golf club.

Hydra Mac manufactures and distributes four models of four wheel drive skid steer loaders that are marketed in the United States, Canada and overseas.

Presiding at the meeting was Douglass W. Steiger, company president, who stated: "Due to various reasons, but largely the economic crunch, our company has realized some setbacks this past year." Stockholders were informed of Hydra Mac's "expected improvement in sales of the company's brand name of skid steer loaders."

Steiger further stated: "We will continue to supply the Gehl company of West Bend, Wis. with their needs in skid steer loaders. More recently, a contract has been negotiated to supply International Harvester with their requirement for this type of equipment.

"Together, these three items will result in a definite upturn in the economic situation of Hydra Mac," the president said.

By vote of the stockholders, Douglass W. Steiger, Maurice Steiger and Robert Flynn were reelected to the board. Newly elected to the board was Sig Haaland of International Harvester. Directors remaining on the board are Joseph Ecker, William T. Secrest, Lowell T. Swenson and Ronald Wiemeri.

Nearly 600 At Veterans Day Dinner Here

An enthusiastic overflow crowd numbering nearly 600 Legionnaires and auxiliary members attended the annual Veterans day dinner held Saturday at the American Legion clubrooms. Highlight of the evening program was the address by national alternate executive committeeman Norman Arveson of Brainerd.

In his remarks, Arveson stressed the role of the citizen-soldier throughout our nation's history, emphasizing the roles such men and women have played in times of conflict and peace. Arveson singled out for special mention the men of World War I who were instrumental in founding the American Legion over 56 years ago.

Also included in the evening's program were brief greetings and introduction of guests by post commander Clayton Restad and unit president Mrs. Ed Haroldson. The invocation and benediction were given by Rev. Paul Biegner of St. John Lutheran church. Master of ceremonies for the evening was Legionnaire Duane Walton.

A special musical treat for the evening was provided by the Thief River Falls bicentennial chorus which sang several numbers under the direction of Mrs. Norman Peterson. The chorus is sponsored by the American Legion auxiliary.

Subcommittee To Consider Drinking Age

Legal drinking age of 18 will be under question by a House subcommittee during the November mini session.

The legal liquor age subcommittee, Rep. Wayne Simoneau (D-Fridley) chairman, traveled to Breckenridge, Duluth and Windom this fall to get opinions on the issue from local school officials, students and people throughout the state who work in the drug treatment field.

The subcommittee is studying three bills by Reps. Ralph Jopp (R-Mayer), George Mann (D-Windom) and Keith Langseth (D-Glyndon). All three proposals would raise the legal drinking age from the present 18 to 19, but Langseth's bill differs slightly from the other two. Langseth's proposal would raise the age for the legal purchase of on-sale liquor to 19, for off-sale to 21. Both Jopp and Mann propose age 19 for both on and off-sale.

Various student organizations will get to express their views when the subcommittee meets in St. Paul in the state office building, room 57, on November 19 at 4 p.m.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

by Ellen M. Spray

Featuring recipes from the Kitchen of

Thoughts while washing the pictures of the grandchildren that are hung on the walls in the bedroom. If one of them were critically ill, who has the right to decide if they are to live or die? If one were to be injured, molested or killed, on what is the value of their life based? Are they of less value than a bird or a wild animal?

Since the plight of Karen Anne Quinlan has made headlines, the pros and cons of "mercy killing" have been aired. It is so very easy to make the decision of "pulling the plug," if the decision is made regarding an unknown person in a far-off place. Likewise, it is also easy to judge the Quinlans, unless one has experienced the same situation of spending endless hours, days and months at the bedside of someone hopelessly ill. People under those circumstances are completely exhausted and are unable to make any type of rational decision. For them, only three things are certain. They are completely worn out, mentally and physically; the medical bills have reached a point where they can't see any way that they can ever get them paid; and all hope is gone. To add to their problems, they don't believe in miracles.

But miracles do happen. I witnessed one about 15 years ago in this city. A relative was seriously ill. Emergency surgery was performed, the case was diagnosed as terminal and as the saying goes, "he was sewed-up," and brought back to his room. The families were notified that his life expectancy was from six months to a year, more or less. In place of improving, his condition became very grave and he slipped into a coma that continued for days. The family took turns in staying at his bedside. As I sat at his bedside, listening to his breathing getting weaker and weaker, his doctor walked in. After several spells, when the breathing seemed to cease, the man opened his eyes, felt of his face and said, "I need a shave. Give me my razor." That man is still alive.

To all concerned, the case was hopeless. No one expected him to live. If the attending doctor had decided to play God and shut off the life-saving equipment, would that man have lived? Who can say?

To my knowledge, no mortal man has been given the power of playing God; but we all have received the definite instruction, "Thou shalt not kill." That includes mercy killing. People will argue that point by saying that a person is living only through the machine made by man. However, man receives his knowledge from God and is accountable for the use of that knowledge. With his knowledge, man has invented machines to prolong life and developed serums to prevent certain diseases. If we were to cease using anything because it is man-made, we would have to revert back to prehistoric living.

Just as the people who are fighting to preserve life are rejoicing over the verdict given by the judge in the Quinlan case, so are they questioning judges all over our country who are demonstrating their light regard for human lives. It is a mixed-up nation that punishes citizens for robbing the nests of certain protected species of birds, yets places it's stamp of approval on abortion. There are societies established to preserve the habitat of wild animals, yet children sleep in unheated buildings and do without proper nurishment. Countless people work diligently to prevent cruelty to animals, yet are afraid to report child abuse. Are human beings of less value than an animal?

Shouldn't the life of a person, black or white, young or old, maimed or physically fit, be placed on a higher level than a whooping crane or a moose? God created both, but he gave man "the breath of life and man became a living soul." That's the difference.

Today's recipe comes from "Annie Bombani" a local senior citizen who is confined to her home due to physical frailties. In keeping with the BiCentennial observances, she sent us her method for making the Scandinavian pudding, Rumme Grot, or cream mush. Thanks Annie.

Rumme Grot

6 cups whipping cream
6 cups sweet milk
6 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon salt

Method: Pour milk into sauce pan. Sprinkle sugar over top but do not stir. Bring to a boil and then set aside until the cream mixture is ready.

Pour cream, preferrable unpasteurized cream, into another kettle and bring to a boil. Continue boiling until cream stops foaming. During that process, watch closely as it will foam and overflow very easily. Add flour, all at once, stirring briskly or beating with an egg beater. Reduce heat and boil slowly, stirring slightly. As butter appears on top, remove with a spoon or ladle, pouring into a small pitcher. (This recipe yields almost a cup of butter.) When butter ceases to form, add the hot milk, beating well. Boil for a few minutes, pour into a casserole, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and drizzle some of the butter over the top. Place in a low oven to keep hot until serving.

May be served with cold cuts, cheese, biscuits, lefse or flat-bread. As a dessert, serve with rosettes, krum-kake or fattigmand.

In place of Annie's history, her poem is being published.

It snowed last night, guess winter's here
As in the air, too, there is a certain chill,
But just the same there is some cheer
As I look at the petunias blooming on my window sill.
In the garden they bloomed all summer long
And now in a pot, are blooming still
It seems just like an endless song
Those petunias blooming on my window sill.
The days go by, sometimes they're sad,
Though I fight this will all my will,
Yet seems I just can't feel glad
Till I, look at the petunias blooming on my window sill.

Annie, may your petunias continue to bloom all winter.

School To Get Two-Way Radio

Thief River Falls board of education took the first step toward two-way radio communication for its school buses and a further step in acquiring a lease on property near Lincoln high school at a meeting held Monday evening in the school district service center.

The board authorized the administration to call for bids on a transportation communication system of which the first segment will be eight mobile two-way FM radio units and one base station with remote hookup and antenna tower to be installed by the bidder.

The chairman and clerk of the board were also authorized to execute an agreement with the L.B. Hartz organization to sell the school district's interest in the Juhl elevator property for $6,600.

Conditions of the agreement are that the Hartz organization will obtain a lease from the Burlington Northern railroad, the school district will sub-lease the property for not less than 12 years, no buildings will be constructed on the property by the school district, present structures will be removed by the school district and cost for surfacing the property will be borne by the school district, except those areas needing reinforced paving will be negotiated with the Hartz organization.

Approval was given to a resolution modifying a previous action to permit the hiring of a full-time instructor in the communications course at the area vocational-technical institute to give instruction in television as well as radio.

In compliance with a request from non-certified personnel, and in agreement with the union, vacation dates were set as December 26 and January 2 rather than December 24 and December 31 for union personnel.

Resignations were received and accepted from Yvonne Altendorf, secretary at the area vocational-technical institute; Shirley Binkert, kitchen helper at Knox elementary school; Elaine Farbo, clerical aid at Knox; and Wayne Johaneson, school bus driver. Russell Sorteberg was hired as a school bus driver-service man effective November 17.

The school district clerk was authorized to notify county auditor C.W. Rodekuhr that the amount of taxes to be levied in the school district is $1,808,200. Break-down of the total need includes: Maintenance, $1,058,200; transportation, $58,173; capital expenditures, $292,560; debt service, $194,090 (including $187,117 general and $6,973 AVTI); unemployment insurance, $18,105; and area vocational, $186,889.

Approval was given to use of Franklin pool, gym and cafeteria without charge to the Thief River Falls sport boosters on November 21 from 5:30 to 11:30 p.m. The event will be a fundraiser with money collected to be used for local sports purposes.

The board also adopted the constitution of the Northwest athletic conference as board policy and accepted the audit report presented by Robert Poissant of Holcomb, Knudson and company.

The board will hold a negotiating session with administrators of the district on Thursday at 6:30 a.m.

Mrs. Vollan served as one of the five discussion leaders.

Chief Offers Thanksgiving Travel Plan

With Thanksgiving travel uppermost in many drivers' plans, Chief of Police Ken Froschheiser today offered the following suggestions based on recommendations from the Internal Association of Chiefs of Police:

(1) Plan a sensible schedule. Know your route. Get plenty of rest.

(2) Keep a check on weather reports. Adjust your driving schedule to give you more time to reach your destination. Cancel your trip if the weather threatens to turn vicious.

(3) Be prepared for the worst that winter may have to offer; carry reinforced tire chains for severe snow and ice conditions that might be encountered.

(4) If you are caught in a storm, keep alert to announcements of emergency locations and alternate routes.

(5) Slow down on slippery roads. Allow considerably more distance between cars.

(6) Get the feel of the road. Know just how slippery that surface really is.

(7) Stay alert for icy spots. Ice lasts longer on bridges, overpasses and in shaded areas.

(8) Drive ahead of your car—plan every maneuver well in advance. Accelerate and steer smoothly. Pump brakes when stopping to maintain both steering and stopping control.

Chief Froschheiser concluded with this reminder: "Whenever, wherever you travel, using safety belts is never out of season!"

Soo Line Says Grain Volume List Too High

Soo Line loaded 848,000 tons of grain during the months of August and September at country elevators in North and South Dakota, Montana and Minnesota, rather than nearly one million tons as previously reported. This was an increase of 64 per cent over the same months in 1974, rather than the previously released increase figure of 88 per cent.

The company issued a correction because of the discovery of an error in its international reports. During September, 483,270 tons moved from country points, rather than 562,038 tons as previously reported. While this was not a record monthly movement, it was still the largest amount of grain moved from country stations on the Soo Line during any one month since the record grain-loading year of 1973.

The error in tons of grain loaded at country stations did not affect the financial results for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1975, released by the company in October.

Handicapped May Apply To Courage Center

Applications are now being accepted from physically handicapped adults, age 18 or over, for entrance into Courage center's new residential wing, scheduled to open early in 1976.

According to Courage center's executive director Wilko B. Schoenbohm, the residential facitity completes the original Courage center concept, "a comprehensive rehabilitation facility to serve adults and children with multiple handicaps from a wider geographical area."

"The vital thrust behind this program," adds Schoenbohm, "is making services available to help the handicapped achieve their goal of greater independence and self-sufficiency."

The residential addition in the Minneapolis suburb of Golden Valley will accommodate 64 young adults in single or double rooms specifically designed to meet their special needs. It will be a unique opportunity for the residents to utilize the many services which the Center offers, including: physical and occupational therapy, vocational counseling, on-the-job training, and recreational and social activities.

Individuals interested in applying or seeking further information about the facility's program and-or elegibility requirements should contact the Administrator, Courage residence, 3915 Golden valley road, Golden Valley, MN 55422. Phone: 612-588-0811.

List Turkey Preparation Safety Tips

A Thanksgiving feast can turn into a Thanksgiving stomachache—and not from overeating, said State health commissioner Dr. Warren R. Lawson recently. Harmful bacteria can grow on incorrectly prepared turkey.

Bacteria grow on food in temperatures between 40 and 150 degrees Fahrenheit. Therefore, minimize the time your turkey is in this temperature range.

There are three recommended thawing procedures. First, you could thaw the turkey in the refrigerator. Large birds require two to three days.

Or immerse the wrapped turkey in cold running water. But this method wastes a lot of water, with heavy birds taking six to seven hours to thaw.

The third method is to cook the turkey frozen. Of course this requires extra cooking time.

Never thaw turkeys at room temperatures or in warm water.

Once thawed, follow the roasting instructions that come with the turkey. Each brand may have different directions depending on the type of processing.

Cook stuffing and turkey separately. Stuffing inside a turkey takes too long to heat which allows dangerous bacteria to grow.

If you must cook the stuffing inside the turkey, only stuff immediately before roasting. And the stuffing should reach 165 degrees Fahrenheit before eating.

As soon as the turkey is done, immediately remove all the stuffing and cover the turkey. After dinner, remove all the meat from the bones and refrigerate. Gravy and stuffing stay fresh in the refrigerator for one to two days. Refrigerated meat stays fresh about two to three days, and frozen meat is good for about one month.

Oppose Giving State Job To Losing Mayor

Recent reports that defeated Minneapolis DFL Mayor Al Hofstede might be given a job in state government cast serious doubt on the openness and ethics of the present administration, Senate minority leader Robert Ashbach said recently.

"Reports that a $25,000-a-year job may be created on the governor's staff for Hofstedt—if true—represent the worst kind of political cronyism and make a sham of the austerity program and governor proposed in his inaugural speech earlier this year," Ashbach said.

"The costs of running the office of the governor of the state of Minnesota have risen enormously in the past five years. In 1970, the last full year of Governor LeVander, they were $370,000. In 1975 they were approximately $1,154,000. These costs reflect only appropriations from Minnesota taxes. They do not include other appropriations or sources of revenue. In fact, the governor's office had a deficit of more than $40,000 in 1974 and 1975."

Ashbach said that all too frequently state government has been used as a dumping ground for defeated political candidates, and the time has come to stop such practices.

"The taxpayers have enough of a burden without having to provide salaries to otherwise unemployed politicians," the senator said.

Ashbach said he would not necessarily oppose efforts to hire Hofstede to fill an existing vacancy in the administration, but added "I am definitely opposed to creating a new job for him."

Earlier this week it was reported that Hofstede also was being considered for the post of chairman of the Metropolitan waste control commission. Currently the position is considered part time.

"I would have no objection to Hofstede's appointment to that position on financial grounds. But I seriously question his objectivity in such a post considering his relationship with the city of Minneapolis over the past two years.

"There are more than 130 units of government that must be served by the commission, and I think it would be difficult for Hofstede to treat them all impartially," Ashbach said.

"Many appointments are used as a springboard for future political campaigns. There are many deserving, faithful carreer employees who should be considered for these high-paying jobs," the senator said.

Continue With Investigation Of State Fair

Last week's state fair investigating subcommittee meeting addressed itself to the cost of admission prices and multiple concession ownerships.

On October 28, fair manager John Libby defended the existence of the lack of competition and multiple concession ownerships by saying that he inherited this situation when he took over as secretary-manager.

Testimony in the first meeting revealed that one concessionaire owned as many as 13 "Pronto Pup" stands, the fair beer gardens, an interest in two rides, and is a producer of signs and displays for fair exhibitors.

In last week's meeting Libby said that some concessionaires had lost their state fair operation. However, he added that opening concession space to bidding would drive concession prices higher than those fairgoers now pay.

In answer to questions about the possibility of accepting bids for the fair's carnival shows, Libby said, "We've only had one other show offer a bid. We're not seeking bids. We just try to get the best offer."

This year's adult admission price jumped from $1.50 to $2. Rep. Bruce Vento (D-St. Paul) wanted to know why there was an increase.

Libby said that the price went up to cover the cost of remodeling the coliseum's heating and cooling system; a cost that he estimated would run between $300,000 and $450,000.

"It seems to me that the person who goes to the fair isn't going to benefit from such improvements since the heat isn't used that much," Vento said.

The state fair has a mandatory admissions policy that states everyone, with no exception, has to pay the entrance fee each time he or she enters the fair.

Chairman of the cubcommittee, John Sarna, expressed his desire to see a policy change to exempt fair employees and concessionaires, stating he sees no reason for charging admission each time these people must leave and reenter the fairgrounds.

Libby stated that it was possible to have one's hand stamped to allow for exactly that type of situation. However, this service is not conveniently available at every gate.

Libby has defended the state fair and its present operating procedures as "private enterprise." However, Minnesota statutes established the Minnesota agricultural society as a public corporation. Since the society operates the state fair, several of the subcommittee members felt it should be subject to many of the same regulations as other state enterprises.

Testimony to date shows the methods to elect board members, hire personnel and rent concession space have differed greatly with procedures other state agencies follow for similar transactions.

The subcommittee will continue its investigation in forthcoming meetings. The group expects to make recommendations to the state fair board early next year.

MEA President Speaks Here On Wednesday

Minnesota, and few arbitration cases. Teachers, boards and people are partners in the system, he said, and share in the responsibilities for the best education for all students.

He told the local teachers he was proud they didn't "knuckle under" to offers from the school board, saying that "what you do here affects all the other teachers in Minnesota."

Hill told the group that every other organization with a special interest has been lobbying for that interest for years. "Why should everybody come unglued when teachers do the same thing?" he asked.

Noting that he had been criticized for not showing gratitude, Hill said he questioned if he has any obligation to say thank-you for anything which has happened for education in Minnesota. "I don't think I need to show gratitude for public officials doing what they are paid to do," he said.

Commenting on statistics which showed Minnesota to be ninth highest in the nation in teacher salaries, Hill drew laughter from the crowd when he said, "I don't get real excited about being ninth in anything."

In a Times interview prior to the teachers' rally, Hill said he has set a priority during his term of office in getting to the locals when they ask him to appear. And he affirmed in answer to a direct question that there has been a change in the state MEA organization from a group which was pro-education to a group which is pro-educator.

While the goal of the MEA is unity and it is being achieved to a degree, he added, the sovereignty of the locals is apparent in the 200 locals still unsettled on teacher contracts for the 1975-76 and 1976-77 school years.

Free Mailbox Support Plans Now Available

Free specifications and drawings for a redesigned rural mailbox support are available from area maintenance offices, Minnesota highway department maintenance standards engineer Thomas Glasow announced.

The improved swing-away mailbox support was designed to provide greater safety and accessibility. For example, should this mailbox be hit by snow flying off a plow blade, it will move sideways and upward, and return to its normal position, Glasow explained.

To receive a free copy of the specifications, visit or write to the State highway district maintenance office, 1301 So. Main St. Box 617, Crookston.

Minn. 4-H'ers Take State Honors

Miss Miller

Three Minnesota 4-H'ers have been selected by the Cooperative Extension Service as 1975 state winners in their public speaking, leadership and achievement projects.

Marie Tibbetts, 18, and Debbie Miller, 19, are among some 30 Minnesota 4-H'ers who have won expense-paid trips to the 54th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 30—Dec. 4.

Jeanne Larson, 17, received a $50 U.S. Savings Bond from Union Oil Company of California for her public speaking project. She is eligible to attend Congress if she becomes a sectional winner.

Miss Larson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Godron Larson of Hoffman, won numerous awards in Grant County speaking contests and gave a prizewinning demonstration at the Minnesota State Fair.

She says she has given "every type of speech imaginable," from sermons to Memorial Day talks.

Miss Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Miller of Lake Park, was state winner in the achievement project sponsored by Ford Motor Company Fund.

The 10-year 4-H'er has been involved in a number of 4-H activities. She has garnered awards for her sheep project and has been a junior leader, working with younger members on sewing and public speaking projects.

The Clay County 4-H'er also is an excellent seamstress. She sews shirts for her brothers and grandparents. She says, "My mother retired from sewing when I started."

Miss Tibbetts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Tibbetts of Hallock, won best-in-state in the leadership program sponsored by Reader's Digest.

Since she joined 4-H nine years ago, the Clearwater County 4-H'er has held a number of offices in her 4-H Club. She served on the 4-H advisory board and was elected a 4-H ambassador to other cities and states.

Miss Tibbetts, a college freshman, plans to become a dental assistant.

March of Dimes Drive Begins In TR Falls

Thief River Falls area march of dimes, campaign will begin with mail solicitations in the next few weeks.

"The check you donate to our annual appeal," said Mrs. Richard Mabey, chapter chairman, "will help to make the future brighter for the more than 200,000 American children who come into the world each year with birth defects."

According to public health department statistics, this birth defect problem, the number one killer and maimer of children in the country, is not only a national probelm, but affects Pennington county as well. These statistics show that the county ranks 76 out of the 87 Minnesota counties in unfavorable birth rankings. This ranking is based on statistics that show that Pennington county had 21 mothers who had no prenatal care during pregnancy, and, out of 203 yearly live births, six infants died, 13 were born premature, 13 were born illegitimate, and 30 were born to mothers under 20 years of age.

Mrs. Mabey said, "these unfavorable ratings are based on the 'controllable' factors of pregnancy. We can do something about these controlable factors through public education. We have many excellent materials available free of charge to schools, adult groups, and any group that would like to know more about bettering the outcome of pregnancy.

"We are not only appealing for funds this year," said Mrs. Mabey, "we are also making an all out effort to find people who are concerned and interested enough in this problem, who would be willing to volunteer their time and efforts to the march of dimes as a member of the Pennington county chapter, to further our programs and perform a vital service to the community. It is also worthwhile noting that a large percentage of the money collected stays right here in the county to be spent by the volunteer chapter," said Mrs. Mabey.

Contributions to the voluntary health agency help support research into the causes and treatment of birth defects, medical service programs which can help prevent and treat birth defects, public and professional health education, and local prevention programs.

Reservation Placements Exceed Goals

Special employment services on Indian reservations exceeded their service goals by eight per cent and placed 281 people in jobs during a six-month period, Commissioner Emmet J. Cushing of the Minnesota department of employment services reported recently.

Of the 281 persons placed, 90 per cent were Indians and 11 per cent were War Veterans, Cushing said.

The placements were made from mobile offices which are financed through Governor Wendell Anderson's balance-of-state employment program. The offices are in trailers stationed on the Cass Lake and White Earth Indian reservations. Cushing said the offices took 703 applications for services during the period, February through July 1975.

A survey at the White Earth reservation, completed in September, indicated more than 80 per cent of those placed in jobs had worked in the jobs longer than 30 days, Cushing said. When a person works more than 30 days in a job, it is assumed the person is doing satisfactory work and will continue in the job.

Both mobile offices are sub-offices of the department's area office at Bemidji. They were established because the reservation communities are a long way from the Bemidji office and many of the applicants either do not have cars or cannot afford to drive long distances to seek work, Cushing asid.

The sub-offices develop jobs by contacting employers. During the reporting period, February through July of 1975, the two offices made 99 calls on employers. In addition, the offices both have access to the department's job bank, a computerized listing of jobs in the entire state. The listing is brought up to date daily.

Oct. Airport Traffic In TRF More Than '74

North Central boardings at Thief River Falls municipal airport in October totaled 782, a substantial increase from 712 passengers boarding in October of 1974. A total of 759 passengers arrived at the airport during the month, compared to 723 in October, 1974.

Overall North Central passenger traffic increased five per cent in October as the company set new records for the month by carrying 406,902 passengers and flying 94.2 million passenger miles.

Results eclipsed the marks of a year ago, when the airline boarded 389,001 passengers and flew 90 million passenger miles. North Central now has reported four consecutive monthly gains over 1974. Cargo ton miles were up one per cent to 1.15 million from 1.13 million. All-time monthly passenger boarding records were established in Mankato and three other American airports.

Continuing its standard operating performance, the airline completed 99.7 per cent of its 2.5 million scheduled miles in October, and 88 per cent of the 18,966 scheduled arrivals were on time.

Passenger totals for the first ten months of 1975 are one per cent behind the record levels last year when the automobile fuel shortage prompted many people to fly rather than drive. Through October this year, 3.8 million passengers have flown over 885 million passenger miles. Cargo ton miles are at 9.5 million, down 10 per cent.

North Central serves 90 cities in 13 states and Canada over a 10,200 mile route system. The airline annually carries 4.5 million passengers and flies a billion passenger miles.

North Central Reports Record Third Quarter

North Ceniral airlines had net earnings of $3,691,000 in the third quarter of 1975, as passenger traffic increased and revenues reached a record high.

"The $3.7 million in earnings, 30 cents per share, is 14 per cent greater than the same period last year", said Hal N. Carr, chairman of the board and chief executive officer. "Revenues for the third quarter of 1975 rose 10 per cent to $45,707,000, bolstered by fare adjustments and a three per cent gain in passenger traffic. Operating expenses, however, climbed 17 per cent to $40,382,000, with fuel costs alone jumping 54 per cent. Other expenses (primarily interest) of $695,000 were up 17 per cent, making the pre-tax profit $4,630,000."

After income taxes of $939,000, the net earnings of $3.7 million were attained. For the same quarter last year, net profit was $3,225,000, or 26 cents per share. Through the first nine months of 1975, net earnings totaled $3,350,000, or 27 cents per share, compared with $6,562,000, or 53 cents per share, a year ago.

"Let's do something of lasting significance to celebrate our country's 200th birthday: Let's declare a one-year moratorium on law-making, starting January 1, 1976. Instead of wasting our collective energy and funds on the worship of Bicentennially-embossed plastic cups, $1,850 sets of presidential miniatures, and less-than-memorable local celebrations, let's insist that our federal and state legislators use 1976 to honestly, objectively evaluate existing laws with an eye toward actually legislating some laws out of existence. And, with them, some of the regulatory bureaucracies that are strangling America's free enterprise system, and doing irreparable damage to the interests of our citizens."

—Dick Halladay, Editor,
"Michigan Challenge"

Thoughts In Passing . .

Wednesday afternoon we attended, by invitation of the local MEA leadership, a teachers' rally in the Lincoln high school cafeteria. Main speaker was Donald Hill, president of the Minnesota Education association, whose comments are covered in a news story in today's issue of the Times.

We would guess our lack of exposure to rallies of this nature made us somewhat unprepared for the scene at Lincoln.

After criticism of close coverage of negotiations sessions in past years, we have elected this year to see what would happen if we backed off on news coverage and waited to see what happened. As a result, we have not been fully aware of the tone in negotiations. It became quickly obvious to us on Wednesday that a large percentage of our district's teachers are in a highly emotional state and that many of those are highly agitated.

The tone of speakers we heard—and we may not have heard them all—was bitter and caustic. Because we have not been close to the current local bargaining sessions, we can not pass judgment on the justification for that tone; there may be some. Perhaps the speakers, in their fervent sincerity, do not even realize that it was the tone they conveyed.

And we doubt that most of the teachers in attendance Wednesday have been esposed to much of the negotiations other than reports which, expectedly, would portray one side of the issue. Some may have attended a meeting or two at one time or another.

But as we sat at the rally and listened to the speakers talking in support of educators moreso than education, we couldn't help but think of comments we had recently read. They were made by Congressman Ryan of California, who is generally grouped with the "liberal" element in the House and who was one of five Democrats to vote in favor of sustaining a Presidential veto of the education appropriation bill.

Congressman Ryan put his finger on a public perspective which we expect to be as prevalent in Thief River Falls as it is elsewhere. It likely affects local school board and public opinion, and it could be a key to a reason why settlement has not been quickly and easily reached here and in about 200 other school districts in the state. Here are excerpts from Ryan's explanation of his vote:

"In the last 25 years the federal government has spent more than $54 billion in support of the nation's public schools. Half of that money has been spent in the last five years. The amount of Federal support for education has increased by almost 2,500 percent since the first significant federal aid was appropriated a few years after World War II.

During that period of time one would hope that an expenditure of that size would have shown some positive results. With one or two notable exceptions, the reverse has been the case. Scholastic aptitude test scores of students entering college have dropped consistently and continually for more than 10 years. There is no apparent end in sight.

"Since 1972, public school attendance has leveled and has begun to drop in suburban areas where growth was alarmingly rapid in the 60's. The amount of money needed to build new public schools has dropped off drastically. Day-to-day operating costs for running schools have actually increased in spite of the decline of enrollment. The increase in costs has been far greater than might be expected by inflationary pressures . .

"If school enrollment were still increasing, or if the schools could point to massive and continuing success, or if the schools could indicate what the upper limit is to their demand for more and more taxpayers' dollars, I would have supported the override of the President's veto. I supported the President instead, because I believe there must be a leveling off of the funds allocated for any public agency based upon two criteria:

"(1) An analysis of all the demands made upon government for services, including armed services, welfare, education, environmental needs, etc.; and

"(2) Elected representatives must say to those agencies within the government what the upper limit of expenditures must be and what the level of performance must be. To do otherwise is to lead the way into the financial disaster now facing New York City and many other cities which have elected representatives who did not recognize an upper limit to demands of various governmental services."

Me, The Lousy Cop

This article which has been making the rounds among law enforcement agencies in the state recently appeared in Jon Haaven's column in the Alexandria newspaper:

"Well, Mr. Citizen, I guess you've got me figured out. I seem to fit neatly into the category you place me in. I'm stereotyped, characterized, standardized, classified, grouped and always typical. I'm the lousy cop.

"Unfortunately, the reverse isn't true. I can never figure you out.

"From birth you teach your children than I'm a bogeyman and then are shocked when they learn and identify me with my traditional enemy, the criminal.

"You accuse me of coddling juveniles, until I catch your kid doing something.

"You may take an hour for lunch and several coffee breaks each day but point me out as a loafer if you see me having just one cup.

"You pride yourself on your polished manners but think nothing of interrupting my meal at noon with your troubles.

"You raise cain about the guy who cuts you off in traffic, but let me catch you doing the same thing and I'm picking on you. You know all the traffic laws, but you never got one single ticket you deserved.

"You shout 'foul' if you observe me driving fast enroute to an emergency call, but literally raise hell if I take more than 10 seconds responding to your call.

"You're a witty conversationalist, but you bore me still at social gatherings with your vast knowledge of law enforcement.

"You call it 'part of my job' if someone strikes me, but it's 'police brutality' if I strike back.

"You wouldn't think of telling your dentist how to pull a badly decayed tooth, or your doctor how to take out your appendix, but you are always willing to give me a few pointers on law enforcement.

"You talk to me in a manner and use language that would assure a bloody nose from anybody else, but you expect me to stand there and take it without batting an eye.

"You cry 'Something has to be done about all this crime,' but you can't be bothered with getting involved.

"You've got no use for me at all, but, of course, it's okay if I change a tire for your wife, or deliver your child in the back seat of my patrol car on the way to the hospital, save your son's life with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, or maybe work many hours overtime to find your lost daughter.

"So, Mr. Citizen, you stand there on your soap box, and rant and rave about the way I do my job, calling me every name in the book, but never stop for a minute to think that your property, your family or maybe your life might depend on one thing, me or one of my buddies.

"Yes, me, the LOUSY COP".

Borrowed Nonsense:

A mother was having a hard time getting her son to go to school one morning.

"Nobody likes me at school," said the son. "The teachers don't and the kids don't. The superintendent wants to transfer me, the bus drivers hate me, the school board wants me to drop out and the custodians have it in for me. I don't want to go."

"You've got to go," insisted the mother. "You're healthy. You have a lot to learn. You've got something to offer others. You're a leader. Besides, you are 49 years old. You're the principal and you have to go to school."

First young man: "I saved a girl the other night."

Second man—"From drowning?"

First man: "No, I had two, so I saved one for tonight."

3 Minn. 4-H'ers To Attend Congress

Wicks

Larson

Miss Groothuis

Three Minnesota teens will travel to Chicago as state 4-H winners in their agricultural, beef and photography projects.

Keven Wicks, 18; Ronald B. Larson, 17; and Jana Lou Groothuis, 17, were selected by the Cooperative Extension Service to receive expense-paid trips to the 54th National 4-H Congress Nov. 30–Dec. 4. They will be among some 30 Minnesota 4-H'ers at the annual meeting.

Wicks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Wicks of Madison, was named best-in-state for his photography project. His Windy City trip is sponsored by Eastman Kodak Company.

The 10-year 4-H'er was photo editor of his high school newspaper and yearbook and is presently photographer for his college newspaper.

State agricultural winner was Jana Lou Groothuis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Groothuis of Clara City. Her 4-H sponsor is International Harvester Company.

Miss Groothuis, of Chippewa County, found her beef project most challenging. Since she joined 4-H in 1967, she has shown five champions and received several ribbons at the state fair. With savings from her beef project, she bought a piano and plans to finance her own college education.

She has also been successful at gardening. Her garden exhibit was selected best at the county fair, and she is landscaping her family's new home.

Larson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Larson of Montevideo, was tops in the beef project sponsored by Celanese Chemical Company, a Division of Celanese Corporation.

The Chippewa County 4-H'er has received many awards for his steers at both state and county levels. His cattle consistently have won performance honors for most weight gain.

He has been interviewed on statewide television programs about the effect of consumer demand on beef prices.

Larson plans to study agricultural engineering in college.

Awards programs are arranged by the National 4-H Service Committee.

Dear Mr. Editor,

I just read the article on Page 8 of the Wednesday, Nov. 5 edition of the Times. I am referring to the Article sponsored by the TRF Education association. I had the privilege of working for Supt. Corliss and the Board of Education from May, 1973 to Nov. 1974. I feel someone who has worked for both the board and the TRFEA during negotiations should express some feelings and views.

I am tired of seeing the Board of education raked over the coals all the time and receiving all the blame for the late date the negotiations are finished. I think the board of education is doing a fine job. I sat in on all negotiation meeetings with not only teachers, but all the other groups—the administrators, secretaries, bus drivers, mechanics, custodians and food service people.

I heard the teachers ask for many unbelievable things. It's pretty easy to ask for unreasonable amounts of money when you are on the receiving end of the money. The teachers are the highest paid employees in the community of TRF. The fringe benefits they receive are excellent.

Teachers have come a long way from one room with six to eight grades in it. I know because I attended a school like this for the first grades. My teacher came early winter mornings and started the wood stove. She carried water in from outside for her 30 plus students to drink and wash up with. She never complained about anything like keeping a bit of order in a hall, or check the bathroom. She cleaned her own room. She didn't have custodians or clerical aides. I give my teacher credit. She had a sense of loyalty and a grand amount of willingness to do her job well.

The board of education negotiates—but the teachers make demands. I think teachers should think of themselves as parents instead of teachers. They would then start thinking more about the education of our children.

They quote percentages! Where are the dollar figures for the insurances, sick leaves, substitute salary, other leaves, workers compensation? These may be benefits, but a dollar sign still provides them. Why aren't these included in the percentages?

I worked for Supt. Corliss and the board for nearly 1½ years. I have seen the sincerity of these people—they are getting a difficult job done; a job you fine citizens of TRF elected them to do. So when you read about the board's unwillingness to negotiate, stop and think about these board members you maybe know personally. Then compare your salary and working benefits with the plain BA teacher. Now you can make your own decision about the board of education.

As for myself and my family, thank you Dr. Corliss and board of education. You are doing an excellent job and we're behind you all they way.

FALLS VISION CLINIC

Thief River Falls, Minn.
DR. O. D. BEICH, Optometrist
DR. HAL R. FREEMAN, Optometrist

Wendell R. Anderson

More than 125,000 Minnesotans are victims of a potentially fatal affliction and don't know it.

The culprit is high blood pressure. Diseases related to it will kill 7,500 Minnesotans this year.

High blood pressure is a quiet killer. Too often its victims don't realize they have a problem until a vital organ has been seriously and permanently damaged. By that time, they are prime candidates for heart attacks, strokes, and kidney failures.

The only way to find out early enough about high blood pressure is to have yours tested. It's a simple test that can be done in less than a minute. But unfortunately, that's the kind of thing that many Minnesotans don't seem to find the time for.

That's why the Minnesota Department of Health has organized a statewide campaign to persuade our citizens to visit their family physician or a public health clinic for a blood pressure check. The Department of Health has a toll-free number where you can find out whether blood pressure tests are available free of charge in your community. You can call 1-800-552-8720 between 8 a.m. and 10 p.m.

It's not something to be complacent about. High blood pressure is no respecter of age or sex or race or social status or geography. If you're one of those quiet, low-keyed people who believes that high blood pressure is a problem other people have, you could be tragically mistaken.

The only way to be sure is to have a blood pressure test. Do it now. If you have high blood pressure, it can be controlled. But what you don't know might kill you.

It looks great on paper but the financial structure can quickly crumble if one or both parents die, as the federal estate taxes are so great along with the state tax. Freng Praises Playoffs

Murrae Freng, executive director of the Minnesota State High School League was on hand Friday at Walker for the championship game of the MSHSL state Class C football playoff championship game matching Karlstad against Esko.

Freng presented Esko with the Class C championship trophy following the Eskomos' convincing 62-0 triumph over the Rabbits.

"We're extremely satisfied with the playoffs," said Freng as he indicated the league has no immediate plans to alter the style of the four-year-old system.

Some criticism of the playoff arrangement surfaced following the Esko-Karlstad 62-0 ball game. Freng defended both the playoff system and Karlstad, however, by saying, "It was a tough night for a team like Karlstad. Early mistakes hurt them. I think a game like this is an exception rather than the rule in the playoffs."

"The playoffs have no doubt given football a shot in the arm all over the state," said Freng.

Borning Makes Gopher Debut

Dave Borning, a Prowler swimming star a year ago when he won a pair of titles in the 1975 Minnesota state swimming meet, made an impressive debut with the University of Minnesota swim team over the weekend.

Borning won two races as the Gophers competed in the Minnesota time trials, an event featuring nearly all of the colleges and universities in the state.

The former Prowler won the 50-yard freestyle in a 22.7 clocking and captured the 100-yard freestyle in 51.4. Both times were well off his state meet winning efforts, but represented strong increases over his season-beginning times of a year ago.

Borning will be swimming his sprint specialties again Friday when Minnesota competes in the Big Ten relays at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois.

TRF To Host Two NWAC Meets

Thief River Falls will be the host site for a pair of Northwest Conference spring athletic meets next year, it was announced at the recent NWAC fall meeting.

The 1976 Northwest Conference golf and tennis meets will both be held in Thief River Falls Thurs., May 6. The tennis meet will start at 9 a.m. and the golf meet will have a 9:30 a.m. starting time.

Other 1976 NWAC meet sites announced at the meeting included wrestling at Fergus Falls Sat., Jan. 24; indoor track at Crookston Tues., April 13; and outdoor track at Fergus Falls Tues., May 4.

Dorn Sidelined By Injury

Former Lincoln high school athletic standout Tony Dorn, now a sophomore defenseman with the University of Minnesota hockey team, is expected to miss yet another WCHA weekend series because of a shoulder injury suffered in a recent Gopher scrimmage against the St. Paul Vulcans.

Dorn missed the Gophers' trip to Denver over the weekend and isn't expected to play this week either. Dorn has played in two games for the defending WCHA champion Gophers this season, earning one assist.

Miscellaneous

+Detroit Lakes, a Thief River Falls football opponent, has completed its 1976 football schedule by adding Montevideo for a season-ending October 29 game. The game will be played at Montevideo.

Prowlers Win North Central Swim Meet Title

Paced by double event winner Joan Jury, the Lincoln high school girls' swim team captured championship honors in the 1975 North Central Region swimming meet conducted Friday and Saturday at the University of Minnesota-Morris.

Some 23 teams and 432 individual swimmers took part in the state-qualifying North Central meet. Thief River Falls advanced three individuals and a pair of relay teams into this weekend's state meet scheduled to be held Friday and Saturday at Hamline University in St. Paul.

Jury, Marci Pluth and Beth Nichols earned advancement to the state meet on an individual basis while the Prowler 400-yard freestyle and 200-yard medley relay teams also captured state meet spots. The 400-yard freestyle relay team members include Shelly Lund, Joy Grant, Pluth and Jury. The 200-yard medley relay unit includes Nichols, Deb Williams, Georgi Desrocher and Kathy Omdahl.

Four other Prowler swimmers will accompany the team to the state meet as relay team alternates, including Kim Wigness and Johanna Desrocher for the 400-yard freestyle squad and Kari Worner and Jodi Dallmann for the 200-yard medley outfit.

Thief River Falls won the North Central title with a 262 point total, followed by Brainerd with 222, Moorhead 162, Fergus Falls 133, St. Cloud Tech 120, Bemidji 73 and St. Cloud Apollo, St. Cloud Cathedral and Willmar with 72 points apiece.

The rest of the scores found Milaca with 32 points, Melrose 30, Cambridge 28, Montevideo and Sartell 27, Monticello 24, Hutchinson 21, Holdingford 13, Cold Spring-Roccori 3 and Sauk Centre and Dassel-Cokato 2 each. Princeton, Detroit Lakes and Litchfield failed to score.

"The kids did much better than I expected," said Prowler coach John Hustad. "I knew they were improved, but I had no idea they improved that much. They hit the prelims real hard and hung on in the finals. They really impressed me."

Jury was the only Prowler winner in the two-day event. She earned state meet berths by winning the 200-yard freestyle and the 400-yard freestyle races.

Thief River Falls claimed four second place finishes, good enough for state meet positions. Nichols placed second in the 50-yard backstroke; Pluth was second in the 100-yard freestyle and the 200-yard medley and 400-yard freestyle relay teams were both second place finishers.

Hustad explained Thief River Falls entries represented but 3.7 per cent of the total number of region swimmers, but Prowler swimmers represent 23 per cent of the North Central state meet qualifiers.

Other Thief River Falls North Central place finishes are as follows:

200-yard freestyle—Pluth, third; Joy Grant, eighth.

200-yard individual medley—Georgi Desrocher, fifth; Johanna Desrocher, 11th.

50-yard backstroke—Wigness, sixth.

50-yard breaststroke—Williams, eighth; Worner, 10th.

Diving—Brenda Lund, seventh; Dallmann, ninth.

50-yard butterfly—Georgi Desrocher, fourth.

100-yard freestyle—Omdahl, fourth; Shelly Lund, ninth.

100-yard backstroke—Nichols, third; Wigness, sixth.

400-yard freestyle—Grant, sixth.

100-yard breaststroke—Williams, fifth; Worner, sixth.

One of the keys to the meet, said Hustad, was the Prowlers' ability to advance a pair of swimmers into the finals since a sixth place finish was worth six points. "They really did a great job. I'm real proud of them," boasted Hustad.

KARLSTAD FULLBACK Rick Olson was limited to short yardage on this play as Esko linebacker Jeff Salo came up to make the stop during the championship game of the 1975 Minnesota state Class C football playoffs at Walker. Esko stunned the Top of the State Conference champion Rabbits 62-0.

Esko Stuns Rabbits 62-0 For State Class C Title

Powerful Esko scored all nine times the Eskomo offense had its hands of the ball Friday enroute to a lopsided 62-0 rout of Karlstad in the 1975 Minnesota state Class C championship football playoff game at Walker.

Esko quarterback Kevin Lindell directed the unstoppable Eskomo offense in unerring fashion. The strong-armed senior personally accounted for six touchdowns, scoring twice himself and then passing for four other scores as he enjoyed a sensational eight-for-11 passing performance that netted 153 yards.

Speedy Jack Campbell scored three touchdowns for the Duluth-area school and twin brother Joe rushed for 103 yards on just eight carries to spark a devastating Esko ground game that complemented Lindell's passing heroics.

All toll, Esko racked up 436 yards worth of offense on just nine pass plays and 22 running plays for an average gain of over 14 yards per play.

"They played like I knew they could play," praised Esko coach Bob Peterson who has coached the Eskomos to three straight undefeated seasons. It was Esko's first Class C title, though, since the Eskomos weren't able to accumulate enough points to make the 1973 and 1974 state playoff field.

Three Karlstad mistakes played a big part in supplying Esko with a 36-0 halftime cushion.

Esko scored its first touchdown 3:20 into the game when Lindell went six yards on a quarterback roll-out four plays after teammate Mike Johnson had stripped the ball from the hands of Karlstad quarterback Dan Sele at the Rabbits' 11.

Peterson said that first touchdown was a key factor. "That first touchdown gives you a psychological edge," he offered. "If they would have scored first, it might have been a different type of ball game."

A pass interception at the Karlstad 43 by Esko's Brian McCausland set up the second Eskomo touchdown—scored on the first snap when Lindell tossed an eye-opening touchdown strike to Jack Campbell who never broke stride on the over-the-shoulder catch.

Esko stopped Karlstad at the Eskomo 36—the deepest Karlstad penetration and one of only three times the Rabbits moved inside Esko territory all night—to start its third thouchdown drive in the second quarter. The six-play drive, Esko's most sustained march of the night, was capped by a three-yard dive by Dale Tondryk, Esko's 1,000-yard rusher during the regular season.

Tackle Jan VanWave recovered another Karlstad fumble, this time at the Rabbit 25, to set up Esko's fourth touchdown, a remarkable effort by Lindell who was being hauled down by Karlstad's Jim Cardinal as he pitched the ball to Jack Campbell who sprinted 17 yards on the option play.

The score jumped to 36-0 before intermission arrived when Lindell hit Jack Campbell with a perfect bomb down the middle. The play covered 31 yards and came with 49 seconds remaining.

Four plays into the second half Lindell sprinted 35 yards with a quarterback keeper on the option to hike the margin to 44-0.

A 14-yard screen pass over the middle from Lindell to tight end Phil Bergstedt made it 50-0 by the time the third quarter ended.

Lindell completed his fourth touchdown pass midway through the fourth quarter when he hit runningback Jeff Salo with a short dump pass over the middle for eight yards.

Reserves finished the game for Esko, but they kept the touchdown-per-possession streak intact by sprinting 73 yards in four plays for a 19-yard scoring run by Dennis Melerotto with 1:27 left.

Karlstad coach Phil Johnson said his team "played the wrong type of defense," to start the game. "We gambled too much and played it too top heavy in the line," he stated. "The big plays hurt. We would hold them for a couple of plays, but then they'd get a big one on us. We got down and it was all over."

Lincoln Wrestlers Hope To Improve Upon 74-75

Veteran Lincoln high school wrestling coach Ed Krystosek began his 12th year at the Prowler helm Monday when he welcomed a squad of 28 wrestlers to the start of pre-season practice drills.

The Prowler matmen will be intent upon improving last year's disappointing 3-9 regular season dual meet record that was followed by a shallow fifth place finish in the District 31 tournament.

Krystosek admitted, however, the Prowler turnaround will not be easy. "We lost quite a few seniors (through graduation)," he began. "But if our (current) seniors continue to work and develop, we could become a strong team by tournament time. And if our underclassmen can fill in—particularly in the lower weights where we're weak—it'll help a lot."

Junior Dan Hallstrom and senior Larry Swanson are expected to be Prowler leaders this winter. Hallstrom was the most productive Prowler a year ago when he amassed a 17-5-1 record enroute to a District 31 title at 112 pounds. Swanson, although seeing limited action during the year, came on strong to win a District 31 crown at 119 pounds.

Others expected to make solid contributions to the squad include seniors Duane Gonsorowski (145), Dale Furuseth (155) Scott Nelson (119) and Randy Olson (167) and sophomore Lee Furuseth (105).

Heavy weights Arlie Engelman and Neil Johnson and 167-pounder Stuart Peterson are all inexperienced seniors who will vie for varsity status. Engelman is wrestling for the second year while Johnson and Peterson are first year performers.

The Prowler lower weights (98 and 105) will probably be filled by a portion of the nine freshmen currently working with the squad.

"We'll be strongest around the 12, 119, 126 weights," pointed out Krystosek who can call upon Hallstrom, Nelson, Swanson or junior Mark Sorvig to fill those spots. "The lower weights will be our problem spots; we'll be real young there," he admitted.

Other squad members at the start of practice included seniors Stuart Mickelson (119), Randy Olson (167), Allen Rogalla (112), Peter Mosbeck (138) and Don Parks (138); juniors Matt Overby (145) and Tim Schoonhoven (145); sophomore Clark Nelson (105); freshmen Randy Ayers (98), Rick Bustrack (180), Mike Selves (112), Mark Overby (119), Craig Molstad (126), Jim Scheuneman (98), Terry Maidment (98), Dave Stern (105) and Jeff Nelson (145); and eighth grader Mark Williamson (138).

"We'll have to work at it," stressed Krystosek, "but it's there. We (coaches) just have to get it out."

Krystosek is assisted on the varsity level this winter by newcomer Mark Caputo.

A strong Thief River Falls 1975-76 season schedule opens Fri., Nov. 28, when the Prowlers host Crookston in the Lincoln gym. Krystosek looks for Crookston, Fertile, Greenbush and Bagley to field exceptionally strong squads this season.

Persons 65 years of age and older are eligible, and are urged to contact college president Alex Easton at Northland to receive a pass.

Easton, commenting on the program, indicated that, "Northland wants senior citizens to feel they are an integral part of the community and the college, and this is only one of many ways their presence is encouraged and solicited." He added, "Approximately 40 individuals took advantage of this program last year, and it is hoped that even more will participate this year."

Lincoln Swimmers Field Title-Contending Squad

Lofty goals have been trademarks of Lincoln high school swimming coach John Kopari in recent years. Things are no different this season. Kopari feels his five-year-old program has now reached championship caliber.

"I think we've got a real good chance to be number one in the North Central Sectional," Kopari stated matter-of-factly about his team's quest for the state tournament-qualifying event.

Kopari has his normal abundance of optimism despite the graduation loss of star Dave Borning who earned a scholarship to the University of Minnesota with a pair of first place finishes in the 1975 Minnesota state swim meet.

"We'll be strong in everything except where David left," said Kopari. "We've got one oustanding individual in every event except diving."

Five swimmers—all "potential sectional champions," according to Kopari—who will provide a bundle of Prowler points this winter include seniors Dan Heieren, Jeff Carter, Dan Cork and Mark Storhaug and junior Greg Omdahl. The four seniors have been with the Thief River Falls swimming program since its inception. Heieren, Cork and Omdahl were state meet performers a year ago.

Heieren, the team's co-captain along with Carter, swims the 200 and 500-yard freestyle events and holds down a spot on the Prowler 400-yard freestyle relay team. Carter swims the breaststroke and is a member of the 200-yard medley relay unit. Cork swims the 200-yard freestyle, the 100-yard backstroke and is a medley relay team member. Storhaug swims the 200-yard individual medley, the 500-yard freestyle and is a medley relay team member. Omdahl will try to fill Borning's spot in the sprints and will also swim in both relay events.

"We've got some real good swimmers," confirmed Kopari. "We're doing double the work of a year ago (25 miles by the end of the first week), but the kids are enthusiastic and they're working real hard."

Thief River Falls was a fourth place finisher a year ago at the North Central Sectional meet after a strong 10-4 dual meet season.

The Prowlers expect to better themselves at the post-season sectional meet, but because of a noticeable lack of depth, the team's dual meet record might not be outstanding since the tournament and dual meet scoring systems vary considerably.

"We're shooting right over the dual meet season," said Kopari. "We're going to take our bumps during the year, but we're aiming toward the tournament."

Twenty-five varsity candidates and an equal number of junior varsity swimmers represent the biggest swimming turnout in the history of the sport at the school.

Thief River Falls will open its 1975-76 season schedule Mon., Dec. 1, when the Prowlers host Detroit Lakes in the Franklin middle school pool to start a demanding schedule that includes established powers Fargo North, Fargo South, Fergus Falls and Brainerd.

The Prowlers will host seven home meets, highlighted by the Arctic Cat-sponsored Thief River Falls Invitational Sat., Jan. 17, when Brainerd, Bemidji, Fosston, Minot, Staples and Grand Forks Red River will compete here.

Bit And Bridle Club Party Set

Plans for the Christmas party were made at the November meeting of the Bit and Bridle club held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Svanjord. President Michael Hanson presided at the meeting.

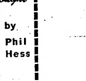
Jewels for thought



by Phil Hess

Anyone who keeps raising the roof probably has something wrong in his attic.

When a teenager borrows the family car, he can, in one night, subtract five years from the life of the car, and add them to the age of his father.

Another sign of age: when you feel like the morning after the night before — and you haven't been anywhere.

Antique: something that has made a round trip to the attic.

It's dangerous to send a husband shopping. Who else would take advantage of a special on 25 pounds of pepper?

It's sensible to take advantage, of our selection of fine diamonds at The Jewel Box. Our collection of loose and mounted diamonds is the largest in the Northland. Prices range from $100.00 and up.

Ed Marinaro Is Christmas Seal Chairman

Ed Marinaro officially kicked off the 69th annual Christmas Seal campaign by "kicking the habit". As honorary chairman, Marinaro is asking Minnesotans to support an important holiday tradition in the fight against lung disease and especially against one of the lung cripplers—cigarette smoking.

Since Marinaro kicked the smoking habit six months ago, he's been playing the greatest football of his life! "The biggest reason I feel so good is that I quit smoking" Marinaro said. "You can't believe how much better I feel. I feel stronger, quicker, faster, and have twice as much endurance. It's a great feeling, too, knowing that I'm not chained to a habit".

Christmas Seals are the primary source of income for the lung Association, the oldest voluntary health agency, and remain a significant force in alerting people to the growing dangers of lung disease. "I realize even more now how important the work of our Lung Association is", remarked chairman Marinaro, "Christmas seals support programs of smoking education in schools and community awareness to the health hazards of smoking".

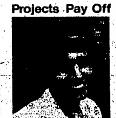
Most residents of Minnesota should have already received the 1975 Christmas Seals bearing greetings from the children of America. The Seals are representative of art work by children from 54 states and territories. This is the first year that children's designs have been used and the colorful seals catch the charm of these wonderful creations of children's imaginations.

Minnesota's seal was designed by a Blaine youth, 13 year old Mitch Skrove. The students at the elementary school where Mitch was enrolled were asked to paint a scene dealing with the holiday season. Mitch's art teacher described his work, "Mitch painted a typical Minnesota snowman against the background of turquoise sky. Big snowflakes drift down softly".

Mitch has been named 1975 honorary youth Christmas Seal Chairman for Minnesota.

"Please answer 'your Christmas Seal letter today", urged Marinaro, "and help the Lung Association continue its work of protecting the lungs of children and adults. It's a Matter of Life and Breath".

Projects Pay Off For Minn. 4-H'ers



Mittelstaedt

Miss Leek

Two Minnesota teens have learned that hard work in 4-H really can pay off in a big way.

Steve Mittelstaedt, 17, and Sheila Leek, 18, have been selected by the Cooperative Extension Service as state winners in their 1975 bicycle and food preservation projects.

Miss Leek won an expense-paid trip to Chicago. She will be among some 30 Minnesota 4-H'ers attending the 54th National 4-H Congress, Nov. 30—Dec. 4.

Mittelstaedt was awarded a $50 U.S. Savings Bond and is eligible to attend Congress if he becomes a sectional winner.

Miss Leek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gale Leek of Blooming Prairie, was state food preservation winner. Her Congress trip is sponsored by Kerr Glass Manufacturing Corp.

During her six-year project, she canned 170 half-pints of jelly, 139 pints of pickles and 415 quarts of vegetables. She has earned many ribbons at Mower County and state fairs.

Miss Leek made jelly out of peaches, wild grapes, crabapples and beets. She said that she solved the lid shortage problem by freezing jam without lids. She says this kept them fresh for a longer period of time.

She feels that "food preservation is a very important part of meal planning" because it provides homemade vegetables and fruits for every meal.

Mittelstaedt, Minnesota's bicycle winner, received his bond from The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Mittelstaedt of Waseca.

The Waseca County 4-H'er pedaled more than 5,000 miles in three years. He organized bike hikes — some as long as 200 or 300 miles — on which he carried food, a sleeping bag and a tent. He also operated a small bike repair shop.

Women Debate Tradition At U of M Meet

The historical contributions of American Indian and pioneer women and the experiences of modern women in education, family planning, development and the electoral process were topics of a two-day International women's year conference recently at the University of Minnesota.

Speaking to about 150 women, Rhoda Gilman, supervisor of research for the Minnesota historical society, said the Indians' desire to trade for European goods had altered their way of life and the role of Indian women long before European settlers came in contact with them.

As pressures for trade increased, the hunting done by the men took on even more importance, Gilman said, while the efforts of the women working the land took second place.

Pioneer women, Gilman said, were expected to share in the work of farm production and also to bear the numerous children needed to operate the farm. Organizations such as the Grange, which admitted women to membership in 1867, helped free them from the severe isolation of the prairie farms. Women were active in the efforts to improve the lot of the farmer, Gilman said.

The idea that women should pursue higher education, or would even want to, was debated in the 1800's, according to Gretchen Kreuter, coordinator of women's studies at St. Olaf college.

"Women's intelligence, creativity and leadership abilities were ignored," Kreuter said. It was feared that women would suffer from brain fever and would crack under the pressure of getting an education.

"But one educator worried about the fact that women were getting more than their share of academic honors," she said.

The fears about educating women went one step farther, according to Sheila Tobias, associate provost at Wesleyan university. It was claimed that with education, the life force of a woman would be directed to her brain rather than her ovaries.

Even when the objections to women going on to higher education declined, Tobias said, women were directed toward "non-market skills."

Today, Tobias said, many capable women have a fear of success. "There is the belief that it is inappropriate for women to be brilliant," she said.

Efforts to educate women in developing countries also face criticism, according to Nira Long, coordinator for women in development with the agency for international development.

"It is argued that it would raise their expectations," she said.

In the area of agricultural education, Long said, AID program planners have now realized that while such education programs have traditionally been provided for the men, it is often the women who are engaged in the actual farming effort.

Pamela Verrhusen, of the national staff of Planned parenthood, said worldwide efforts at family planning are being directed toward ensuring that every woman has the basic right to control her own fertility.

"But in telling a woman she should not have a child every year, you must also offer alternatives for use of her time and energy," Veerhusen said.

Closing speaker for the conference was Ruth Clusen, national president of the league of women voters.

Clusen said women worldwide face many barriers to participation in the electoral process, including education, income and property ownership requirements.

While the number of women in politics in the United States is lower than in many other countries, whe said, other countries are envious of the influence and strength of U.S. voluntary citizens' groups.

Party Claims Legal Right To "Independent"

Recent news releases have indicated that the GOP might possibly add the name Independent to its name.

Several years ago the Wallace for president organization attempted to use the name "American Independent Party" on the ballot nationwide. They were precluded from so doing in Minnesota although that party name was used in many states, because no party could use the word independent. Apparently the reasoning was that the name was preserved for use by the true independent.

In June of 1974 the American party contacted the office of Minnesota secretary of state regarding the use of the name Independent. The American party was informed that the name could not be used.

At the April state central committee meeting of the American party at Cold Spring the American independent party, inc., the Constitution party, inc. and the Conservative party, inc. were merged with the American party, inc. here in Minnesota. The merger was accomplished pursuant to Minnesota statute in such a way that the full legal name of each is preserved intact and the officers and delegates of the American party are at once the officers and delegates of all four parties.

The GOP has, by letter, received formal notice of the claim of the American party to the name, "Independent". This name has been the property of the American independent party since its original incorporation a number of years ago.

10% of our customers make close to half the calls to Directory Assistance.

All phone users pay the bill.

You probably know someone who often reaches for the phone instead of the phone book to get a number. That person is among the 10% of Northwestern Bell customers who make about half of the calls to Directory Assistance. Three-fourths are requests for numbers already listed in the directory.

All phone users help to pay for these calls, because Directory Assistance is a part of everyone's phone bill. This year, the cost of providing this service in Minnesota will be at least $12.5 million. And that figure keeps growing.

To help control the cost of Directory Assistance, we need everyone's cooperation. Please keep your telephone directory near your phone, and use it whenever you can to find a number.

When you look up a number you'll probably call again, underline or circle it. If you're likely to call it frequently, jot it down in the back of the book. Or ask your telephone business office for a free personal directory.

WHERE TO LOOK IN THE BOOK

If you're not sure where to find certain types of information in the directory, here are a few helpful tips:

- Use the page index. The first and last names on each directory page are displayed with the index letters on the upper outside corner.
- Use the Call Guide index at the front of the book. It tells you what page to turn to for specific telephone information.
- For emergency numbers, see the inside front cover.
- Check the Yellow Pages. This handy guide can help you quickly locate nearly every kind of product or service in your community. The 'Action Index' at the front of the Yellow Pages section gives an alphabetized list of headings.
- In most directories, look in the Yellow Pages under 'Government Offices' for government listings. In the white pages, numbers are listed as follows:
  State offices—See Minnesota, state of
  City offices—See name of city
  County offices—See name of county
  Federal offices—See United States Government
- For letters used as names, find the beginning of the listings for that letter. Example: R. L. Institute—see beginning of the R's.
- For numbers used as names, find the number as it is spelled. Example: 299 Corner Cafe—see Two Nine Nine Corner Cafe.

Butter-Baked Washington Russets

Here's a glamorized version of roast potatoes, featuring Washington State Russets. The "Golden Baked Russet Potatoes" are basted with butter as they bake, then coated with bread crumbs and Parmesan cheese when almost done. The result is a tasty potato that is tender and moist on the inside and crisp and savory on the outside.

Washington State Russets are the favored all-purpose potato. When baked, they become fluffy and moist. When fried, they are crisp and tender, and when boiled, they retain their flavor and shape.

Golden Baked Russet Potatoes

4 medium Washington Russet potatoes
⅓ cup butter, melted
¼ teaspoon onion salt
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon packaged bread crumbs
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese

Peel potatoes. Slice each crosswise every ¼ inch, cutting to within ½ inch of the bottom. Place in buttered baking dish. Drizzle with half of butter; sprinkle with salt. Bake at 425° for 30 minutes. Sprinkle with crumbs and remaining butter. Bake 20 minutes longer. Sprinkle with cheese and bake 10 minutes or until tender, basting with butter in dish. Makes 4 servings.

4-H Is People Caring And Sharing

CHICAGO—"What is 4-H? It's young people involved in gardening, working with wood, caring for animals, sewing, cooking and many other programs which help youth learn-by-doing," says Melvin C. Holm, chairman of the board, Carrier Corporation.

Carrier is one of several thousand corporations, foundations and individuals that subscribe to the "4-H is people caring and sharing" philosophy. Their investments of time, expertise and funds, channeled through the National 4-H Service Committee and the National 4-H Foundation, enrich the overall 4-H program and contribute to its effectiveness and expansion.

4-H has broad appeal

4-H, the youth education arm of the Cooperative Extension Service, now reaches more than 7.2 million young people nationwide. The interests and needs of boys and girls 9-19 are served by organized clubs, special interest groups, nutrition programs and instructional television.

To implement the "caring and sharing" philosophy, a number of private-sector donors sponsor national awards programs that recognize the accomplishments of 4-H'ers in a variety of areas. Among these donors are: The S&H Foundation, Inc., home environment program; Amoco Foundation, Inc., petroleum power; Wilson & Co., Inc., sheep; and Top Form Products Dept., Merck & Co., Inc., horse.

4-H'ers who demonstrate outstanding qualities of citizenship may be eligible for national awards presented in honor of Thomas E. Wilson, a founder and former president of the Service Committee, and by friends of Kenneth H. Anderson, associate director of the Committee.

Private support important

Another 4-H donor, The Chicago Board of Trade, offers medals of honor and expense-paid trips to the annual 4-H Commodity Marketing Symposium to 4-H'ers who excel in marketing activities.

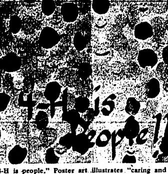
Several organizations support 4-H on a regional basis. Santa Fe Railway System and Gulf Central Pipeline Company, Santa Fe Industries Companies, offer 87 educational awards and scholarships to 4-H members in up to 13 states. 4-H'ers in 15 states can earn educational awards offered by Burlington Northern Inc.

Other donors of regional awards include: Chicago & North Western Transportation Company, 11 college scholarships of $500; Edwin T. Meredith Foundation, two $800 scholarships; and The Milwaukee Road, two $500 scholarships.

4-H alumni, who number 33 million, also are eligible for recognition. Olin Corporation offers awards on county, state and national levels to former 4-H'ers who demonstrate outstanding qualities of leadership, service to 4-H and the larger community, and professional accomplishment.

General support for the 4-H program comes from: Allis-Chalmers Corporation, Agricultural Equipment Division; Armour & Company; Ski-Doo Snowmobiles, Bombardier Limited; Daisy Division, Victor Comptometer Corporation; E. I. duPont deNemours and Company; and Purina Horse Chows, Ralston Purina Company.

Appreciation for 4-H donors who "care and share" can be summed up in the words of a South Dakota 4-H'er: "4-H has made me realize that any goal can be reached if people care enough. 4-H cared enough to help me and now I care enough to help others."



4-H is people!!

"4-H is people." Poster art illustrates "caring and sharing" philosophy that underlies the support and encouragement given 4-H by private-sector donors. Funds channeled through the National 4-H Service Committee and the National 4-H Foundation help enrich the 4-H youth program conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service.

Metric Workshop Held Here Tues.

Thirty-three teachers from 28 school districts in northwestern Minnesota's Region One gathered in Thief River Falls Tuesday for a metric education in-service training session at the Elks club rooms. Mrs. Clarice Galliher of Thief River Falls and David Dye, mathematics consultant for the state department of education, conducted the session.

Mrs. Galliher, who serves as Region One coordinator, received her training at a state workshop held October 3 and 4. District representatives who took part in the Tuesday regional session here will now replicate the workshop for all elementary teachers in their own districts.

The workshop format was developed by a five-state consortium (Minnesota, North Carolina, Mississippi, California and Delaware) and field tested under a federal grant.

An explanation of the reason for the workshop is contained in a letter to school district superintendents from Howard B. Casmey, Minnesota commissioner of education. Dated October 25, the letter states the following:

"In compliance with a directive in Section 4 of the Minnesota metric implementation and standards act of 1974, the state department of education and the department of administration are jointly moving ahead on a program of public education on the metric system.

"On February 10, 1975, the 'Minnesota Plan for Metric Education' and 'A Resolution on Metrication' were approved by the state board of education and published.

"One of the basic parts of the Minnesota plan for metric education is in-service training of teachers. During the 1975-76 school year, a comprehensive state-wide in-service plan is being implemented for 20,000 elementary teachers. An in-service multiplier strategy will be used that involves training regional metric coordinators, who will train district metric coordinators, who will train building metric coordinators or elementary school staff depending on school district size.

"During the months of January, February and March 1976, elementary teachers will receive their metric in-service training. To facilitate the completion of the elementary teacher in-service section of the Minnesota plan for metric education, I am recommending that school district superintendents arrange for two 1 p.m. early dismissals to enable the five-hour workshop to be completed. After attendance has been taken at the beginning of the afternoon session, school may be counted in session for the full day.

"It is desirable that these two early dismissal workshop sessions be scheduled within a two or three-week time span if at all possible for continuity purposes."

The Minnesota plan for metric education notes that

Council Hears Airport Views

Lawrence McCabe, state commissioner of aeronautics, attended an informal noon meeting of the Thief River Falls city council Monday in the city auditorium council chambers to appraise the council of the current situation regarding the municipal airport.

The state legislature has ordered that the state cease assuming costs of ownership for the airport and return the facility to the city, a measure which the city council has strongly opposed. But the eventual return seems inevitable due to the insistence by the legislature, and McCabe proposed that the city assume ownership next year on a February through June basis, with the city to receive $10,416 in state funds for operations costs during this period. McCabe said the state wants the transition to be completed by July 1.

Alderman William Penning indicated he didn't think this proposal could be resolved until other pending money issues are settled. McCabe informed the council that a total of four and one-half

United Way Total Stands At $47,229

Current totals in the Thief River Falls United Way campaign show that $47,229 has been pledged or paid for the 1975 drive, according to Art Heinze, executive secretary of the local United Way board. Goal for the current year is $55,000.

Last year's campaign totaled $48,673, Heinze said, more than $1,000 above the current total. There are some packets remaining to be turned in, he noted, and it is hopeful that last year's total figure can be matched or exceeded. Realization of the $55,000 goal seems quite remote at this time.

The secretary urged all campaign workers who have not turned in their packets to do so immediately so that the campaign can be completed. Anyone who has not made a contribution and would like to do so may send it to the United Way, P.O. Box 276, Thief River Falls, and it will be used for the United Way's program of helping people.

Crosstown Arterial Is Hearing Subject Mon.

A tentative proposal for a new river crossing, railroad underpass and crosstown arterial linking the industrial area with the southeast residential area of Thief River Falls received some stiff opposition from concerned Greenwood area residents attending a planning commission meeting Monday evening in the city auditorium basement meeting room.

The planning commission had invited the southeast residents to the meeting in order to receive community feedback while the proposal was still in its early discussion stages. It is estimated that it would take between five and 10 years of hearings, environmental studies, financing (through municipal state aid and federal urban aid funds) and construction before the project could be completed.

Route of the proposed arterial would start on highway 59 south at a point halfway between County road 62 and Greenwood street, run west through what is now Tenth street, continue west with an underpass at the Soo Line railroad track and across Pennington avenue, then west along the southern edge of Greenwood cemetery. The route would then swing in a northwesterly direction to Greenwood street, where a bridge would be constructed to connect to highway 32. According to city engineer D.H. Stewart, the route would relieve some on the internal traffic congestion that is becoming an increasingly difficult problem in the city by diverting some cars from the busy First and Third streets and Main avenue.

But the southeast area residents, who packed the meeting room during the informational session, voiced many objections to the proposal. Most of the arguments appeared to center on a belief that a major arterial would generate a large amount of traffic through the area and create a disturbance for the residents who originally settled in the southeast area to escape the noise and congestion of the inner city. As several residents phrased it, "I don't want a highway running through my back yard."

Questions were raised concerning the direction of the route, with several members of the audience proposing alternative routes. Stewart said it is a matter of whether the southeast residents would prefer the route in back of their homes (as it is currently being proposed) or in front of them.

The engineer acknowledged, however, that objections raised at the meeting will cause the city to consider alternative routes. He said that the arterial could be constructed further south, but to do so would increase the

On Elk Shooting Charges . . .

Foss Is Acquitted In District Court

Gordon Foss of Grygla, charged with five counts of taking a protected big game species (elk), was found not guilty by a jury of six men and six women Tuesday in Marshall county district court in Warren. The jury determined that Foss was justified in the shooting of five elk in protection of his property.

The case went to the jury at 5:20 p.m. Tuesday at the end of the second day of trial. Jurors had about a two-hour recess for supper and returned a not guilty verdict at 10:15 p.m. Judge Warren A. Saetre, who presided at the trial, said it is necessary for a jury to have unanimous agreement in rendering a not guilty verdict.

Foss was charged by the state of Minnesota for shooting the five elk in his oats field north of Grygla on September 6. He maintained that the elk had caused considerable damage to his oats crop and that state response to his previous complaints had been ineffective in preventing further damage.

Somewhat surprisingly, the jury in the highly publicized case was selected before noon on the first day of the trial which began at 9:30 a.m. Monday. Several witnesses for the prosecution were called on to testify Monday afternoon. Additional witnesses for the prosecution were heard Tuesday, as were defense witnesses. Harold Myhre, Marshall county attorney, prosecuted the case and Kenneth Johannson of Crookston was defense attorney.

Serving on the jury were David Larson, Argyle; Lorraine Selnes, Alvarado; Oscar Fosholm, Holt; Veronica Moose, Viking; Lillian Waltonen, Middle River; Leland Back, Argyle; Donna Mae Anderson, Stephen; Eileen Johnson, Warren; Leonard Blazejewski, Newfolden; Robert Blazejewski, Strandquist; Ila Dagoberg, Alvarado; and Jerome Cwikla, Middle River.

Public attendance at the trail was considered large and included social studies classes from Middle River and Argyle.

Witnesses appearing for the prosecution were Mrs. Joy Nordby, editor of the Grygla Eagle, who was called to the scene by Foss after shooting the elk; Jerry Maertens, manager of Thief Lake wildlife management area, his assistant Don Pierce and seasonal employee Gordon Forester, all of whom worked with exploders provided Foss for use in his field to frighten the elk; and conservation officers Les Borning (supervisor) and Donald Fearn of Thief River Falls, Al Markovich of Warroad and Richard L. Simmons of Roseau.

Defense witnesses were Orville Diesen, Wannaska; Orlin Ostby, Gatzke; Lester Ostlund, Wannaska; Harold Klamar, Gatzke; Milo Hagen, Grygla; and Foss in his own School Board Session Mon.

Thief River Falls board of education acted on only routine matters at its regular meeting Monday night—a direct departure from most recent meetings which have yielded controversial and-or major actions.

Douglas Andrus, substitute teacher in the agriculture department, was authorized pay at the rate of $32.50 for the first 10 days and $52.65 on subsequent days.

Richard Fugere was assigned to the position of boys' squad assistant swimming coach for the 1975-76 school year. Bobette Calhoun, Gary Schubert and Goodwin Hanson were hired as bus drivers and the resignation of Bonne L. Solheim, half-time secretary in the transportation and buildings and grounds departments, was accepted.

SEASONS GREETINGS

RUSHING THE SEASON? Not if you are a city employee whose task it is to install the city's holiday decorations each year. While it may seem too early to some people to have the Christmas decorations in place before the Thanksgiving observance, it's a lot more comfortable to get the job done before the arrival of winter's bitter cold. The city crews must fit the installation of holiday decorations into their schedule as well. Bruce Anderson is in the bucket of the boom truck in the photo above while Dan Rivera is shown by the truck. Paul Bedard was also on the crew but is not pictured.

Lindemoen - Bengtson Marriage Vows Spoken

Candelabra graced with white tapers and arrangements of white mums formed the chancel setting at St. Bernard's Catholic church in this city for the recent wedding of Miss Bonita Ann Lindemoen and Wallace Searle Bengtson.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Lindemoen of Newfolden. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Bengtson of Middle River.

Rev. James Bernauer officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by over 200 relatives and friends. Serving as altar boys were Randy and Allen Lindemoen, brothers of the bride. Mrs. Michael Lee, a friend of the couple, was the organist. She played "Never My Love," as the attendants' processional, and the traditional wedding march, as the bride was escorted to the altar by her father. During the ceremony, Greg Dally played the guitar and sang "Something," "My Sweet Lady," and "The Wedding Song".

The bride was attired in a floor-length gown of white chiffon fashioned with a v-neckline, full-length puffed sleeves gathered into fitted, deep lace cuffs, and an attached chapel-length train. Complementing the bodice was an overlay of embroidered Venice lace. Lace also framed her profile headpiece and edged the bottom layer of her triple-tiered veil. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and miniature white pompons interspersed with yellow feathers and ribbon streamers.

Barbara Olson was the bride's personal attendant.

Matron of honor was Mrs. John W. Nelson of Newfolden, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Sue Trickel of Storm Lake, Iowa, a cousin of the bride, Monica Bengtson, sister of the groom, and Lyndell Pederson of Thief River Falls, a friend of the couple. All wore identical gowns of a green floral print styled with back ties and ruffled hemlines. An overlay of heavy lace accented the bodice and cuffs of their sheer, full-length sleeves. Each attendant carried a bouquet of butterscotch daisies, wild babies' breath and orange bunny tails with orange ribbon streamers.

Attending the groom as best man was Randy Burrell of Thief River Falls, a friend of the couple. If the Shoe Fits...

Has shoefitting improved over the years?

It may seem incredible but the fitting of children's shoes has improved immeasurably in the last twenty years. Parents are no longer flabbergasted when a shoe-fitter measures both feet of their child. Twenty years ago you felt fortunate if he measured either foot.

After careful measurement, the modern shoe-fitter may try three or four shoes in this same size before he is satisfied that he has the correct last for the child's foot. Twenty years ago, if the last of the shoe was wrong the shoe clerk changed the size. Almost all shoe sizes were concealed in code so the customer didn't know the difference.

It is a sad commentary on our nation's interest in foot health that the law requires a manufacturer of clothing to show the percentage of wool, cotton, etc., but the shoe manufacturer is not required to mark shoe sizes so the buyer can read them.

Foss Is Found Not Guilty By Jury Tuesday

behalf. Most of the defense witnesses are farmers who testified to damage done by the area elk herd. Ostlund testified as to damage done in the Foss oats field as he observed it while swathing the grain. Hagen testified that his father had shot an elk in the mid 1960's under similar circumstances and had not been prosecuted for doing so.

Judge Saetre told the Times that he believed the case was well presented by both the prosecution and defense and that he did not think the decision had any far-reaching impact.

Les Borning, conservation officer supervisor, noted that he hoped the decision would not be interpreted as license to kill protected game species. "I feel we were certainly justified in bringing the charges we did in this case," Borning said, "and any future cases will also be dealt with according to the law. We fully intend to prosecute any game violations and expect any case to be settled in court on its own merits."

Contacted by the Times this morning, Foss said he was thankful for the decision reached by the jury in finding him not guilty. He also said he did not expect the verdict would have a major effect regarding protection of the remaining elk in the area.

Foss said he did derive satisfaction from the decision in that it showed a person has a right to protect his property. He added the opinion that it might cause conservation officials and legislators to take a different view of responsibility for damage caused by wildlife. "I hope something can be done in the future so this sort of thing doesn't have to happen," he said.

Although he won the court decision, Foss still comes out a loser in the battle. His attorney fees, travel and time loss will total over $3,000 with nearly $3,000 being charged in attorney fees alone, he said. He estimated that a defense fund established in his behalf had received about $600 to be applied toward his expenses.

Meeting Held On Crosstown Arterial Mon.

A trunk highway by-pass around Thief River Falls has been a community development priority for many years, and this would reduce the inner city traffic congestion by about 15 per cent, according to studies. But Stewart said he was told by the state highway department that financing for such a project is "at least 20 years down the road."

After the information meeting, a brief community development hearing was held. City planner Terry Madson explained the status of the current HUD community development project in the south-central area of the city, then listed possible priorities for the second year of the HUD grant program.

These priorities include a construction rehabilitation (winterization) program, further property acquisition in the south-central area and preparation of a site for elderly housing.

City clerk-treasurer Gerald Wigness suggested another possible priority could be development of the second floor of the city auditorium into a community civic center when the police department vacates that area to move into the new law enforcement center. Madson said that remodeling of the fire hall, a community development priority proposed last winter, is not eligible for funding under the HUD program. The planning commission set December 1 for a second community development hearing.

one of the basic skills needed by all citizens in our society is the ability to make, use and interpret measurements of many sorts. The United States is moving in the direction of adopting the (system) of metric weights and measures. The Minnesota legislature passed an act which delineated a purpose, policy and implementation for metric conversion when conversion to metric units is officially legislated into federal policy.

Under the time table for implementation, 50 per cent of the state's teachers of intermediate and secondary students are expected to be teaching the metric and customary systems side by side this school year. The time table extends the teaching of the metric system so that 90 per cent of the teachers will be teaching the metric system predominately and the customary system only incidentally by 1984 in primary, intermediate and secondary classes.

Attending the workshop from Thief River Falls in addition to Mrs. Galliher were five building metric coordinators. They included Ron Leverington, Mark Twain; Ron Ditsch, St. Hilaire; Peter Tri, Northrop; Sue Feeney, Washington; and John Walberg, Franklin.

Council Hears Commissioner Of Aeronautics

million dollars had been expended on the airport through state and federal funds, with another $79,000 scheduled to be spent for a new aviation fuel facility and, possibly, a new hangar.

McCabe said bids for the fuel facility will be received December 4. The low bid is expected to be in the vicinity of $55-65,000, and McCabe proposed that the reminder of the $79,000 be utilized for an initial payment on a new hangar. The city would pay the rest of the hangar construction with the assistance of an interest-free loan from a revolving hangar fund.

Doubt was expressed however whether the airport actually needs a new hangar. Alderman Roger Worth, speaking on behalf of Arctic Enterprises, said the company does not believe a new hangar is necessary at the present time. Council members indicated a decision to support the hangar proposal depends on their assessment of future needs.

McCabe said the department of aeronautics is very satisfied with the municipal airport, and told the council that the airport is capable of accommodating DC-9 traffic.

Teacher Strike At Slayton Is Averted

Threatened first strike in the Minnesota teacher-school board bargaining season was averted recently when teachers ratified an agreement reached hours before in negotiations with members of the Slayton board of education.

Teacher negotiators from the Slayton Education association (SEA is one of nearly 500 locals affiliated with the Minnesota Education association, MEA) began meeting at 7:30 p.m. with board members and the session ran past midnight. The 75 teachers ratified the settlement in a hastily-called pre-school session at 7 a.m.

According to SEA president Gaylen Jensen, high school accounting teacher reporting through the state MEA office, the average increase—including salary and fringe benefits—comes to $2,242. Percentage increase for the two-year contract (1975-77) amounts to 17.6.

A first-year teacher with a baccalaureate degree will begin at $8,700; with a master's degree at $9,500. There are 13 steps in the contract, with increments of $360 for bachelor's degree holders and $380 for those with master's degrees. Fringes include a $620 annual premium payment for family hospitalization.

"The collective bargaining procedure," said Jensen, "was tested to its fullest. Despite numerous difficulties, a strike scheduled for Monday was averted because both sides were willing to compromise in order to prevent disruption of the education process.

"The teachers were supported completely by the association at all levels—local, UniServ and state—plus support from many Local associations in the surrounding area. This experience has convinced us of the importance of unification."

New All-Time High Enrollment Recorded at UMC

A new all-time high enrollment has been recorded at the University of Minnesota technical college—Crookston for the fall quarter, UMC Provost Stanley D. Sahlstrom reported recently. A confirmed total of 930 students are officially enrolled at the two-year technical college, an increase of 9.3 per cent over the 851 enrollees in the fall of 1974.

The pronounced surge in enrollment at UMC has contributed to recordbreaking figures throughout the University of Minnesota system. A benchmark of 55,114 students are taking classes on some campus of the University. That number exceeds last fall's overall enrollment by 6.3 per cent.

UM President C. Peter Magrath has noted that the poor job market of recent months may be stimulating some people to continue their studies.

The roll in the Twin Cities has soared to 45,265, which represents slightly more than a five per cent jump over the fall term last year. The technical college at Waseca (UMW) showed a 32 per cent increase to 705 students at present. The coordinate campuses at Duluth and Morris also experienced an upswing in students, 11.3 per cent more at UMD than a year ago and 2.2 per cent influx at UMM.

The record enrollment throughout the University has been termed "encouraging" by President Magrath. The figures reflect a "vote of confidence" in the educational programs of the University, he declared.

The number of women attending the University continued to rise this fall, with female enrollees accounting for more than 60 per cent of all new students.

Registrants in continuing education and extension programs are not included among the 55,114 reported from all campuses. Another 24,584 are on the rolls in CE and extension classes.

Fire Fighters Aided By New Calling System

An improved system of gathering and disseminating information on forest fire conditions has made it possible for the department of natural resources to adjust its fire fighting forces to anticipated fire conditions.

Under the new plan conference calls are set up between DNR central headquarters in St. Paul and forestry field offices. The forestry radio network is used to gather and disseminate the information to each field office.

The system allows current fire announcements to be made through the DNR's information service to news media.

The national weather service has been cooperating by issuing a fire weather bulletin on a daily basis. The bulletins are patterned after the weather service severe storm warning announcements.

Forestry officials said public response and cooperation has been encouraging.

The highway transportation industry accounts for more than 12 per cent of the gross national product (GNP).

Reservists At Fort Snelling Answer Calls

Army reservists from the 5501 U.S. Army hospital at Fort Snelling are doing their part to help save lives in Minnesota, according to Dr. Warren R. Lawson, state health commissioner.

Since October 13, members of the reserve unit have been answering the special phones installed at the Minnesota department of health for a statewide high blood pressure awareness campaign.

By calling the special numbers, Minnesotans anywhere in the state can find out if blood pressure checks are available without charge in their communities. In the metro free-calling area the number is 296-5555. Outstate residents may call toll free 1-800-652-8720. The phones are answered from 8 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. seven days a week.

Colonel Jane P. Sheehan, chief nurse of the 100-bed army hospital, provides staff and supervises the telephone-answering assignment. This is one of many community activities the hospital unit provides support help. She said the men and women in the reserve unit have varied backgrounds and include college students, teachers, attorneys, practical nurses and medical students. The unit has one of the highest educational levels in the country among enlisted personnel, according to Col. Sheehan. The U.S. Army reserve hospital is under the command of Brigadier General Konald A. Prem, M.C.

The current High blood pressure awareness campaign is directed toward the 125,000 adult Minnesotans who have high blood pressure and don't know it because there are usually no symptoms or warnings until it is too late. Although high blood pressure is not curable, it can be controlled once it is detected. When controlled, Dr. Lawson noted, the risk of heart attacks and strokes is substantially reduced. The simple blood pressure check takes only about 30 seconds.

Blue Lights Signal Road Maintenance

Flashing blue lights signal maintenance operations and serve to alert motorists to the movement of equipment in clearing snow from trunk highways and sanding of curves and bridge decks, State highway maintenance and equipment engineer L. F. McNamara said.

With blue lights distinctive to road maintenance activity, the motoring public is alerted to a specific type of hazard involving generally slower moving or stationary equipment on or near travel lanes. The blue is in contrast to the amber lights used by a wide range of other motor vehicles.

Minnesota state law prohibits the use of blue lights on all vehicles except road maintenance equipment operated by or under contract to the state or a political subdivision.

Researchers Study Lungs And Kidneys

Two University of Minnesota medical researchers have received a $22,000 March of Dimes grant to study the embryonic development of kidneys and lungs.

Drs. David M. Brown and Robert L. Vernier, both professors of pediatrics, have been studying the early biochemical events in organ formation before birth.

They have already assessed the effects of too much oxygen and adrenal hormones on orderly organ growth. Now they will focus on the role of two compounds, cyclic AMP and cyclic GMP, which they believe play a crucial role in regulating the multiplication and differentiation of cells as they develop in the embryo.

As an organ matures its cells multiply through cell division and become specialized for their eventual function within the organ. Scientists believe the cells surfaces undergo biochemical changes during these processes but are uncertain how the changes relate to the maturing process. Brown and Vernier will study the effects of increasing and decreasing the amount of cyclic AMP and cyclic GMP on the organs as they develop under laboratory conditions.

By determining what chemical substances control growth and specialization, Brown and Vernier hope to begin to identify the biochamical events that go awry and malform the organs. Their research may also produce new ways to induce abnormal maturation in the laboratory, a vital step toward understanding how birth defects occur.

12 Mishaps In Police Report

In an exceptionally busy week, the Thief River Falls police department investigated 12 automobile accidents which caused several injuries and total estimated damage of $6,785, and charged 14 individuals on various theft and vandalism offenses.

The unusually high number of accidents is at least partially attributable to the first snowfall of the year, which caused extremely icy driving conditions in spots.

In the first of two accidents reported Wednesday, November 12, Adolph Oseid of Thief River Falls was traveling north on Spruce avenue at approximately 8:05 a.m. when he struck a pedestrian, Ralph Skay of the city, who was walking across the street on the 300 block. Skay sustained bruises to the head and chest area, a cut on the side of his head and broken glasses. Road conditions were reportedly very icy at the time.

At 9:09 a.m., Michael Erickson of Plummer was traveling north on Davis avenue when he attempted to halt at a stop sign, slid into the intersection and struck a car driven by David Rundell of the city, which was headed east on Eighth street. Damages were estimated at $350 to the Erickson car and $175 to the Rundell vehicle.

Two more accidents occurred Thursday. At 4:12 p.m. Vicky Nyberg of Red Lake Falls was driving south on Crocker avenue and Mrs. Leslie Torgerson, TRF, was traveling east on First street when they collided in the intersection, causing an estimated $90 damage to the Nyberg vehicle and $150 damage to the Torgerson car.

At 8:19 p.m., Gordon Markstrom of the city was driving west on Hughes street when he tried to stop behind a vehicle which was waiting for traffic to clear to make a turn, lost control, and struck a parked car owned by Jeffrey Skime of the city. The parked car was then pushed into a stop sign. Estimated damages were $275 to the Markstrom car, $175 to the Skime car and $20 to the sign.

How much life insurance should a family breadwinner carry? It depends on his special circumstances, of course, but as a rule of thumb, the institute of life insurance recommends four to five times annual income. Average coverage, says ILI, is $26,500; that's only about twice the annual income of the average family.

Five-Day Week Dominates U.S. Work Schedule

Five-day week continues to dominate the schedules of American workers, according to data released by the U.S. labor department's bureau of labor statistics.

Once a year statistics on the number of days worked by nonagricultural wage and salary employees on full-time schedules revealed that about 48.4 million employees usually work five days a week; another 8.2 million regularly work five and one-half to seven days, and 1.2 million work less than five full days.

The bureau's report is based on data collected in May of each year, beginning in 1973, through a supplement to the current population survey, the source of the monthly estimates of the employment status of the civilian population.

The relationships observed this May were significantly affected by the economic recession, and comparisons with 1973 and 1974 must be interpreted accordingly. The extent to which secular trends may have been a factor can be determined only when data is available for additional years.

Highlights of the 1975 survey are as follows:

—A decline in the total number of full-time workers in the year ending May 1975 brought decreases in the number of employees in every category of days worked except those fewer than five full days. Changes in the pattern of days worked generally reflected a decline in weekly hours for full-time workers.

—Employees who usually work five and one-half days or more a week declined by 1.3 million, reducing their share of all full-time employees from about 16 to 14 per cent. Most of the decrease was in six-day workers.

—Five-day workers declined by one-half million but increased as a proportion of all full-time workers, from about 82 to 84 per cent.

—Employees who usually worked full time in less than five full days increased by about 140,000 raising their share of all full-time workers to just over two per cent. Most of the increase was in four-day weeks.

Public Concern On Education Is Nationwide

Public concern about public education should not only be year-round but should also reach far beyond the local community, according to Mrs. Pat Beauchane and co-chairpersons of the local MEA sponsoring committee for the 1975 American Education Week, November 16-22.

"The benefits to the local community in greater tax yield from higher-income residents; lure of business and industry; reduced welfare, unemployment and law enforcement costs are well understood," Mrs. Beauchane said. "But we may not fully realize we also have a stake in the qulaity of education in states and neighborhoods outside our own."

"In an increasingly mobile society, relatively few people settle in the city or town where they attended school. They disperse throughout the land. Thus a community can suffer from an inferior school system two thousand miles away."

"Aside from humanitarian considerations," Mrs. Harger added, "the nation's schools—not just our community's schools—are everyone's responsibility." She noted that the theme of American Education Week is "Our Future Is in Our Schools" and that the local school district is the logical starting point, for "America is a nation of communities.

"High population mobility and the greater resources of the federal government argue strongly for increased federal support of education, Mrs. Harger said. "Concerned citizens might look for ways to carry that message more forcefully to representatives in Washington. State and local governments now provide more than 92 per cent of the public school dollar."

St. Paul FU Grain Terminal Net Announced

Farmers Union grain terminal association, St. Paul, recently reported net earnings of $29.2 million on a grain volume of 257 million bushels for the year ended May 31, 1975.

Both figures are down from the previous year when the grain marketing and processing cooperative reported record earnings of $42.5 million on a record grain handle of 326 million bushels.

"A shorter 1974 crop reduced marketings by our member elevators and our margins per bushel were down slightly," a GTA spokesman said, "but strong demand for processed grains and for the products of the farm supply divisions made it possible for GTA to achieve the second highest net earnings in its history."

He said higher prices for grains and oilseeds and their products brought total revenues to almost $1.3 billion, an increase of $114 million over the previous year and a new record.

Member ownership also set a record at $125 million, an increase of $22 million, with most of the increase in expansion of processing facilities and other developments aimed at increased GTA participation in the export market.

GTA shares ownership of an export elevator on the Mississippi River near New Orleans with five other regional grain marketing cooperatives. The group announced recently it is planning another export elevator to be located on the Texas Gulf Coast.

Patronage dividends on GTA earnings are now being determined and will be distributed to members within a few weeks. Coop earnings are distributed as dividends per bushel marketed or per dollar of supplies purchased.

GTA's board of directors has voted that 20 per cent of this year's earnings are to be paid in cash and 80 per cent retained for operating capital. Patrons receive capital equity certificates for the retained earnings and hold them for later redemption. Cash payments and equity retirements this year will be $7.1 million.

One of the nation's largest grain marketing cooperatives, GTA has 464 member associations which represent 150,000 individual patron-owners in ten midwest and northwest states. Through GTA they own and operate 150 line elevators, 119 building supply yards, 13 poultry and livestock feed manufacturing plants, two oilseed processing plants, three edible bean processing facilities, three barley malting plants and a mill for grinding durum, a hard wheat used in the manufacture of spaghetti and macaroni products.

FU Features World Food Council Man

Executive director of the United Nations world food council in Rome, will be the featured speaker at the Minnesota Farmers Union (MFU) 34th annual convention, November 23-25, at the Prom center in St. Paul.

In making the announcement, Cy Carpenter, MFU state president, said Dr. John Hannah will be heading a program designed to discuss issues of vital importance to farmers.

Hannah will discuss the world food outlook during his banquet speech Tuesday night. Other issues to be reviewed during the three-day convention are the energy outlook for rural Minnesota, urban-rural relationships, important state and national legislative issues and the role Minnesota will play in these issues.

About 1,500 MFU members and interested persons are expected to attend the three-day convention.

UMC To Host Environmental Groups Meet

A better coordination of activities is the goal of two environmental groups who will meet Thursday at the University of Minnesota technical college campus at Crookston. Meeting that day will be members of the Minnesota environmental education board and the All-University council on environmental quality.

The University group will hold its quarterly business meeting, and the Environmental education board will conduct its monthly meeting in the morning. Following the separate meetings, the two groups will hold a joint panel discussion at 1:30 p.m. The groups will consider ways in which activities and efforts dealing with the environment can be coordinated for the best results.

The MEE board is comprised of environmentalists from throughout Minnesota who have been appointed by Governor Wendell Anderson. The All-University council on environmental quality is made up of representatives of colleges within the University system who are interested and involved in environmental problems. The council disseminates information and encourages research procedures dealing with environment. That group also has the authority to issue grants for research and to support requests for grants from other sources.

Dr. Phil Buckley, associate professor in natural resources at UMC and a member of both environmental groups, is arranging for the Crookston meetings.

Some discussion will be held at the joint meeting concerning land use planning. The meeting is open, and interested persons are welcome to attend.

Strong Prowler Swim Programs

Swimming has suddenly emerged as one of the most successful sports for both boys and girls on the Lincoln high school athletic scene.

Coach John Hustad's Prowler girls won the 1975 North Central Region championship last week and will send 12 swimmers to this week's state meet at Hamline University in St. Paul.

The Prowler North Central triumph capped a highly successful 1975 season in which the girls won eight of nine dual meets, won all three triangulars they participated in and captured championship honors at Fergus Falls in their only invitational meet appearance.

Thief River Falls' only blemish on an otherwise perfect 1975 season was a 105-98 dual meet defeat at the hands of Brainerd, a meet decided by one second in the final race.

Coach John Kopari has already predicted championship honors for his squad when the North Central boys' meet rolls around in February. Thief River Falls was a title threat a year ago, finishing fourth in the North Central event after a strong 10-4 regular season dual meet mark.

In addition, now-graduated Dave Borning brought Thief River Falls state-wide swimming recognition by winning two races in the 1975 state meet in Minneapolis.

Both programs are relatively new, but both teams have already accumulated remarkable accomplishments.

Good luck wishes go out today to the state meet-qualifying Prowler girls.

Prichard Is UND Assistant Swim Coach

In another swimming-related item, Lincoln high school graduate Gordon Prichard is serving as an assistant swimming coach at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks.

Prichard was a four-year letterman with the Sioux before graduating in 1975.

Although an assistant, Prichard is almost acting as Sioux head coach at this time because North Dakota head swimming coach Pat Behrns is currently spending most of his time with the UND football team. Behrns is the full-time defensive backfield coach of the number one ranked undefeated and untied Sioux football team that will host an NCAA Division II post-season playoff game November 29.

"It's impossible for me to attend all our swimming practices since our football team will be involved in an NCAA playoff game November 29," said Behrns. "My fine assistant Gordon Prichard and some of our veteran swimmers have really done a fine job of getting the team ready. I'm very pleased with their leadership, especially coach Prichard."

North Dakota opens its swimming season December 6 at the Jackrabbit Relays at Brookings, S.D. Should the Sioux football team win its November 29 first round NCAA Division II playoff game, UND would advance to the NCAA semifinals December 6 at either Baton Rouge, La. or Wichita Falls, Texas. And a Sioux semifinal win would advance the team to the NCAA Division II championship game December 13 in the Camellia Bowl at Sacramento, Calif.

It looks like Prichard will be kept pretty busy over the next month.

A current member of the North Dakota swim team is Doug Williams, a sophomore letterman from Thief River Falls. Williams was the Sioux most valuable swimmer a year ago when he set UND school records in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle events. He placed third in the North Central Conference 100-yard freestyle, fourth in the 50-yard freestyle and second in the 100-yard backstroke last March. He'll swim those sprints again this winter.

Goddard Among Sioux Leaders

One-time Thief River Falls hockey standout Tom Goddard ranks third in the current University of North Dakota hockey team scoring charts with five goals and six assists for 11 points in eight games.

The junior right winger trails only Joe DeIure with 14 points and Dave Geving with 12 points in the Sioux scoring race. Mike Burggraf, a freshman wing from Roseau, has two goals and eight assists for 10 points.

Burggraf, Goddard and DeIure rank as the most productive Sioux line.

1975-76 LHS Hockey

Experience Should Help Improve Prowler Record

Coach Bill McGann's Lincoln high school hockey team will be the first Prowler winter sports squad to open its 1975-76 season Saturday when Thief River Falls takes part in the sixth annual Region Eight jamboree at Roseau.

Granted, the Prowlers won't officially open their season until a Mon., Dec. 2, test against Moorhead here, but this week's jamboree will be the first competition for a Prowler team outside of a few controlled scrimmages.

McGann hopes to make use of a year's worth of experience this winter to make amends for a lackluster 1974-75 campaign that produced just eight wins in 22 starts for the then-youthful Prowlers.

"Right now we're concerned about just how much we've learned with a year of experience," offered McGann. "We've got a lot of people back and they've got a lot of pride. They know they have to redeem themselves for last year. Their looking to improve upon last year's record."

Ten lettermen fill nearly half of the current list of varsity skaters, headed by senior captain Mike Jury who will be playing wing on a line that features senior Jeff Lindquist at center and senior Bob Forberg on the other wing. The line is conceivably the Prowlers' strongest forward unit.

Another threesome of proven ability features sophomore Doug Dallmann at center and juniors Tim Loeffler and Jay Kverno at wings. All three are lettermen.

A year ago Lindquist produced 19 points to rank fourth in the Prowler scoring charts while Jury had 14, Dallmann 12 and Loeffler 11.

"We feel we have two experienced forward lines," explained McGann. "Now we have to find a third one."

A pair of units are trying to earn that third line status. An all-junior threesome includes center Scott Bergland and wings Brad Kosel and Gordie Markstrom while an all-sophomore outfit includes center Paul Phelps and wingers Steve Geatz and Lyle Johnson.

"We think we've got the people to put the puck in the net," said McGann about his forwards.

Defense is expected to feature the Prowlers' greatest improvement this winter. "We've got four experienced defensemen," pointed out McGann. "We should be able to move the puck out of our own end a lot better. We hope our defense will be a lot more solid than last year when it was one of our weaker spots because of our inexperience."

Four Prowler lettermen playing defense include senior Kent Ehrenstrom who is skating with junior Mitch Dicken, and senior Chris Biegner who is paired with junior Bill Olson. Juniors Steve Erickson and Sheldon Idso form a third defensive set.

McGann is looking for a goaltender to assert himself during the preseason drills to take over the reigns of now graduated Murray Melander. Senior Terry Sullivan and juniors Keith Daley and Joel Klosterman all eye the net-minding job, but none of the three have varsity experience.

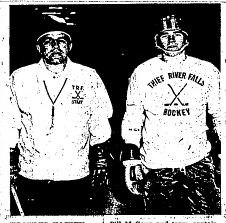
"We're going to have to find a solid goaltender," stated McGann. "We feel out of those three we'll find one; we're just going to let them battle it out."

Skaters currently working with the junior varsity include juniors John Ballingrud and Paul Wurst, sophomores Roger Roadfelt and Luke Noreen and freshmen Murray Dicken, Jeff Kosel, Scott Sabo, Kurt Klosterman and Dan Winjum as forwards; sophomores Tom Zieman, Mike Olson, Brent Walton, Joel Ranum and Mike Brieger and freshman Joe Dee as defensemen; and junior goalie Mike Noreen.

"We took our lumps last year," admitted McGann, "but we have a year of experience and with that comes confidence."

Thief River Falls faces a challenging 20-game schedule this winter, beginning with the Moorhead game in the sports arena. "The first 12 games on the schedule are tough, and the last eight don't get any easier," quipped McGann.

John Schmitz will again serve as McGann's varsity assistant coach while newcomer Glen Chiodo takes over the junior varsity squad.



PROWLER HOCKEY coach Bill McGann and team captain Mike Jury will lead Thief River Falls during the 1975-76 high school hockey season. The Prowlers will initiate the new season Saturday by taking part in the sixth annual Region Eight hockey jamboree at Roseau.

Prowlers Enter State Swimming Meet Friday

A delegation of 12 Lincoln high school girls will represent Thief River Falls in the first annual Minnesota state girls' swimming meet this weekend in St. Paul.

The event will be staged in the Hamline University pool in St. Paul. Competition will start Friday with the diving preliminaries at 10 a.m., the swimming prelims at 2 and the diving semifinals and consolation finals at 7:30. Swimming and diving finals will start at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Thief River Falls state meet entries include junior Joan Jury in both the 200 and 400 yard freestyle races, freshman Beth Nichols in the 50-yard backstroke, freshman Marci Pluth in the 100-yard freestyle, the 400-yard freestyle relay team consisting of junior Shelly Lund, senior Joy Grant, Pluth and Jury and the 200-yard medley relay team made up of freshmen Nichols, Deb Williams, Georgi Desrocher and Kathy Omdahl.

Accompanying the eight Prowler swimmers will be four relay team alternates to be used in case of illness or injury. Senior Jodi Dallmann and freshman Kari Worner will back-up the 200-yard medley relay team members while senior Kim Wigness and eighth grader Johanna Desrocher serve as alternates to the 400-yard freestyle unit.

Thief River Falls advanced its state meet performers through last week's North Central Region swim meet at the University of Minnesota-Morris. The Prowlers won the North Central team title with a 262-point effort. Brainerd finished second with 222 points. However, state meet entrance was earned on an individual basis and not in a team manner. The first two place finishers in each North Central Region event advanced to the state meet.

Jury won both the 200 and 400-yard freestyle races at Morris. The other three Prowler state meet berths were earned with runner-up place finishes.

The Prowler swimmers and coach John Hustad plan to leave Thief River Falls tomorrow (Thursday) morning, hoping to arrive in St. Paul in time for an afternoon practice session at Hamline.

Hustad is unsure how his squad members will fare against state meet quality opponents. "I think they have the potential to do even better than they did at Morris," predicted Hustad. "They've set some goals they want to attain at the state meet. "We'll just have to set back and see what happens."

Prowlers To Host Jacks In Opener

Lincoln high school girls' basketball team opens a demanding 14-game 1975-76 season schedule Monday when the Prowlers host Bemidji in a 7:30 p.m. ball game in the Lincoln gym.

Elevated to Class AA status this year, the Prowlers' schedule has been toughened considerably with the addition of strong Class AA opponents Bemidji and Moorhead for a pair of home-and-away series.

The adjustment to Class AA ball won't be easy for the Prowlers who have just one letterman returning from Lincoln's strong 1974-75 squad. Marty Minor is the only Prowler with varsity experience. The 5-1 senior guard is the shortest ball player on the squad.

"We're a young team," admitted Prowler coach Judy Charlebois, "but once they get some varsity experience, I'm sure we'll do alright. All of the kids have playing experience on the B squad; it's just a matter of adjusting to the varsity level."

Minor, senior Jane Achenbach and junior Joan Engel are the only upperclassmen on the current Prowler varsity roster. The other seven spots are held down by sophomores, including Cheri Onkka, Jodi Lindblom, Laural Sylvester, Carrie Sollom, Marchelle Cuppett, Pam Matheny and Laura Larson.

Onkka at 5-11 is the tallest Prowler on the team that averages 5-7 in height.

Prowler practice drills are held in the Thief River Falls city auditorium. "We're working to move the ball around and look for the open shot," explained Charlebois in basketball-talk. "We're going to have to work the ball around and move it inside to get the close-in shots," she added.

Mary Hinckley serves as Charlebois' assistant coach, working mostly with a junior varsity squad that numbers 19 players.

Prowler Home Schedule

Nordics May Field Best Cage Squad In 1975-76

Marshall County Central high school in Newfolden, boasting a wealth of returning talent, is anticipating a highly successful 1975-76 winter season, reported veteran Nordic head coach Ron Ueland.

"We're planning on being pretty good," Ueland stated matter-of-factly. "We feel this could very well be our best team in my nine years here."

Seven ball players who all started at some time during the 1974-75 season return to the Nordic line-up this year, prompting Ueland's preseason confidence. There was only one senior on last year's Newfolden roster.

Heading the list of returning Nordic starters is 6-5 junior center Mike Fincher, probably the most dominating ball player in District 32. Fincher averaged 16 points per game a year ago when he set a school record with 316 rebounds, averaging 13.2 caroms per game. He also blocked 34 shots.

Joining Fincher in the front court on various occasions last year were 6-2 senior Joel Waterworth, 6-1 junior Jeff Busch and 6-0 junior Kevin Sethre.

Newfolden's backcourt is smartly handled by 5-11 seniors Bruce Rokke and Jeff Sorenson. Rokke averaged 12 points and 12 rebounds per game last year while Sorenson spent a great deal of his time handing out assists—a record 130 of them to be exact for an average of 5.4 per game. Sorenson also found time to score nearly 10 points each outing.

"We'll have good size and experience going for us," pointed out Ueland. "We were a strong rebounding team last year, and I don't plan to get out-rebounded at all this year."

Depth is obviously another Newfolden asset. "We feel we have 10 kids who will be pretty good ball players for us," said Ueland.

Other varsity ball players who are expected to see action this winter include 6-3 senior Dan Kujava, 5-11 senior Randy Skjerven, 5-8 senior Duane Floberg, 6-0 senior Randy Hanson, 5-7 junior Darwin Nelson and 6-0 sophomore Pat Yutzrenka.

Ueland plans to put his height and rebounding edge to good use this season. "We'll probably speed up our game a little more than usual," he indicated. "I think when you have good size you can run, and our guards look real strong. We'll run a controlled fast break."

Despite the abundance of strong points, Newfolden is not without its problems, admitted Ueland. "Defense will be our weakness," he said. "We've got some slow people, but we hope we'll be able to play man to man (defense) as much as possible instead of the combination zone we used last year."

And the Nordics' exceptionally strong line-up will not bring any automatic North Border Conference or District 32 championship honors because, as Ueland explained, Middle River and Baudette are also fielding what may be their strongest ball clubs ever and Karlstad might very well boast the finest team ever produced in District 32.

"The competition is going to be tough," acknowledged Ueland, "but we expect to be right in there with the rest of them."

Jim Pederson and Sam Gebhardt will serve as Nordic assistant coaches.

Team Arctic Profiles . . .

Mechanics Are Key To Driver Success

When a snowmobile race enthusiast talks about teamwork and the best in the industry, some people at Arctic Enterprises think of a three-man team of race mechanics who are often unsung heroes in Arctic's race team efforts: Duane Gram, who works with Larry Coltom; Durmont Wahl, who teams with Dave Thompson; and Dennis Zuwalski (who the Arctic Z is named after, because of his idea for a suspension system changeover) who assists Bob Elsner.

These are the men whose fine-tuned ears can discern the telltale rattling that indicates carburetion off just a shade. Or who can watch one of their drivers so closely that they know exactly what tools to have in hand when he comes into the pits.

Their trained eyes looking over a snowmobile oval track help Team Arctic racers spot precisely where the best track to run is. They will often suggest to a driver who is faring poorly in the heats a better place to run. It can often make the difference between winning and losing.

During the off-season the Team Arctic mechanics sometimes put in upwards of 300 to 400 hours of experimentation and testing on a machine to prepare it for each race season. During the race season, they are legendary for their round-the-clock schedules between race weekends.

They are also fast at working on equipment. Between heats they can change a track in seven to eight minutes. At West Yellowstone last year, for example, the mechanical team built an entire 650 engine from parts, pulled an engine from another sled and installed their track-made engine in a grand total of 27 minutes. It would take an average experienced snowmobiler eight to 10 hours to perform the same feat.

Even though they're fast, a most difficult time for a mechanic is the shortness of time between heats. "You know what you've got to do," says Zuwalski, "but you just don't have enough time to get it done."

When the race starts, the mechanic has done everything he could and you would think the race mechanics could take it easy. "Not so," says Gram. "We've got butterflies worse than the race drivers."

It's ultimately on the shoulders of Roger Skime, 31-year-old engineering vice-president, where the overall management of the engineering department and race responsibility rests for drivers, test drivers, and mechanics of Team Arctic. This team and its race track efforts and long hours in the technical lab is behind the engineering and development of Arctic's line of high performance snowmobiles: the Pantera cross country model; consumer performance El Tigre; hot stocker El Tigre Z; and completely redisigned Team Arctic sleds for 1976.

Coltom, who has worked with Skime the longest of any member of the team, terms Skime "The man behind it all—the man who makes our performance snowmobiles go. He's the man who inspires our efforts to create the best race team and best performance snowmobiles as a result of that effort," Coltom says.

Skime himself is quite modest about taking any credit for the company's performance.

"We use the race season to work as a team and find the areas we need to work on to be competitive," he says. Each year, Skime's staff charts all race times and machine times, and sets standards to work toward the coming year's snowmobiles. Goals for power and acceleration levels are set.

"It used to be that we could get out there with any sled in the Arctic line and race and we were competitive. Today much of what the industry produced is so close technically, it takes extra hours to provide any edge. Driver skill and fine tuning are the ingredients to get that fine edge."

"That's what racing's all about—getting your machine tuned to a fine edge," Skime adds. "Fine tuning is always the difference between being in the winner's circle and being forgotten. With an average lap speed of 60 mph on the track, a one-half second behind the leader means you're 44 feet behind. . .they don't even know you're there."

Grygla Quint Is Rebuilding

Grygla high school will initiate its 1975-76 basketball season Friday when coach Van Swanson's Eagles take part in jamboree action at Roseau.

The jamboree appearance will be significant because the Eagles will be playing Baudette, Grygla's regular season opening foe. The Eagles and Bears clash Tues., Dec. 2, at Baudette to start the year.

Although Grygla will be fielding only its second interscholastic basketball team this winter, Swanson labels 1975-76 as a rebuilding year following the graduation loss of the team's top three ball players.

However, seniors Jeff Stanley and Gary Satre return after spending the 1974-75 season in the Eagles' starting line-up. Stanley is a 5-11 forward while Satre stands 5-8 and plays a guard. Satre ranked among the team leaders a year ago with an 11 point scoring average. He also handed out a team-high 66 assists.

Seniors Arlo Hagen, a 5-11 forward, and Dwight Ruud, a 5-10 guard, will probably fit into the Grygla starting line-up along with 6-1 junior center Don Verbout who shares the distinction of being the Eagles' tallest player with junior Darwin Klamer and sophomore Tony Moe.

"We're quite small," admitted Swanson. "We're going to have to try to press and fast break if we can. Otherwise, we'll try ball control and try to cut down our mistakes and limit our opponents' scoring opportunities."

Other ball players working out with the ball club include 5-4 junior Alan Lunsetter, 5-8 junior Bruce Smeby, 5-6 sophomore Steve Rundell, 5-8 sophomore Roger Smeby and 6-0 sophomore Bob Norby.

There are also six freshmen with the Eagles, including 6-0 Terry Ruud, 6-0 Steve Anderson, 6-0 Paul Lillevold, 5-8 Jim Morrissey, 5-9 Bruce Jelle and 5-8 Richard Norby.

Kurt Vandermeer will serve as Swanson's assistant coach this winter.

Friday night's jamboree at Roseau will find Roseau playing Warroad at 6:30 p.m., followed by the Grygla-Baudette match-up at 7:15 and a Middle River-Badger clash at 8.

Grygla's 1975-76 home opener is scheduled Tues., Dec. 9, when the Eagles host Roseau.

TRF YOUTH HOCKEY

by Ron Novak,
Program Director

Youth hockey program is slowly swinging into full gear with all of the teams receiving limited ice time while awaiting ice in the old arena and on the outdoor rinks.

During the next few weeks this column will explain the different levels of the hockey program and how each program will be run this year.

Bantam Division

The Bantam division is open to all boys 13-14 years old born on or after January 1, 1961. Fifty-seven boys have registered in the Bantam program.

In the past, the Bantams conducted an In-House and traveling team program. However, no In-House program will be used this year. The Bantams will all play on traveling teams, either the Bantam A, Bantam B or Bantam C teams.

The Bantam A team is co-sponsored by the Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA) and the VFW. Coaches Rick Holmes and Bill Poole are currently working with 17 players. The team's 28-game schedule starts with a December 7 opener against Crookston.

The Bantam B team will play approximately 25 games under the direction of Gus Holmes and Mike Onkka. The 20-member team will also open its season December 7 against Crookston.

The newly formed Bantam C team will be coached by Art Cloutier. About 15 players are currently preparing for a 12-15-game schedule.

Coaches Clinic

A clinic for all youth hockey coaches will be held Saturday at the East Grand Forks Civic Center.

The clinic is designed to improve the coaches knowledge of the game and to aid the coaches in player-parent relationship. The clinic will feature a two-hour morning classroom session, a two-hour afternoon session on the ice and a one-hour summary session.

Coaches interested in taking part in the clinic should call 681-3989.

Candy Sale

The annual Thief River Falls youth hockey candy sale is currently being conducted throughout the city. Candy sale director Arve Moser urges all boys to return money and candy as early as possible.

Fosston Girls In Volleyball State Tourney

Fosston and St. Cloud Tech will represent Region Eight when the second annual Minnesota State High School League state girls' volleyball tournament gets underway this weekend at Halenbeck Hall on the campus of St. Cloud State University.

Competition will be conducted in two classes—AA and A—in the two-day affair which will feature eight regional champions from each of the two classifications. Fosston will represent Region Eight A and St. Cloud Tech represents Region Eight AA.

Friday's quarterfinal action will begin at 12 noon, with semifinal play on tap for 6 p.m. that night. The championship session commences at 12 noon, Saturday.

Friday afternoon Class A matches will find Region Two A champion Windom (15-1) facing Benson (18-0), the Region Three A titlist, in one upper bracket match with Breckenridge (14-2) of Region Six A going against Moose Lake (18-0) of Region Seven A in the other match.

Lower bracket Class A pairings find Region Five A winner Sartell (17-2) squaring off with Fosston (17-2) in one matchup while Kenyon (16-2) of Region One A will test Nicollet (17-2) of Region Four A in the other.

During all three tournament sessions—Friday afternoon, Friday evening, and Saturday afternoon—all matches will be conducted on three courts simultaneously through the completion of the consolation and third place championships Saturday afternoon. At that time the Class A championship match will be conducted, followed by the Class AA championship.

In Class A competition unbeaten Benson is considered the team to beat.

In the Class AA tournament, upper bracket pairings show Chaska (14-1) of Region Two AA battling Mounds View (11-7), the Region Four AA winner, and St. Paul Highland Park (15-2) of Region Three AA going against Region Five AA winner Minneapolis Southwest (14-2).

The Class AA lower bracket pairings find Austin (13-0) of Region One AA pitting its unbeaten record against once-beaten Hibbing (16-1) of Region Seven AA and Wayzata (15-3), the Region Six AA kingpin, will put its forces up against St. Cloud Tech (16-2).

Minnetonka Is Labeled Swim Meet Favorite

For the first time since 1942 a Minnesota State High School League state girls' swimming meet will be conducted Friday and Saturday at Hamline University in St. Paul.

The 20th ever state meet will begin with diving preliminaries Friday at 10 a.m. Swimming preliminaries are on tap for 2 p.m. Friday, followed by diving semifinals at 7:30 p.m. Finals in all 13 events are set for 2 p.m. Saturday.

Not since the days of fancy diving and the plunge has a state meet been held for girls. During that period of 1924 to 1942 the 19 state meets were conducted by the MSHSL in Biwabik and Virginia. Virginia captured 15 state titles. Other state champions included Biwabik and Nashwauk. The schools participating during that time were from the Iron Range area.

This week's state meet will include over 300 participants from 69 schools. There were 108 schools throughout the state that had girls swimming programs this fall.

West Metro Section champion Minnetonka is the favorite to capture team honors. The Skippers are coached by Paul Stearnes and Nick Jambeck. Other sectional team champions entered include Robbinsdale, Minneapolis Southwest, Rochester Mayo, Thief River Falls, Virginia, Bloomington Jefferson and Irondale.

Among the individual participants Rachel Mudgett of Brainerd had the top seed time in two events in sectional competition. Mudgett will attempt to capture top honors in both the 50 and 100-yard backstroke races.

The list of top seed times in swimming events are as follows:

Minn. DNR Protests Iowa Carp Stocking

Minnesota commissioner of natural resources Robert Herbst asserted that the stocking of the exotic amur (grass carp) by the Iowa conservation commission poses a threat to lakes and streams in Minnesota and the state's tourist industry.

The department recently sent a study team to Iowa to get a first hand look at that state's amur research program.

The study team learned that private individuals have been stocking farm ponds and other waters with the amur for some time. They explained that Iowa laws do not prohibit the importation and stocking of fish in private waters.

Importation and stocking of exotic species into Minnesota waters is prohibited by state law and DNR regulations. Department officials said that any amurs discovered in private ponds in this state would result in destruction of the fish and a citation for the pond owner.

Minnesota fisheries specialists are convinced that the amur will eventually escape and find its way into this state.

They said that even in Red Haw Lake, the Iowa amur study site, there are no controls to prevent downstream migration of the fish during high water. After leaving the lake and passing through two more reservoir lakes, the carp would reach the Des Moines river which flows out of southern Minnesota into Iowa.

The fish have been found in the Mississippi as far north as Quincy, Illinois. The locks and dams on the river have not prevented upstream migration of other species, Minnesota officials noted.

Iowa, Arkansas and other states experimenting with amur are interested in developing a biological control on vegetation but that reduction in weed beds is only accomplished with very dense populations of the fish. Also, it was learned that the small amur feed preferably on aquatic insects.

Minnesota officials are gravely concerned about the possible effect of grass carp on wild rice beds and on aquatic vegetation needed by waterfowl and furbearers.

They are also concerned that the destruction of rooted vegetation by the amur will result in prolific algal blooms in southern Minnesota lakes. The inefficient degestive system of the amur, which results in the passage of partly digested plant matter into the water, enhances fertility and stimulates algal growth.

Minnesota fisheries experts believe that the same kind of mistake that resulted years ago in the importation of the German carp is being repeated in the case of the amur.

"Apparently," said Charles Burrows, fisheries chief, "certain elements of the fisheries community have failed to learn from the documented history on the inadequately researched introduction of some exotic species of wildlife.

"I had hoped that the time had passed when states carried out stocking programs without regard for the consequences to waters in neighboring states of the views of other natural resource agencies."

The amur was first brought to the United States by the federal fish and wildlife service from Asia. Its behavior was studied in Arkansas waters from which it subsequently escaped. It has since been artificially propagated and stocked by Arkansas.

The unannounced introduction of the fish brought a rapid and negative response from national professional fisheries groups such as the American fisheries society and the sport fishing institute.

The amur possesses tremendous leaping abilities and Burrows said carp barriers on southern Minnesota rivers will be "ineffective" in preventing movement of the amur into the state.

He said the ability of the fish to leap and its wariness makes it very difficult to take with standard commercial fishing gear. In addition, the amur can seldom be induced to take a lure, he said, unless the fish has eaten everything available in the pond in which it has been stocked.

Burrows said he believes that some fisheries workers in states to the south are unconcerned about the possibility of uncontrolled reproduction of the amur because these states do not have the climatic conditions necessary for successful spawning.

But he said that Minnesota and some other of the western Great Lakes region states have conditions nearly identical to those found in the Amur valley in northern Asia where the fish is native and that natural spawning and "uncontrolled proliferation" is a definite danger in these areas.

He said further that there should be a national effort to control the propagation of this fish in the United States until its potential impact on the valuable fishing and waterfowl waters of the north is determined.

As Commissioner of natural resources, Herbst said he was planning a direct appeal to both the U.S. department of Interior and to the director of the Iowa conservation department to bring a serious situation under control.

MSU External Studies Plan Starts Dec. 1

A required orientation class for all persons over 25 years of age who wish to enter Moorhead state university's (MSU) external studies program will meet during the winter quarter on the MSU campus.

Entitled "Educational Planning," the class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. four Tuesday evenings, beginning December 2.

Two additional sessions will be required of all students but will be devoted to individual counseling with the instructor and can be held at the student's convenience.

The external studies program is designed to help adult persons obtain a college degree through part-time study and class attendance and by offering some credits for their past vocational or avocational experiences and achievements.

Purpose of the required preliminary class is to assist such students in developing a possible educational plan for acquiring a bachelor's degree. The class will explore competencies developed in personal, community and work experiences and help evaluate whether such background is acceptable for college credit. The university's expectations concerning course work will be discussed and information about college counseling will be given.

TRF YOUTH HOCKEY

by Ron Novak,
Program Director

Youth hockey program is slowly swinging into full gear with all of the teams receiving limited ice time while awaiting ice in the old arena and on the outdoor rinks.

During the next few weeks this column will explain the different levels of the hockey program and how each program will be run this year.

Bantam Division

The Bantam division is open to all boys 13-14 years old born on or after January 1, 1961. Fifty-seven boys have registered in the Bantam program.

In the past, the Bantams conducted an In-House and traveling team program. However, no In-House program will be used this year. The Bantams will all play on traveling teams, either the Bantam A, Bantam B or Bantam C teams.

The Bantam A team is co-sponsored by the Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA) and the VFW. Coaches Rick Holmes and Bill Poole are currently working with 17 players. The team's 28-game schedule starts with a December 7 opener against Crookston.

The Bantam B team will play approximately 25 games under the direction of Gus Holmes and Mike Onkka. The 20-member team will also open its season December 7 against Crookston.

The newly formed Bantam C team will be coached by Art Cloutier. About 15 players are currently preparing for a 12-15-game schedule.

Coaches Clinic

A clinic for all youth hockey coaches will be held Saturday at the East Grand Forks Civic Center.

The clinic is designed to improve the coaches knowledge of the game and to aid the coaches in player-parent relationship. The clinic will feature a two-hour morning classroom session, a two-hour afternoon session on the ice and a one-hour summary session.

Coaches interested in taking part in the clinic should call 681-3989.

Candy Sale

The annual Thief River Falls youth hockey candy sale is currently being conducted throughout the city. Candy sale director Arve Moser urges all boys to return money and candy as early as possible.

Fosston Girls In Volleyball State Tourney

Fosston and St. Cloud Tech will represent Region Eight when the second annual Minnesota State High School League state girls' volleyball tournament gets underway this weekend at Halenbeck Hall on the campus of St. Cloud State University.

Competition will be conducted in two classes—AA and A—in the two-day affair which will feature eight regional champions from each of the two classifications. Fosston will represent Region Eight A and St. Cloud Tech represents Region Eight AA.

Friday's quarterfinal action will begin at 12 noon, with semifinal play on tap for 6 p.m. that night. The championship session commences at 12 noon, Saturday.

Friday afternoon Class A matches will find Region Two A champion Windom (15-1) facing Benson (18-0), the Region Three A titlist, in one upper bracket match with Breckenridge (14-2) of Region Six A going against Moose Lake (18-0) of Region Seven A in the other match.

Lower bracket Class A pairings find Region Five A winner Sartell (17-2) squaring off with Fosston (17-2) in one matchup while Kenyon (16-2) of Region One A will test Nicollet (17-2) of Region Four A in the other.

During all three tournament sessions—Friday afternoon, Friday evening, and Saturday afternoon—all matches will be conducted on three courts simultaneously through the completion of the consolation and third place championships Saturday afternoon. At that time the Class A championship match will be conducted, followed by the Class AA championship.

In Class A competition unbeaten Benson is considered the team to beat.

In the Class AA tournament, upper bracket pairings show Chaska (14-1) of Region Two AA battling Mounds View (11-7), the Region Four AA winner, and St. Paul Highland Park (15-2) of Region Three AA going against Region Five AA winner Minneapolis Southwest (14-2).

The Class AA lower bracket pairings find Austin (13-0) of Region One AA pitting its unbeaten record against once-beaten Hibbing (16-1) of Region Seven AA and Wayzata (15-3), the Region Six AA kingpin, will put its forces up against St. Cloud Tech (16-2).

Minnetonka Is Labeled Swim Meet Favorite

For the first time since 1942 a Minnesota State High School League state girls' swimming meet will be conducted Friday and Saturday at Hamline University in St. Paul.

The 20th ever state meet will begin with diving preliminaries Friday at 10 a.m. Swimming preliminaries are on tap for 2 p.m. Friday, followed by diving semifinals at 7:30 p.m. Finals in all 13 events are set for 2 p.m. Saturday.

Not since the days of fancy diving and the plunge has a state meet been held for girls. During that period of 1924 to 1942 the 19 state meets were conducted by the MSHSL in Biwabik and Virginia. Virginia captured 15 state titles. Other state champions included Biwabik and Nashwauk. The schools participating during that time were from the Iron Range area.

This week's state meet will include over 300 participants from 69 schools. There were 108 schools throughout the state that had girls swimming programs this fall.

West Metro Section champion Minnetonka is the favorite to capture team honors. The Skippers are coached by Paul Stearnes and Nick Jambeck. Other sectional team champions entered include Robbinsdale, Minneapolis Southwest, Rochester Mayo, Thief River Falls, Virginia, Bloomington Jefferson and Irondale.

Among the individual participants Rachel Mudgett of Brainerd had the top seed time in two events in sectional competition. Mudgett will attempt to capture top honors in both the 50 and 100-yard backstroke races.

The list of top seed times in swimming events are as follows:

Minn. DNR Protests Iowa Carp Stocking

Minnesota commissioner of natural resources Robert Herbst asserted that the stocking of the exotic amur (grass carp) by the Iowa conservation commission poses a threat to lakes and streams in Minnesota and the state's tourist industry.

The department recently sent a study team to Iowa to get a first hand look at that state's amur research program.

The study team learned that private individuals have been stocking farm ponds and other waters with the amur for some time. They explained that Iowa laws do not prohibit the importation and stocking of fish in private waters.

Importation and stocking of exotic species into Minnesota waters is prohibited by state law and DNR regulations. Department officials said that any amurs discovered in private ponds in this state would result in destruction of the fish and a citation for the pond owner.

Minnesota fisheries specialists are convinced that the amur will eventually escape and find its way into this state.

They said that even in Red Haw Lake, the Iowa amur study site, there are no controls to prevent downstream migration of the fish during high water. After leaving the lake and passing through two more reservoir lakes, the carp would reach the Des Moines river which flows out of southern Minnesota into Iowa.

The fish have been found in the Mississippi as far north as Quincy, Illinois. The locks and dams on the river have not prevented upstream migration of other species, Minnesota officials noted.

Iowa, Arkansas and other states experimenting with amur are interested in developing a biological control on vegetation but that reduction in weed beds is only accomplished with very dense populations of the fish. Also, it was learned that the small amur feed preferably on aquatic insects.

Minnesota officials are gravely concerned about the possible effect of grass carp on wild rice beds and on aquatic vegetation needed by waterfowl and furbearers.

They are also concerned that the destruction of rooted vegetation by the amur will result in prolific algal blooms in southern Minnesota lakes. The inefficient degestive system of the amur, which results in the passage of partly digested plant matter into the water, enhances fertility and stimulates algal growth.

Minnesota fisheries experts believe that the same kind of mistake that resulted years ago in the importation of the German carp is being repeated in the case of the amur.

"Apparently," said Charles Burrows, fisheries chief, "certain elements of the fisheries community have failed to learn from the documented history on the inadequately researched introduction of some exotic species of wildlife.

"I had hoped that the time had passed when states carried out stocking programs without regard for the consequences to waters in neighboring states of the views of other natural resource agencies."

The amur was first brought to the United States by the federal fish and wildlife service from Asia. Its behavior was studied in Arkansas waters from which it subsequently escaped. It has since been artificially propagated and stocked by Arkansas.

The unannounced introduction of the fish brought a rapid and negative response from national professional fisheries groups such as the American fisheries society and the sport fishing institute.

The amur possesses tremendous leaping abilities and Burrows said carp barriers on southern Minnesota rivers will be "ineffective" in preventing movement of the amur into the state.

He said the ability of the fish to leap and its wariness makes it very difficult to take with standard commercial fishing gear. In addition, the amur can seldom be induced to take a lure, he said, unless the fish has eaten everything available in the pond in which it has been stocked.

Burrows said he believes that some fisheries workers in states to the south are unconcerned about the possibility of uncontrolled reproduction of the amur because these states do not have the climatic conditions necessary for successful spawning.

But he said that Minnesota and some other of the western Great Lakes region states have conditions nearly identical to those found in the Amur valley in northern Asia where the fish is native and that natural spawning and "uncontrolled proliferation" is a definite danger in these areas.

He said further that there should be a national effort to control the propagation of this fish in the United States until its potential impact on the valuable fishing and waterfowl waters of the north is determined.

As Commissioner of natural resources, Herbst said he was planning a direct appeal to both the U.S. department of Interior and to the director of the Iowa conservation department to bring a serious situation under control.

MSU External Studies Plan Starts Dec. 1

A required orientation class for all persons over 25 years of age who wish to enter Moorhead state university's (MSU) external studies program will meet during the winter quarter on the MSU campus.

Entitled "Educational Planning," the class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. four Tuesday evenings, beginning December 2.

Two additional sessions will be required of all students but will be devoted to individual counseling with the instructor and can be held at the student's convenience.

The external studies program is designed to help adult persons obtain a college degree through part-time study and class attendance and by offering some credits for their past vocational or avocational experiences and achievements.

Purpose of the required preliminary class is to assist such students in developing a possible educational plan for acquiring a bachelor's degree. The class will explore competencies developed in personal, community and work experiences and help evaluate whether such background is acceptable for college credit. The university's expectations concerning course work will be discussed and information about college counseling will be given.

Arctic Closes Detroit Lakes Garment Plant

Arctic Enterprises, Inc., Thief River Falls, announced this week the closing of its Detroit Lakes plant about December 15. President John Penn said that Arctic has not been able to obtain sufficient outside contract clothing work to keep the plant in operation.

The Detroit Lakes plant was opened in April of 1971 and at the peak production period employed 116 people. In this current season, 40 people have been employed since beginning production July 28.

"Arctic especially regrets that circumstances require the closing of our Detroit Lakes facility because of the excellent productivity and efficiency levels achieved by the employees, Penn said. "However, presently and for the foreseeable future, the Arctic garment plant in Karlstad will be capable of handling our production requirements."

Road Condition State Reports Now Available

To enable motorists to plan trips under adverse winter driving conditions, the Minnesota department of highways, in cooperation with the state patrol, is now furnishing road condition reports, state highway commissioner Frank D. Marzitelli said.

Road condition reports are available daily from the highway department's St. Paul road information unit on an around-the-clock basis until next spring.

During working hours, personal service is available. If telephone lines are unusually busy, a taped message will be received. A recording may be used during non-working hours. Tapes are updated immediately after a change in road conditions is reported either by one of the state's highway maintenance areas or the state patrol. When road conditions change significantly, maintenance areas notify the St. Paul road information unit.

For road information, call 612-296-3076. There is a toll charge outside the Twin Cities area.

Persons in outlying areas of the state may receive road condition reports through the various maintenance areas. Highway maintenance area headquarters and telephone numbers outside the Twin Cities area are: Bemidji, 755-3816; Brainerd, 829-3553; Crookston, 281-3503; Detroit Lakes, 847-4401; and Duluth, 722-1406.

Also, Mankato, 388-6261; Marshall, 537-6146; Morris, 589-1515; Owatonna, 451-9000; Rochester, 288-0159; St. Cloud, 255-4265; Virginia, 741-9322; Willmar, 235-4554; and Windom, 831-1666.

In some maintenance areas daily around-the-clock service is given. In others it is available only during working hours. Road condition reports may be recorded or may be given in person.

TRF September Bond Sales Up From 1974

September E & H series savings bond sales in Pennington county showed a sizeable increase from bond sales in September of 1974. The September total was $26,775 compared to $18,429 a year ago.

The totals for the first nine months of 1975 were, however, less than the pace set in 1974, with the January through Sept. total of $183,401 considerably behind the $216,193 totaled at the same date a year ago in the county.

Overal E & H bond sales continued at a record pace in Minnesota during September, according to figures released by Clifford C. Sommer, vice-president of the University of Minnesota foundation, and Minnesota state savings bond volunteer chairman.

Sept. dollar sale totaled $8,818,827 compared with Sept. 1974 sales of $8,135,798 for an increase of 8.4 per cent. Cumulative sales for 1975 to date are $85,774,249 compared with $80,304,341 for last year. This represents an increase of 6.8 per cent.

In view of sales to date, Sommer projects a total of $110,000,000 by the end of the year. This will be the second time Minnesota has surpassed the $100 million mark since 1945.

National sales are running about two per cent above last year, but redemptions are down about 12 per cent. Through Sept. 30, the net inflow to treasury—sales over redemptions—is over $620,000,000, a record pace.

Bell Asks PSC For Change In Phone Rates

Northwestern Bell asked the state public service commission (PSC) Friday to allow the company to charge its Minnesota customers enough to bring its return to the level authorized by the PSC in November of 1974.

John Hulse, vice president and chief executive officer, said the company would gain an estimated $19.1 million annually in after-tax income under the proposal.

To achieve this, total revenues on service within Minnesota would be increased 12.6 per cent or $45,859,000. The increases for individual customers would vary according to services used.

Spelling out the proposal on which Bell asked the PSC six weeks ago to schedule hearings, Hulse said the commission now has "all the information it needs to set hearing dates on our request."

He added, "the rates we are filing would bring our return to 7.97 per cent based on our 1975 business. The commission a year ago approved 7.97 as a necessary level of earnings on the basis of 1973 conditions. We are currently experiencing a 6.1 per cent rate of return.

"Our present rates are based on 1973 costs, and record inflation since then has prevented us from earning anywhere close to the authorized level. Now we must have more money to continue to meet our customers' service expectations, and we are asking the commission to schedule hearings at the earliest possible date."

Hulse pointed out that the consumer price index has risen 71 per cent while the price of one-party residence phone service has increased only 34 per cent during the past 10 years in the Twin City metropolitan area.

Under the proposed rates, the one party monthly rate in the base rate area would increase from $6.30 to $7.45 for residence customers and from $14.65 to $17.35 for business customers, Al Bacon, local Northwestern Bell manager, said. Other local service rates would increase proportionately.

The proposal includes restructuring long distance rates for calls within the state along the lines of those introduced earlier this year for interstate calls. On direct dialed long distance calls, this includes a new one-minute minimum charging period instead of the present three-minute minimum, and discounts of 35 or 60 per cent for evening, night and weekend calling.

"The plan will give customers greater opportunities to control their long distance costs," Hulse said. "Some will actually be able to save money and others to moderate the effect of the increases by adjusting their calling habits."

He said the proposed one-minute rate could mean savings on at least one-third of the calls placed in Minnesota, since they are under three minutes but now charged at the minimum three-minute rate.

"Night and weekend discounts are proposed to further encourage calling during off-peak periods," he added.

"This detailed rate plan should now give the public service commission all the information it needs to set hearing dates on our request. We respectfully urge it to do so at the earliest opportunity," Hulse concluded.

Problem Of High Blood Pressure May Affect Many

High blood pressure, undetected and uncontrolled, forces the heart to work harder in supplying blood to the body, according to Dr. Warren R. Lawson, state health commissioner. Over a period of time, this strain can damage the walls of the arteries and the heart, contributing to strokes and heart failure. The added pressure makes the peson more likely to have heart attacks.

In Minnesota, uncontrolled high blood pressure contributes to one third of all heart attack deaths and six of all stroke deaths, Dr. Lawson emphasized. It can also cause kidney damage. It affects young, old, male, female, black, white, rich, poor, nervous or calm, although certain ethnic and age groups are at greater risk.

Although high blood pressure is not curable, it can be controlled once it is detected. When controlled, the risk of heart attacks and strokes is substantially reduced. The simple blood pressure check takes only about 30 seconds.

"The people of Minnesota are the state's greatest resource," Gov. Anderson said. "We must avoid the senseless waste of lives that occurs each year simply because high blood pressure goes undetected."

Merger Plan Discussed By 'U' President

University of Minnesota president C. Peter Magrath said the university board of regents has not yet taken an "official position" on the proposed merger of the state's post-secondary educational systems, but he expressed a number of personal misgivings about the proposal.

Magrath testified on the merger proposal recently before the House higher education committee chaired by Rep. Peter Fugina of Virginia.

"I do not believe it is appropriate for me at this time to take a sharp position either endorsing, or rejecting the specific merger proposal before you," he told the committee. "As my comments will however indicate, I do candidly have some misgivings about a merger of Minnesota's higher education systems, but my attitude is flexible, not frozen."

Margrath said he felt it would be appropriate for him to raise questions about the merger proposal in light of the expressed willingness of its backers to also be flexible on the issue.

"In my personal and professional judgment," Magrath said, "the University of Minnesota and its relative constitutional autonomy have served well the basic educational interests of the state of Minnesota."

He said he believes the university is accountable despite its constitutional autonomy from direct legislative control.

Control and coordination of the university is done through the higher education coordinating commission (HECC), the higher education advisory council, and the increasing capacity of the legislature through its research and budget-review staffs, he said.

"In short," he said, "it seems to me that the Legislature, through its own mechanisms, is increasingly in a position to monitor and to control the operations of those systems that it funds through the appropriations process. I have no quarrel or problem with that kind of accountability and control."

Agreement must be reached on the reasons for a proposed merger before a "higher education superboard" should be established, Magrath said. "Merger will not work, or at least it won't work well, if we have dozens of different expectations as to what it is intended to accomplish."

He said that present systems of coordination and control are relatively recent in Minnesota and improvements can be made in accountability.

The proposed merger, on the other hand, could result in a system that is too large to be accountable and efficient, he said.

"When a system becomes too large and too unwieldy, management can be made less efficient and more remote from the people who are affected by the management, and that is primarily the students and to a large extent the professional faculty and staff.

"I'm not saying that a merger of some kind cannot work, but I am suggesting that, inevitably, merger will concentrate immense bureaucratic power in a single board," Magrath said.

Minnesota's present systems of public and private colleges and vocational schools are among the best in the nation, he said.

"It seems to me that we have a system of systems in Minnesota, marked by diversity, but also by collaboration and increasing awareness of our mutual interdependence on each other," Magrath said.

The university board of regents will discuss the merger issue at its next committee of the whole meeting this month.

Food manufacturers expect that within five years we'll be eating half our meals outside the home. Today it's one out of three. Restaurant meals on the average, cost $2.31 for lunch, $3.75 for dinner.

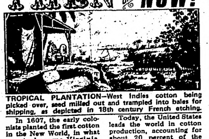
THEN and NOW!



TROPICAL PLANTATION—West Indies cotton being picked over, seed milled out and trampled into bales for shipping, as depicted in 18th century French etching.

In 1607, the early colonists planted the first cotton in the New World, in what was to become Virginia. With the Industrial Revolution of the next century, and the invention of spinning machinery and the cotton gin, cotton became a major product and helped establish the United States as a commercial power.

Today, the United States leads the world in cotton production, accounting for about 20 percent of the total supply. Cotton continues to be popular because it is easy to clean, can be colorful, easy-to-create-with and so adaptable it can be turned into anything from tough denim work garb to delicate lace party clothes.

Mentally Ill Face Problems In Community

"Why don't you go down the block or into the next neighborhood where there are better locations?" is the suggestion often put to organizers of residential group homes for retarded children, speakers at a University of Minnesota social work conference observed recently.

Social workers from across the state heard explanations of recent attempts to protect mentally retarded children from such discrimination during the two-day gathering entitled "Living in the Community: Problems the Retarded Child Will Face."

Philip Roos, executive director of the National association for retarded citizens, observed that the trend toward community-based "habilitation" facilities, while producing many positive results, carries with it a new assortment of diffulties.

First among these is resistance from community residents who are acting on their stereotypes of retarded people, he said. Another problem is that even among social work professionals, there is not agreement on the benefits of decentralization.

"Most agree that leaving the retarded child in the community benefits both the child and, in the long term, the community," he said, adding that most of the objections raised by professionals have to do with the quality of care rather than the effects on neighborhood property values.

"Zoning is the major impediment," asserted Neil Mickenburg, an attorney with the Developmental disabilities advocacy project of the Hennepin county legal aid society, but many local zoning ordinances designed to exclude group homes are being amended through the work of group-home advocates.

The landmark for this advocacy is a 1975 state law that requires local governments to accept group homes for six or fewer mentally retarded or physically handicapped children as simply single-family units while homes for seven to 16 children are now regarded as multi-family dwellings.

The burden remains on the group-home organizers to educate local officials, however, as many suburbs and small towns do not make provisions in their zoning laws even for multi-family housing.

"Besides, a community-based facility isn't going to succeed for anyone unless there is a measure of community support," said a self-made expert on the subject, Shoreview city councilman Robert Weyandt. "You'll have nothing but trouble, even with small homes, if you don't educate the residents who already live there."

Shoreview was the site of a heated political battle over whether and where in the suburban community to locate a proposed home for mentally retarded children, in which Weyandt lined up with the supporters.

"Every conceivable complaint and suspicion surfaces," he told conference participants. "People were worried about window peeping, child molesting and crime," until they were made aware "that we were talking about a handful of children, not a prison."

The two-day gathering was sponsored by the University's department of contunuing education in social work and conferences.

Miss Bristol

Ritter

Miss Ahlstrom

Northway

Miss Korpela

Five Minnesota youths will conclude their 4-H years with expense-paid trips to the 54th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 30–Dec. 4. The trips are their rewards for outstanding achievement in 1975 4-H projects.

The five are Kathy Bristol, 18, of Cottage Grove; Tim Northway, 19, of Foreston; Janet Ahlstrom, 19, of Braham; Dale Ritter, 18, of Chokio; and Dorothy Korpela, 19, of Eveleth.

They will be among some 30 Minnesota 4-H'ers at the annual Congress. All trip winners were selected by the Cooperative Extension Service, which supervises 4-H work.

The awards program is arranged by the National 4-H Service Committee.

Miss Bristol took top state honors in the clothing project for her royal blue, polyester gabardine pantsuit. Its classic wrap jacket had pointed cuffs and collar, tie belt and patch pockets.

The Washington County 4-H'er will attend Congress as guest of Coats & Clark Inc. A fashion major at Hills Community College, the junior leader says she "learns best by doing."

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Bristol has been in the 4-H clothing program for nine years.

Northway received his trip from Amoco Foundation, Inc. for excellence in the 4-H petroleum power project.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Northway, he completed a one-year engines course at Anoka Vocational Technical School and is now farming full-time.

The Mille Lacs County 4-H'er's favorite activity is tractor driving competition, and this year he completed a machinery care and safety project.

Miss Ahlstrom received her Chicago trip from Standard Brands Incorporated for her bread project. The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Ahlstrom, she is a freshman at the University of Wisconsin.

Sour dough bread-making was Miss Ahlstrom's specialty this year. She also was a junior project leader in foods and helped her young charges make pancakes, yellow cakes and biscuit-wrapped frankfurters.

As gifts, the Isanti County 4-H'er often bakes bread baskets and fills them with fresh cinnamon rolls.

Ritter's Chicago trip is provided by John Deere for his work in the conservation of natural resources program. Now a freshman in agricultural education at the University of Minnesota Technical College, the Stevens County winner helped plan a 30-acre wildlife habitat.

A member of the state conservation camp continuation committee, he has also built numerous bird houses and helped with city beautification projects. The 10-year 4-H'er is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Ritter.

Miss Korpela's home management trip is provided by Tupperware Home Parties, Division of Dart Industries, Inc. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Ilmar Korpela, she is a freshman at Augsburg College, majoring in communications and vocal performing.

In the home management project for six years, Miss Korpela learned how to comparison shop for the best values.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Last summer, one of the Washington newspapers ran a small story about the plans of a major corporation to set up a political action committee. The committee would funnel voluntary contributions to the candidates of its choice.

It's a measure of our current cynicism that the story caused a major flap among Washington journalists—even though this corporation made a public announcement of what it was doing and asked the federal election commission to review and approve its plans in advance!

To answer the flurry of questions about corporate political activity that was triggered by this event, the National Chamber held a special workshop for news personnel. Many of the reporters present seemed greatly surprised to learn that it is legal for a business to have anything at all to do with the political process.

But it is quite legal, within certain limits (which are too complicated to go into here, but very important to know for anyone in business who plans to get involved).

Business people had better take maximum advantage of their political rights. The agents of organized labor will be out taking advantage of theirs. And they're very good at it.

If such talk leaves you feeling left out, you may be a bigger part of the problem than those "pressure groups" that are active.

The American political system is designed to achieve consensus through an averaging-out of the demands of many individual special interest groups. The more of these groups there are, the healthier the political climate.

If that sounds puzzling, try thinking of our social fabric as a giant spider web, with a special interest group holding each of the anchor strands around its perimeter. Each group wants to move the web toward itself, but it is resisted by the countervailing pulls of the other groups. Thus, the web remains taut and centered. The more groups there are pulling on the web, the less chance there is of any one of them being able to move it very far. And that's what makes for a stable society.

Therefore, you help the country by becoming active politically and you hurt it by staying on the sidelines; by making it easier for a few big interest groups to get their way.

"Being active" is not as hard as it sounds. Politics begins in your own neighborhood. Look up your party in the local telephone book. Find out the name of the official nearest you. Call and see what you can do. Or, check with your trade or professional association, your local chamber of commerce, or your union. Once you do get involved, you'll learn it can be a lot of fun.

Why am I talking about political activity just after local elections in many parts of the country? Because by the time most people are thinking about the next election, the critical groundwork will be long over. Right now is the time to have a major impact on the elections of November, 1976.

Some people think they can "protest" by not taking any part in the political process. Actually, that kind of protest is the biggest favor they can do for whoever it is that upsets them.

Silence isn't golden any more.

Guess who said the following:

"Why can't liberals start raising hell about a government so big, so complex, so expensive and so unresponsive that it's dragging down every good program we've worked for?

"Why can't liberals talk about fiscal responsibility and productivity without feeling uncomfortable?"

Who said it: Bill Buckley? Barry Goldwater? John Tower?

Well, the answer is none of the above. The speaker was Senator Edmund S. Muskie (D-Maine), a man regarded by most commentators as one of the Senate's leading liberals.

Furthermore, he went on to admit, "We're in a rut. Our emotional stake in government is so great that we regard common sense criticism of government almost as a personal attack."

Senator Muskie's comments are the most recent in a series of tantalizing clues that suggest we may be close to a sea change in national policy.

Some others:

Out in California, the Democratic governor, Jerry Brown, was elected as a liberal but has conducted his administration thus far with an admirable concern for the cost-effectiveness of government programs.

And early this year, Senator Hubert Humphrey (d-Minn.) noticed that "amazingly, the biggest increases in the middle-income family's (1974) budget resulted from higher social security and income tax payments.

"Because of our graduated tax rate system," he said, "taxes are rising far faster than any other consumer expenditure in this period of rapid inflation."

On top of these encouraging statements, we were treated recently to the sight of one federal watchdog agency—the council on wage and price stability—telling another federal watchdog agency—the consumer product safety commission—that proposed lawnmower safety regulations would have an inflationary impact on the economy.

Am I making too much out of too little? Perhaps. But, Senator Humphrey is chairman of Congress' joint economic committee. And, Senator Muskie is chairman of the new Senate budget committee.

The budget committees of the House and Senate are the product of the budget reform act of 1974, which was born at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce—a fact few people know.

The idea of the budget reform act was to get Congress to look at proposed spending and anticipated revenue as a package, then set spending ceilings for itself.

There are still plenty of cynics who scoff that Congress will never be able to exercise self-discipline in the appropriations process. And indeed, it is still too early to tell what the outcome will be.

But the responsibility of overseeing the Senate budget committee seems to have had a profound impact on Senator Muskie, and salute him for being willing to admit it.

I sense some movement toward a meeting of the minds between at least the more moderate conservatives and liberals. Conservatives no longer automatically oppose all government programs on principle—they are becoming more concerned about cost-benefit ratios and realistic timetables for implementation. Liberals, on the other hand, appear to be disenchanted with the idea that government can solve any problem just by throwing money at it.

Will this healthy trend be reinforced or reversed by the passions of election-year politics?

I don't know. It could easily go either way. But we can always hope . . . and encourage!

Astronaut John Glenn was once asked by a reporter what it felt like to be in a space ship awaiting liftoff. He replied, "How would you like to be lying on your back on top of 150,000 parts, knowing each one of them was supplied by the low bidder?"

But the parts worked. And I think there are several lessons in that experience for Americans troubled by the growing costs of government and the growing lawlessness of public employee unions.

Not long ago, I mused that giving civil servants a financial incentive to cut their budgets might help control government costs, which are not subject to the profit-and-loss disciplines imposed on private enterprises. Well, there's another approach to the same objective: move government services into the private sector, where they are subject to cost-effectiveness pressures.

This method is called "contracting out," and while it is not new, I predict it will be receiving a lot more attention in the near future.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is probably the best example of contracting out at the federal level. Few people are aware of it, but the vast bulk of the work on our space program was carried on by private employees in corporations, research institutions and universities. Of the 450,000 workers once involved in the effort, no more than 35,000 were civil service employees.

Whatever you may think of the goals established for NASA by President Kennedy, there can be no quarreling with the dramatic success achieved by the agency in meeting those goals on schedule. Further, NASA is one of the few (if not the only) examples in modern history of a big federal agency that has shrunk substantially after its major objective was accomplished. NASA is now only about 60 per cent of its size during the peak year of 1966.

If contracting out worked so well for NASA, then why not try it elsewhere? Could the private insurance industry run social security for the government? Would the hot breath of competition speed up the postal service? Is Amtrak really the only way to go? We'll never know until we try.

Can the same technique be applied at the state and local level? Sure. Contracting for management and professional services has long been common. Trash and garbage disposal contracts are becoming more popular, as are contracts for transportation services.

In the educational field, there is experimentation with "voucher" systems, under which the state pays for the student's education at the (approved) school of the student's choice.

And at least one city that I know of—Scottsdale, Arizona—gets its fire protection service from a private contractor. The service covers 18 per cent of the population of Arizona, in a four-county area. So far, it has cost the local taxpayers only one-fourth of the national average per capita cost of providing fire protection.

Of course, lower cost is just one of the potential benefits of contracting out. Services provided under contract can be cut down (or out) when they are no longer needed. That can be very difficult in the case of an entrenched bureaucracy with a vested interest in its own perpetuation. Also, one contractor can be exchanged for another if service deteriorates or cost escalates. Finally, contracts can be written so that the burden of performance is on the contractor, which makes it more difficult for unions to extort pay increases from a helpless population.

There are recent amendments to the social security act that make it easier for localities to try contracting out in such areas as health care, manpower training, and other social services. It might be a good idea to check to see what your own local government is doing (or not doing).

And if you like the idea, tell your congressman you'd like to see more of it. He may be looking for an issue to run on in the next election.

MAKING FAMILY LIFE MORE FUN

"Do as I say, not as I do."

A father who uses that dubious directive in raising his son may be missing out on the chance to teach good habits and ideals by setting a good example. Many psychologists think good attitudes are best taught by example, because youngsters seem to learn more readily by imitation than by following commands.

The family environment is a small model of the world to which a child will someday have to adjust. How he learns to deal with family pressures—how he sees his father act, for example—will be reflected in how he will deal with pressures in the larger world—of school, and ultimately of career and marriage.

In a family with two or more children there is often a phenomenon called sibling rivalry. That is, brothers and sisters will compete for various things, but mainly a parent's attention. It has been observed that only children—who never have experienced sibling rivalry—sometimes have a more difficult time later in life adjusting to group situations such as school or camp. And by the same token, a child from a large family may be particularly competitive outside the family group. Often such a child will have a healthy spirit of competition. But if a child has not succeeded well in family competition, he may be timid and try to avoid confrontations.

It stands to reason that parents influence how a child will deal with competition. If a father, for example, shows grace and good sportsmanship when he competes, and if he knows how to handle rivalry among brothers and sisters, a child will develop a healthier sense of competitiveness.

One way to aid this is by engaging in games that can be played by all members of the family. One of the finest is Odyssey, a game that works in conjunction with your television set. It consists of three action games—Tennis, Hockey and Smash—and offers features such as electronic on-screen scoring, electronic sounds, speed and ball control. The game connects to the screen of any brand, any size color or black and white TV and turns the set into an electronic playground to challenge skill and coordination.

The whole family can interact in an instructive and healthy form of sibling rivalry. Competitiveness channeled in the right way can certainly help to make family life more fun.

Attorney General
State of Minnesota

During the 1975 legislative session, a new Minnesota law was passed regarding purchases of generically equivalent drugs from a pharmacy. The law, which will go into effect next January, could result in significant savings to the consumer.

It is unlawful for any pharmacist, assistant pharmacist or pharmacist intern who dispenses prescriptions, drugs and medicines to substitute an article different from the one ordered or to deviate in any manner from the requirements of an order or prescription without the approval of the prescriber. However, a pharmacist who receives a prescription for a brand-name legend drug may, with the written or verbal consent of the purchaser, dispense any drug having the same generic name as the brand-name drug prescribed if the prescriber—a physician for example—has not specifically indicated in writing to despense the brand-name drug prescribed.

"Brand name" means the registered trademark name given to a drug product by its manufacturer, labeler or distributor. "Generic name" means the established name or official name of a drug or drug product.

A pharmacist who receives a prescription that is not marked "dispense as written" or abbreviated "D.A.W." may substitute for the prescribed brand-name drug a generically equivalent drug product that is manufactured in the same finished dosage form with the same active ingredients and strength by the same manufacturer as the prescribed brand-name drug. "Finished dosage form" means the form of a drug that is or is intended to be dispensed or administered to the patient and requires no further manufacturing or processing other than packaging, reconstruction or labeling.

A pharmacist may not substitute a generically equivalent drug product unless, in the pharmacist's professional judgment, the substituted drug is therapeutically equivalent and interchangeable to the prescribed drug. A pharmacist must notify the purchaser if he is despensing a drug other than the brand-name drug prescribed.

A pharmacist may not despense a generically equivalent drug with a higher retail price than that of the brand-name drug prescribed.

If you have any questions concerning the new law, you should consult your pharmacist or physician or contact the Attorney general's consumer division, 102 State Capitol, St. Paul, 55155.

Opposes Task Force Plan On Consolidation

Need for a special task force to study consolidation of post-secondary educational institutions and make recommendations to the 1977 Legislature has not been demonstrated, the Minnesota higher education coordinating commission says.

The coordinating commission has adopted a statement expressing its reaction to recommendations for post-secondary education made by the Commission on Minnesota's Future (CMF) and to the CMF's recently-published Tertiary education report prepared by Thomas G. Mortenson.

The Commission on Minnesota's future recommended that the governor initiate a study for consolidation of post-secondary institutions by establishing a special task force to analyze consolidation issues and prepare recommendations for the 1977 Legislature.

In its reaction, the coordinating commission said that precipitous action to eliminate institutions should not be taken; savings from closing small institutions would be marginal and since the projected low point in enrollments will be equal to aggregate enrollments in the current academic year, there is no pressing need to recommend consolidation or expansion.

"At best, recommendations from a task force would represent unnecessary effort and worse, they could be disfunctional," the MHECC said. The MHECC said it views premature speculation about the closing of institutions to be counterproductive.

The Coordinating commission said it will continue to conduct analyses of alternatives for improving post-secondary education in Minnesota.

"If and when the results of these efforts cause members of the commission to believe that serious consideration should be given to closing one or more public institutions in Minnesota, the commission will present the appropriate information on the desirability of closing institutions to the Governor, and the Legislature," the statement said.

The Coordinating Commission said it finds the Tertiary education report to be a useful compilation of much of the post-secondary education data and a document which raises some questions about the future. But the commission said it finds some of the analyses and conclusions to be misleading and irrelevant.

The fact that more than 25 per cent of all students are presently attending Minnesota public institutions with enrollments under 1500 indicates that a significant number of residents has elected to pursue opportunities in smaller institutions, the MHECC said. Closing these institutions would eliminate opportunities in locations of these institutions with generating a return on the very substantial investment which has already been made, the MHECC said.

"While unit costs for many programs may tend to be greater in small institutions that in large institutions, savings to the state from closing small institutions would be marginal," the MHECC said.

The MHECC statement points out, for example, that closing all 33 public post-secondary institutions with full-time equivalent enrollments of less than 800 would generate a maximum annual savings of less than 11 per cent of state operating funds for post-secondary education. Closing both the smallest four-year collegiate institutions (University of Minnesota-Morris and Southwest state university) would generate a savings of less than four per cent in total state operating expenses.

Closing these institutions while continuing to maintain the same total access to post-secondary education may result in no net savings to the state while severely disrupting present programs," the MHECC statement said.

The MHECC statement pointed out that while small institutions cannot provide as much curricular breadth and depth as large institutions, there is not evidence that educational achievement suffers as a result of attending small institutions.

The MHECC responses to other CMF recommendations deal with the possibility of publishing a consumer's guide to education, state tuition policy, 12 years of tuition free education to all and financial support for post-secondary opportunities based on the ability to pay. In addition, the MHECC statement comments on deficiencies in the Tertiary education report relating to size of institutions, student costs, facility use and measures of efficiency.

Mankind Is Running Race With Famine

Mankind is running a desperate race with famine, Dr. William A. Dando of the University of North Dakota geography department has concluded in a recently completed research paper.

The paper, "Man-Made Famines, Past, Present and Future," will be published in a U.S. department of agriculture book commemorating 200 years of U.S. agricultural progress.

Possessing the most detailed information on famine in the United States, Dando has researched and collected information on more than 8,000 different world famines.

In his paper, Dando lists five major areas facing the possibility of famine in the next five years: the Caribbean; Sahel; Ethiopa, Somalia, and Yeman; Trans-Jordan and Syria; and portions of South Asia.

Thirty-nine nations and northeast Brazil, in Dando's "Future Famine Zone," face serious food problems and potential famine by 1985 or 1990. These nations contain two-thirds of today's population, produce only one-fifth of the world's food and account for four out of every five births, the paper reports. In many of these areas, political activities and power struggles have created an environment conducive to famine.

Dando traces the present concern over the world food situation, triggered in part by the bad weather in the early 1970's, to what he terms the "modern food triad" of rapid population growth, affluence, and revolutionary dietary expectations. He feels the food situation has been aggravated by Russian grain purchases, inflation, monetary instability, speculation in commodities, and the energy shortage.

Famines can be averted by reducing population growth in selected societies, Dando says, by modifying cultural food preferences and practices, changing social and political environments, improving world communications and transport, and by creating a world food bank.

He concludes, "Relative deprivation of expectations leads to social change, persistant deprivation of expections leads to revolution. In the future, instead of silence, hunger may produce the resounding roar of violence. The next world war could be the First World Food War."

Dando developed an interest in the relationship between climate and food while researching his doctoral thesis, "Grain or Dust: A Study of the Soviet New Lands Program," in 1960. He obtained his doctorate degree at the University of Minnesota.

Dando is unique in his knowledge of East European and Russian wheat. He spent one year in Romania and three extended periods of time in Russia.

Nightingale of the playroom

Less than a century and a quarter have passed since that terrible winter when Florence Nightingale ministered to suffering British soldiers. Until then there had been no place for women nurses in military hospitals, and not many women nurses anywhere.

Ever notice how often it is the occupations or professions of SERVICE TO OTHERS that excite the imagination of our children? We should learn something from that!

Boys and girls see themselves as amateur adults. Through their imagination they often show us the world they would like to live in.

Their hopes can become a reality if we support our churches with our faith and our families. After all, it was the Founder of Christianity who insisted that He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister.

ABOUT YOUR HEALTH...
HOW ARE THE SPINNING WHEEL, GEORGE WASHINGTON AND THE AMERICAN DIET RELATED?
DR. JOHN GREENWOOD WAS AN EARLY AMERICAN DENTIST. IN 1791, HE USED A FOOT ENGINE MADE FROM A SPINNING WHEEL TO POWER A DENTAL DRILL.
BUT DR. GREENWOOD IS BEST REMEMBERED FOR HIS MOST FAMOUS PATIENT — GEORGE WASHINGTON. UNFORTUNATELY, WASHINGTON HAD A GREAT FONDNESS FOR SWEETS — A HABIT THAT PRESUMABLY CAUSED HIM TO LOSE HIS TEETH. HE HAD AT LEAST FIVE SETS OF DENTURES THAT CAUSED HIM GREAT DISCOMFORT.
IN 1776, AMERICANS HAD LITTLE UNDERSTANDING OF THE IMPORTANCE OF DENTAL HEALTH AND THE MEANS OF PREVENTING ORAL DISEASE. TODAY, THE AMERICAN DENTAL ASSOCIATION ADVISES US TO AVOID SUGAR-RICH FOODS AND BEVERAGES, ESPECIALLY BETWEEN MEALS; HAVE REGULAR DENTAL CHECK-UPS; BRUSH AND FLOSS THOROUGHLY, AND MAKE FULL USE OF FLUORIDES.

Cites Role Of Land-Grant Universities

University of Minnesota president C. Peter Magrath says the centennial of America's first agricultural experiment station should be an occasion for considering the unfinished work of feeding a hungry world.

Magrath spoke recently in Houston at a meeting of the National association of state universities and land-grant colleges.

The conference noted the 100th anniversary of the first U.S. agricultural experiment station in Connecticut.

"The centennial of the founding of our first experiment station seems a good time not only for recognizing past accomplishments, but also for setting the new agenda for agricultural research, education, and service," Magrath said.

The "new agenda" includes expansion of the land-grant idea into less developed countries for agricultural research, education and extension and, in the United States, for better education of consumers on the nature of the agricultural industry.

"We have to do a much better job of informing our own citizenry about the facts and subtleties of American agriculture, as well as the increasingly critical role it will play in our national and international lives," he said.

Several incidents such as the meat boycott, the debate over the amount of grain necessary to produce a pound of beef and the controversy over grain exports resulted from "popular agricultural misinformation," Magrath said.

"I do think," he said, "that central to each situation was a misunderstanding by many as to the basic facts of agricultural life."

Land-grant and other agricultural universities should become more involved in "telling the story of American agriculture," Magrath said. "The great success we have had in our traditional extension activities shows we have the talent to serve constituencies beyond our campuses."

Magrath said agriculture supporters faced a similar challenge a century ago when they fought for the acceptability of agriculture as an academic discipline.

"We are, no doubt, long past the time when the agricultural sciences need be specially justified and defended as if they are somehow suspect and unworthy.

"They are now center stage—so much so, perhaps, that it is time for scientists and scholars from other fields to more actively join with their colleagues in the agricultural sciences in attacking the multi-faceted problems of food and fiber production and distribution," Magrath said.

"Research," he said, "is central to progress." If the land-grant idea is exported under proposals sponsored by Congressman Paul Findley, R-Ill., and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., sustained research funding will be necessary.

"We have to religiously point to money spent on agricultural research as representing wise investments rather than costs," he said. He pointed to Era, a spring wheat developed at Minnesota at a cost of $300,000 which yielded $80 million additional income and 730 million loaves of bread over the last two years.

"Insofar as we all get hungry," Magrath said, "I think agricultural research can be showcased to demonstrate the direct bearing scientific investigation has on the quality of our lives."

Belinda J. Montgomery and Griffin Dunne co-star as high school ski teammates of Jill Kinmont in "The Other Side of the Mountain," which stars Marilyn Hassett as Olympic ski contender Jill Kinmont and Beau Bridges as Dick Buek. Now playing at the Galaxy Twin Theatre.

Clint Eastwood and fellow climber Michael Grimm inch their way over an expanse of ice and snow as they attempt to scale the Eiger Mountain in "The Eiger Sanction," which also stars George Kennedy and Vonetta McGee. Switzerland is one of several locales seen in the adventure-suspense thriller. Opening Nov. 21 at the Falls Twin Theatre downtown.

Cash Receipts From Egg Sales Down In 1975

A 10 per cent cut in production prompted by a 13 per cent cut in average prices paid farmers for eggs during the first nine months this year has reduced estimated gross cash receipts for the state's egg industry by $14.4 million or 22 per cent below the same period in 1974, agriculture commissioner Jon Wefald reported recently.

Egg prices have been improving since hitting a 31-month low of 32 cents per dozen in mid-June this year. The mid-September price average for farm eggs was 45 cents per dozen. In fact, egg prices for Minnesota farmers were higher throughout all of the late 1940's and most of the early 1950's.

Minnesota's January-September egg production totals 1,613 million. That is 179 million below the accumulative production for the same period in 1974.

Average mid-month farm egg prices in Minnesota this year for the first nine months have ranged from the low of 32 cents to a high of 45 cents and a composite average of 37.87 cents per dozen, compared to 43.61 cents last year.

Estimated gross farm cash receipts for Minnesota's egg production during the first nine months is $50,970,750, compared to $65,394,630 for that period in 1974.

Minnesota's September egg production ranked 11th highest among all states and represented slightly over three per cent of U.S. production of 5,263 million eggs.

Lloyd Stone, executive secretary of the Minnesota egg research and promotion board, said that the Minnesota farm egg prices have been extremely volatile in recent years, dropping more often than increasing, frequently below actual production costs. He cited as examples the officially estimated recent low of 17.5 cents per dozen paid Minnesota farmers in May, 1972, the highs of 66.8 cents in August 1973, and the plummet to only 32.4 cents just ten months later, repeated again in 1975.

Only farmers in Arizona, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota were paid less than Minnesota farmers for their eggs in September.

Trucks Use More Fuel At Higher Speeds On Road

Truckers in the state who maintain that lower speed limits adversely affect the mileage of their rigs appear to hold a false conviction, according to test results compiled by the U.S. department of transportation.

In a controlled test situation studying the mileage of six truck and trailer combinations carrying the same load at 50, 55 and 60 miles per hour, DOT has shown that invariably, fuel consumption increases at higher speeds.

In over 7,000 miles of regular runs on Kentucky interstate freeways, the overall average mileage for trucks traveling at 50 mph was 5.33 miles per gallon. Average mileage at 55 mph dropped to 4.93 miles per gallon and at 60 mph, the fuel consumption dropped to 4.73 miles per gallon.

Driving a diesel at or near its maximum horsepower, keeping it "wound up", was found to provide s substantial difference in fuel consumption rates, according to the study. At 50 mph, a 14 per cent increase in fuel consumption was recorded when driving "wound up" as opposed to normal driving. At 60 mph the fuel consumption increase for driving in the maximum horsepower range was found to be nearly eight per cent.

Of particular interest to truckers looking for better mileage are the results of separate study which shows the relative importance of fighting wind resistance at varying speeds. Using an empty van with 95 square feet of frontal area, tests revealed that at 50 mph a truck will need 57 horsepower just to overcome the wind resistance. At 70 mph, however, the same rig will be using over 150 horsepower to overcome wind resistance. Fighting headwinds at higher speeds can thus become an increasingly expensive proposition.

Tire Pressure Important In Life Of Tires

Air pressure is as important to the life of a tire as oil is to the life of an engine, according to the automotive information council. Yet the same motorists who regularly have oil changes seldom bother to check tire pressure.

AIC points out that a tire compnay has estimated that between 70 and 80 per cent of all tire troubles are related to improper inflation.

Underinflation causes heat build-up in the tire, which can cause rapid internal deterioration. It also increases tread "squirm", which results in accelerated tread wear.

Tire experts recommend that air pressure be checked at least once a month. This can be done most conveniently at home through the use of an inexpensive pencil-type air gauge, available for one or two dollars from tire or hardware stores.

Tire pressure should be checked when the tires are cool—not immediately after they have been driven at highway speeds. Driving builds up pressure which returns to the original level again when the tires cool off.

Radial tires, now highly popular, perhaps are even more neglected than other types of tires because they are known to have long-wear capabilities. Some motorists assume, therefore, that routine maintenance is unnecessary.

In addition, radial tires tend to bulge out in the sidewall area, giving them a "soft" look even when properly inflated. So visual inspection of radial tires can be deceiving, making a check with a tire gauge extremely important. A bulge in the sidewall of a nonradial tire, however, does indicate low air pressure.

Proper inflation pressures are listed in the car's operating manual and also are posted on a sticker on the door of the glove compartment or on one of the car's door pillars.

Determine the recommended pressures for both front and rear positions and then check the tires with your gauge, advises AIC.

Urge Study On Pollution By Agriculture

Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of the National wildlife federation, has called for greater American-Russian cooperation in studying methods to prevent pesticide pollution and soil erosion in agricultural activities.

"If our two countries can develop means of controlling pests in ways that will not be harmful to beneficial organisms, we will have made a monumental and long-lasting contribution to the welfare of mankind," he said in a speech at the fourth annual meeting of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. joint committee of cooperation in the field of environmental protection in Washington D.C. recently.

The Federation's chief executive officer noted that the world-wide distribution of American foods and fertilizers places great demands on the nation's energy resources and, in turn, has a "profound effect on the environment."

The conservation leader asserted that the U.S. government is under great world pressure "to allow the production of as much food as possible, for economic reasons as well as for humanitarian purposes." He said that the pressure to increase crop yields often leads to "the use of potent pesticide poisons which pose serious health hazards to humans and threaten the survival of fish and wildlife resources."

"No activity of this joint committee is of greater potential importance than the studies underway in the prevention of pollution—including pesticides—and soil erosion associated with agricultural production," Kimball said.

His remarks came in the wake of the announcement of the new five-year, $30 million American-Russian grain agreement that underscores the Soviet need and demand for more American agricultural products.

In his speech to the joint committee, Kimball also urged greater Soviet cooperation in conserving great whales, called for Russian participation in efforts to conserve marine birds and mammals, and expressed support for the exchange of information on alternate forms of energy and better methods to curb ocean dumping.

Kimball attended the meeting as the sole nongovernmental member of the United States delegation. He visited the Soviet Union in 1972 as a member of the American delegation to the first meeting of the joint committee.

Russell E. Train, administrator of the environmental protection agency, and Yuri A. Izrael, chief of the main administration of the hydrometeorological service of the Soviet Union, serve as chairmen of their respective delegations.

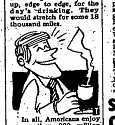
COFFEE
Facts & Figures
CONSUMING FACTS

How much coffee do Americans drink every day? To get some idea, imagine standard six-ounce cups of coffee lined up, edge to edge, for the day's drinking. They would stretch for some 18 thousand miles.



In all, Americans enjoy more than 380 million cups of coffee daily, or 140 billion every year. And according to the National Coffee Association, each cup is still a bargain, costing only about 3 cents per cup when served at home.

Says State Is Obligated To Pay For Abortions

Minnesota civil liberties union (MCLU) told the Minnesota Supreme court recently that the state of Minnesota is constitutionally obligated to pay for abortions under its Medical assistance (Medicaid) program.

In a friend-of-the-court brief, the MCLU supported an appeal by Minnesota welfare commissioner Vera J. Likins, who was ordered by Ramsey county district judge J. Jerome Plunkett to halt further Medicaid payments for abortions as of March 12, 1975.

Judge Plunkett ordered that further Medicaid payments for abortions be halted until the Minnesota department of welfare promulgates official rules, in accordance with the Administrative procedures act, to permit the payment for welfare abortions. The commissioner of public welfare appealed from that prohibition.

In the MCLU brief, submitted by MCLU volunteer attorney Stephen A. Grossman, the MCLU argued that it was unnecessary for the state of Minnesota to promulgate a rule allowing Medicaid abortions, in that the Constitution of the United States obligates government to pay for abortions under the Medicaid program.

The brief argued that the constitutional right of privacy, allowing a woman to choose whether or not to bear children, protected by the first, fourth, fifth, ninth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution, prohibits government from refusing to pay for abortions under the Medical assistance program.

The brief noted, "Several states have attempted to prevent or limit medical assistance payments for abortions, but in each and every instance where the action taken by these states was attacked on constitutional grounds, it was held that state action which excluded abortion from its medical assistance program was unconstitutional."

The MCLU brief cited the decision of United States court of appeals for the eighth circuit, in which Minnesota is located, plus South Dakota, New York and West Virginia, all of which have held that refusal by a state to pay for medical assistance abortions is unconstitutional.

The MCLU brief further argued that to exclude only abortions from Medicaid coverage constitutes and establishment of religion in violation of the first and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. The brief states, "While this is not the forum for debating or analyzing the abortion controversy, it is clear that the decision of the Ramsy county district court violates the neutrality principle and has a primary effect that advances a religious belief. To this extent, it is clearly violative of the Constitution and must be removed."

No Wonder They're Broke!

Following editorial is from the Bornwton Bulletin:

When attempting to discover why New York City is broke, it might be well to consider a little gem in Congressman Tom Hagedorn's column this week. Tom points out that a recently-completed low rent housing project cost $68,596 per unit and included central air conditioning, indoor swimming pool, gymnasium, a theatre, greenhouse, underground parking facilities with 24-hour attendant. Rent charge is $113.23 per month including utilities.

Contrast this with the new 12-unit apartment building just opened in Brownton. In Brownton the per unit cost was $15,000 and the rent charges are substantially above those quoted for New York. Plus the fact that out here where we pay our own bills we don't include central air, swimming pool, gym, theatre, greenhouse, underground parking, etc.

Yes, we pay our own bills, our housing unit will pay for itself, and Brownton is not running to St. Paul and Washington D.C. asking to get bailed out!

Bicentennial Bunkum

Following editorial is from the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner:

We are concerned with a well-financed, Washington-based group that calls itself the People's Bicentennial Commission (PBC), and whose Marxist orientation and radical rhetoric is so cleverly disguised that hundreds of thousands of American citizens already have been seduced by its patriotic veneer and official-sounding title.

The PBC has no official sanction. It should not be confused with the legitimate American Revolution Bicentennial commission, the country's official Bicentennial agency.

Headed by rabble rouser Jeremy Rifkin, former coordinator of the Citizens Commission of Inquiry into U.S. War Crimes in Vietnam, the PBC has extrapolated the revolutionary thoughts of the colonial firebrands who brought on the War for Independence, blended it with an equal measure of communist economic bunkum and is saturating America with it.

The PBC should not be taken lightly. Although it claims it is operating on modest membership dues and contributions, and pays its professional staff only $85 weekly each, it has produced some of the slickest anti-American, anti-free enterprise packages and programs it has been our displeasure to encounter.

At this time, 102 TV stations in major American metropolitan areas are airing an ongoing PBC television series, 924 radio stations across the U.S. are airing its radio series, and 14,000 publications and journals are receiving its distorted views of history, economics and government.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce considers the PBC "dangerous." And so do we. Demanding "an economic declaration of independence calling for a full-scale redistribution of U.S. corporate wealth and power" smacks of Marx, Eagels and Lenin, not Hamilton or Jefferson.

Grain Deal Benefits

Following editorial is from the Red Wing Republican Eagle:

Like most other things, the new U.S.-Soviet five-year grain deal is good or not so good depending upon what you measure it against.

Measured against the ideal we try to uphold of world-wide free markets and free trade, it's not so good. Though their language is extravagant, the farm leaders are right to deplore what the Ford administration and the Kremlin have done.

But if you view the grain agreement within the political reality that President Ford chose to favor organized labor over farmers in this instance, that for political purposes he yielded to rather than fought the maritime unions' protectionist blackmail, then the agreement is pretty good.

It could have been much worse, that is. Within rough parameters, it seems to leave the market system free to work. The Soviets must pay market prices, and they must pay cash. There is no U.S. subsidy. The deal seems to involve $1 billion a year, more or less, for America.

So maybe farmers should figure that they've come out of a bad political situation about as well as could be expected.

Still, the angry National Farmers Organization and Farm Bureau response is justified by the farmer's need to be on guard. When non-farmers hail the agreement for promoting price "stability" and for preventing "wild swings in the market place," they don't have in mind allowing the hard-working, free-enterprise farmer to reap the maximum market return when he can.

Of course, farmers themselves undercut this claim to benefit from the maximum market return when elements among them exert political pressure for anti-downside market guarantees.

Advice For Debtors

The American Collectors association (ACA) in a recent article by its executive vice president John W. Johnson provided a suggestion to help persons with unpaid debts get back on a firmer footing.

"As every ACA member knows," writes Johnson, "there are many debtors who are unable to pay their bills, many who don't want to pay them and have reached the point where they feel they shouldn't be asked to do so, nor expected to do so."

But Johnson makes the following suggestion to any debtor who is "unable" to pay his bills but really wants to do so:

(1) Make a list of all of your creditors, the amount you owe each of them, and the date on which you last made a payment to them.

(2) Call on each one personally, if possible, and if not, write a letter to each one telling them exactly what your personal situation is and how you plan to get caught up.

(3) Advise each of your creditors that you will continue to buy from them during the catchup period, but that you will pay cash everytime you purchase a product or service from them.

(4) Here's the hard part. Add up what it costs you to live on each month, and reduce that amount by 20 per cent. The reduction, which is 20 per cent of your take-home pay, will start going immediately to repay your creditors. Most people will say they can't possibly cut their cost of living by 20 per cent. However, if they just look around the place where they work, they will find people with lower income getting along just as well as they are, or people with larger families, or higher living expenses, getting along just as well as they are on the same salary. They can do it if they want to.

(5) The 20 per cent of take-home pay should be divided pro rata among each of the creditors each month, or each pay period, which is generally every Friday or every two weeks.

It's vitally important that the debtor stick with the 20 per cent payoff per day, and equally important that he gives something to every credit grantor every pay day, and the payment be a percentage of the payoff equal to the percentage of the debtor's total debt.

This whole exercise will force the debtor to carefully study his own cost of living. Like everyone of us, he will soon start discovering places where money is simply slipping through his fingers because of his own carelessness or laziness.

As he starts to get his bills paid, he will regain respect with each of his creditors. At the same time, he will start to feel a little better about himself, and eventually will have a much higher self regard.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Election day was approaching and a group of not-too-concerned citizens was whiling away the time discussing the merits of the several candidates running for state and county offices. The name of would-be state governor Andy Wently came up.

"You know Wently better than anybody else. Do you have any confidence in him?" someone asked the patriarch of the group.

The patriarch whittled thoughtfully on his stick. "Well," he drawled, "not speaking any harm of the man, but if I had no guarantee that tomorrow would come—other than Wently's word—I'd try my best to get everything done today."

The newcomer to the community slipped into a church near the end of the service, just in time to hear the preacher say, "We have left undone the things we ought to have done, and we have done things which we ought not to have done." As he settled comfortably into the pew, he sighed to himself, "At last I've found my kind of people."

MINNESOTA REPORT

WALTER F. MONDALE

I have just recently received assurances from the Office of Management and Budget in Washington, D.C., that the Small Business Administration's surety bond program, on the verge of temporary collapse because of lack of funds, will continue normal operation without interruption for at least the next five months. I hope that then, as a result of an amendment I plan to introduce, the program will have sufficient funds to meet the additional volume expected during the remainder of the fiscal year.

As of October 28, the Small Business Administration reported that they lacked ample funds to meet the demand expected for the remainder of the program's second quarter. As a result, they said that most regional offices would discontinue their programs within the next month until the start of the third quarter on December 21.

These discontinuations would have been disastrous for thousands of small business contractors who are required by law to have these bonds to obtain federal construction contracts.

It is estimated that these small businesses would have lost contracts valued over $50 million. Many would have been forced into bankrupcy, causing several thousand people to lose their jobs.

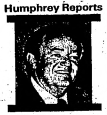
The Small Business Administration said on October 28 that the Minnesota program would run out of funds in the next 10 days and would be cut off for a period of six weeks. Had this occurred, as many as 100 Minnesota firms would have lost contracts worth an estimated $7 million and jeopardizing the jobs of more than 1,000 people.

However, we were able to persuade the Office of Management and Budget to reverse its position and to permit the Small Business Administration to draw funds neccessary to meet the program's current needs. Future needs will be met with the passage of my amendment to the Small Business Act which would authorize funds to enable the program to meet the additional volume.

These small business firms are at the heart of our economic system and they are critical to this nation's economic recovery. The discontinuation of this program would create a terrible and senseless loss to these most valuable human and economic resources.

These losses would far exceed the additional funds authorized by my amendment. I believe that this is a wise and critically necessary investment in our nation's economy.

Humphrey Reports



To Minnesotans

ECONOMIC NEWS DISTURBING—The report on November 6 from the Bureau of Labor statistics that wholesale commodities increased in price over the last three months at an annual rate of 13.5 percent is disturbing news.

The mystery surrounding recent industrial price increases needs to be cleared up. Neither demand factors nor labor costs possibly can justify the accelerating rate of price increase demonstrated by the October Wholesale Price Index.

I have asked the Congressional Joint Economic Committee which I chair, to undertake a major review of the basic causes of these price rises. The American people have a right to know what is happening.

There also has been a significant deterioration in our nation's employment situation. Unemployment rose from 8.3 percent in September to 8.6 percent of our labor force in October.

In view of the glowing Administration rhetoric that a strong economic rebound is underway, these figures are shocking.

And with the default in New York City just ahead, unless the Administration changes its position, I am seriously concerned about renewed stagflation in the months ahead.

OPEN MEETINGS VOTED—Secrecy in government has become synonymous in the public mind with deception. The public is entitled to the fullest practicable information regarding the decision-making process of the Congress and the Federal government.

To assure that this is the case, the Senate voted on November 5 and 6 to open its committee meetings to the public, as the House has been doing for some time.

It also voted to require that 40 Federal agencies, including all major regulatory agencies conduct their business in public.

The only exceptions to the open rule on Senate hearings will be when such concerns as national security, personal privacy, trade secrets and criminal investigations are involved. And then a majority vote of the committee would be necessary to close the meeting to the public.

I was one of the co-sponsors of this legislation and some two years ago promoted activity in this area. It is important that the American people know what is going on behind those doors at Capitol Hill committee meetings and in the executive offices of our government.

Language Of Writing Has Ancient Origin

by Jeannie Hanson
U of M News Service

"Human beings have used writing for less than one per cent of their half-million-year history," says Donald Swanson, classics professor at the University of Minnesota. Early languages are difficult to decipher, but what is written in hieroglyphics, cuneiform, logograms and even pictographs helps to explain why people ever bothered to learn to write.

Writing was invented as early as 3000 B.C. in Egypt and Sumer, before 1500 B.C. in China and the Far East, by 1400 B.C. in Greece, very early in Phoenicia and Persia and by the first or second century A.D. in Central America. New evidence from Rumania, possibly the earliest example of all, has not yet been dated or deciphered, according to Swanson.

Why develop a written language when communicating by talking is quite successful?

The groups of people who developed written language had certain things in common, Swanson said. They all lived in settled groups and were engaged in agriculture and animal husbandry. In these small urban communities, people had enough leisure time and diversified occupations to develop an intellectual tool. To develop writing, Swanson said, "you can't all be roaming around in the woods looking for the next meal."

Beyond these primary conditions, people generally needed a specific motive to develop writing. Often it was an economic motive, Swanson said. People had to keep track of merchandise.

The Phoenicians, who invented the alphabet, were the first merchants of the Mediterranean and must have kept elaborate records. The early Greeks developed a "Linear B" syllabary to record the supplies of olive oil, wheat, pigs, wine, figs, honey and the like on hand for the town. Officials had to record taxes, too. "Bureaucrats and tax-collectors may have been responsible for the first written languages," Swanson said.

Religion provided another key motive for writing. In Egypt the priestly class invented hieroglyphics, the word meaning "sacred carvings." Incantations that had to be repeated too exactly for memory to be trusted were often written down. They were inscribed in the "Book of the Dead," on caskets and on mummy wrappings and temple walls.

There also were political motives involved in the development of writing. Leaders often wanted their autobiographies preserved forever. King Darius of Persia, for example, had an account of his exploits chiseled into a huge stone cliff. "There's always some show-off," Swanson said.

Societies that never developed a written language often were less complex—partly nomadic, small and vulnerable, without undue preoccupation with precise wording in religious ritual and with no single powerful ruler. These groups often needed only to tell each other where they had gone for hunting or fishing. So they left pictographs (simple pictures) carved or scratched in sticks or pieces of birch-bark.

Alaskan and Chippewa messages of this kind have been found. One shows a human figure leaving an igloo and going toward the water. Brief records of animals killed, the sun and the moon and "stories" about people have been found on cave walls. None of these pictures are considered actual written language because the symbols do not stand for specific syllables, words or sentences.

Translating early written language can be extremely difficult. Seldom is there found a Rosetta Stone, with the same account in three languages. Archaeologists often try to find a picture of something with a word under it to start deciphering. They also look for symbols and words that appear frequently, especially typical inflectional endings or semantic indicators. Many different texts have to be available for comparison.

The early Greek "Linear B" language, for example, relied on logograms (abstracted pictures of things such as numerals, cooking tripods and mules) and about 80 phonetic symbols for syllables.

Egyptian hieroglyphics included 700 separate symbols for syllables and words and many special endings, such as a sign to indicate female gender. Cuneiform, the Sumerian-Babylonian script, also had several hundred abstract symbols.

Generally, writing was known to only a few people in these ancient societies—under five per cent of the people knew how to write, according to Swanson. The skill was often a sign of social status.

The early writing, whether it was brushed onto papyrus, chiseled into rock, scratched onto bone or baked into clay, was meant to last. Fortunately, enough of it has lasted to tell us much about its origins and its originators.

Minn. 4-H'ers Capture State Honors

Barke

Wedebrand

Miss Benson

Four young Minnesotans have been named state winners in their 1975 4-H projects.

They are Mary Eva Fischer, Brown County; John Barke, Martin County; and Duane Wedebrand and Margaret Benson, both of Jackson County.

Miss Fischer, Barke and Wedebrand will receive expense-paid trips to the 54th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 30—Dec. 4. Miss Benson has been awarded a $50 U.S. Savings Bond.

Miss Fischer earned the top state health award. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luverne Fischer, Sleepy Eye, she will travel to Chicago as the guest of Eli Lilly and Company.

Last year the 19-year-old winner served on her county's health and safety day planning committee and helped conduct a workshop on the nutritional value of dairy products.

She assisted the Minnesota Valley Action Council in a survey of rural health facilities in Albin Township and worked as a candy striper at a local hospital.

Miss Fischer is in her second year at St. Scholastica.

Barke, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Barke, Fairmont, was Minnesota's winner in safety. General Motors will sponsor his trip to Chicago.

A sophomore at the University of Minnesota, Barke is preparing for an agriculture-related career.

A 10-year 4-H member, he has served as safety superintendent at the county fair and has been a junior leader in safety for five years. He and other club members cleared land and created a small park on Kiester Lake where the club now enjoys annual picnics. He has also worked on 4-H township cleanup campaigns.

Wedebrand, this year's swine program winner, will travel to Chicago as the guest of Moorman Mfg. Co. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Boral Wedebrand, Jackson, he is a freshman at Jackson Area Vocational Technical Institute. He plans a career in agriculture.

Wedebrand likes to experiment with cross-breeding and has shown good production gains.

"I have learned that hogs require a lot of work but it can be lessened some with proper buildings," says the 19-year-old future farmer.

He learned also that buildings are expensive so he enlisted help from his carpentry instructor and planned and constructed two hog houses. Each will hold about 55 200-pound hogs.

Miss Benson, a freshman at the University of Minnesota, was state winner in the sheep program sponsored by Wilson & Co., Inc. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Benson, Okabena.

Although her father is a farmer, he did not raise sheep when the 19-year-old winner began her project eight years ago with two lambs. Miss Benson now owns with her father 32 ewes and 2 rams and has a similar partnership in 66 ewes and 3 rams with a farm employee.

The 4-H awards program is arranged by the National 4-H Service Committee. The Cooperative Extension Service supervises 4-H work.

How about you?

Repair Of Autos Results In Few Real Complaints

Statistics compiled by the California bureau of automotive repair paint a different picture of the automotive service repair industry from the often-depicted image of someone gouging unsuspecting car owners, according to the automotive information council.

The bureau has found that the major reason for its establishment more than two years ago—to stop fraudulent repair practices — has not been a major consumer complaint about automotive service.

Figures from the bureau's second year as a consumer watchdog for the state-licensed auto repair shops showed that from an estimated 20 million repair jobs, 47,110 complaints were received — about two-tenths of one per cent of the jobs done.

The bureau also found that of the 47,000 complaints, only about two per cent alleged fraud, a minute percentage for 20 million repair jobs. From all of its investigations, the bureau revoked only five licenses from the 38,000 registered service outlets.

The major consumer complaint area was failure to do the work correctly or to solve the car's problem, accounting for 27 per cent of the complaints, followed by 17 per cent for no written estimate and 15 per cent for inconvenience (car not ready when promised).

Fewer than nine per cent of the 47,000 complaints charged shops with exceeding estimates, and less than four per cent compained of unauthorized repairs.

The bureau acknowledged in its first year report that automotive service is a highly complex business in which practically every problem encompasses a shade of gray, almost none is black or white. In fact, AIC said, the report stated that no two consumer complaints are exactly alike.

Misunderstandings concerning service problems top the list of consumer frustration with auto service, according to the bureau, a problem both the Bureau and the industry know requires better communications and a continuing education program for mechanics to help them stay abreast of constantly changing technology.

List Ten Tips For Happier Home Holidays

These tips for happy holidays in the home were issued today by the American association of industrial nurses whose 8,500 members help keep the nation's working men and women safe, healthy and on their jobs away from home:

(1) List pre-holiday projects. Assign deadlines so your work and energy are evenly paced; (2) Take a 15-minute break from holiday chores—morning and afternoon; (3) Bend at the knees instead of the waist to lift heavy holiday boxes; (4) Wear glasses as prescribed. They can block out foreign particles just as safety glasses do in industry; and (5) Use a steady stepladder or stool when putting up and taking down holiday decorations.

Also (6) Fortify yourself with a good breakfast. Employees who do tend to make fewer mistakes, have fewer accidents, are less irritable; (7) Learn all about your gift appliances and equipment. Any tool or machanism is safer, more efficient in knowledgeable hands; (8) Resist rich holiday foods if pounds are a problem. Overindulgence from Thanksgiving through New Year's can result in crash dieting, which can lead to trouble; (9) Refuse to be cheated on sleep. Short-changed several nights in a row, go to bed extra early the next night; and (10) Give up smoking. Place this at the top of your New Year's Resolutions.

Americans have always been enthusiastic eaters, so why not sink your teeth into this quick food quiz?

1. Each of us eats an average of how much meat per day? (a) one pound (b) one ounce (c) three ounces (d) one-half pound

2. Wieners that contain all meat and no by-products are labeled (a) All Meat (b) Wieners (c) Wieners with no by-products

3. The country with the highest consumption of meat per person is (a) United States (b) Japan (c) Uruguay (d) Australia

4. Which of these foods contains the least fat? (a) chocolate bar (b) cream cheese (c) wieners (d) peanuts

Answers: 1. (c) Three ounces, which provides about half the daily need for protein.
2. (b) Wieners. Until January 1, 1974, "All Meat" was used to identify a government standard of quality in which the product was made from muscle meat only and contained no meat by-products or filler, such as soy or dried milk. Under the new USDA regulations, wieners such as those of Oscar Mayer—which qualified under the former system as "All Meat" — now must be labeled simply "Wieners."
3. (d) Australia, which has a higher meat consumption than any other country in the world.
4. (c) Wieners, which contain no more than 30% fat by government standard. Peanuts contain the most fat—49%. Chocolate contains 35% fat; cream cheese, 38% fat.

Education Is First Issue At Conferences

Education is the first general issue to be explored at the first of a series of eight mini-conferences included in the year-long conference on rural America, announce conference chairpersons Jacqueline Bergan and Audrey Eickhof. This first mini-conference, part of the Bicentennial celebration, will be held November 24 at Crookston's central high auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

Three speakers will be presented, and each speaker will be immediately followed by a reactionary session. The session will be stimulated by a panel of three or four reactionists. A moderator will be present to involve participation by the general public in attendance, Bergan explains. The reactionary panel will be chosen from all areas of the community and surrounding area, and should represent people who are concerned with and related to the educational processes in our communities.

With the three speakers scheduled to appear at the education mini-conference being Howard Casmey, Minnesota commissioner of education; Lance Holthuzen, director of future studies, science museum of Minnesota; and Dr. Ervie Glick, chairman of the General education division, University of Minnesota technical college—Crookston.

Purpose of the November seminar and the seminars to follow is to stimulate interest among the entire rural population of the area in the specific topic of each seminar, Eickhof pointed out. They then will be informed and aware of the issues when the second part of the year long program is presented.

The second part will be a three-day conference next July 15, 16 and 17 focusing to a greater extent on the issues introduced at each seminar.

Aim of the Conference on rural America is to encourage as many people from as many different walks of life as possible to attend the seminars and, ultimately, the major conference, Bergan notes. Through this program, it is hoped to give people a means of participating in and influencing processes that directly affect their lives.

The ultimate goal following the conference is to prepare well organized, sensible and workable suggestions to present to the legislature.

The year long program began with a kickoff informational meeting on October 16. It is hoped that the effects of the program November 24 and the following seven mini-conferences will not end after the major conference. Committee members hope this year's carefully planned learning and participatory experience will be only a beginning for all people to become more involved in processes that vitally affect them. In addition, they hope it will establish an ongoing dialogue among rural residents and between rural residents and policy makers.

The Conference of rural America, in its entirety, is a program that will depend on widespread public participation and input. The program has been formulated by many people in the Crookston community and in outlying communities who believe rural Americans are interested in their futures and are willing to get involved.

The November seminar is being sponsored by the Crookston Mrs. Jaycees organization. As a sponsor, the club has endorsed the educational seminar and agrees to help in planning and organizing the seminar.

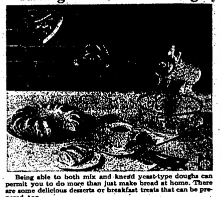
Making A Swedish Tea Ring



Being able to both mix and knead yeast-type doughs can permit you to do more than just make bread at home. There are some delicious desserts or breakfast treats that can be prepared, too.

For instance, there's a Swedish Tea Ring that is ideal for a special brunch as well as being a breakfast treat. It's made with the multi-purpose basic sweet yeast dough recipe Sunbeam's dough hook mixer recipe book provides.

Of course, all the work of mixing and kneading the dough is taken out of the job when the new Sunbeam dough hook Mixmaster mixer is used. Here is the recipe:

¼ cup warm water (110°F)	¼ cup sugar
1 pkg. active dry yeast	1 teasp. salt
¾ cup scalded milk	1 egg
¼ cup melted margarine	3 - 3¾ cups all purpose flour

Insert Dough Hooks into mixer: see instructions. Dissolve yeast in warm water. Scald milk and let cool to lukewarm. Combine margarine, egg and milk mixture and add to yeast mixture. On speed No. 6 (medium) gradually add 1 cup flour, salt and sugar. Mix until blended. Gradually add 1 ¼ cup flour. Turn to speed No. 2 (low). Gradually add remaining flour. Dough will adhere and clean sides of bowl. Total mixing and kneading time using dough hooks 8 - 10 minutes. Remove dough from bowl. Form into ball and place in a greased bowl. Cover and let rise 90 minutes. Punch down, cover and let rise 30 minutes. Punch down.

To make the Swedish Tea Ring, just follow these easy steps:

Roll dough into a rectangle 14" long and 10" wide. Combine ⅓ cup sugar and 2 teasp. cinnamon. Brush top of rectangle with melted margarine. Sprinkle sugar mixture over rectangle. Distribute ⅓ cup raisins, ¼ cup Maraschino cherries coarsely chopped and ¼ cup nutmeats coarsely chopped over dough. Roll up tightly from wide end (you should have a long tube-shaped roll). Seal seam securely. Form a ring and seal ends together. With a pair of scissors, cut 2/3 of the way through the ring at 1" intervals. Twist sections on side. Let rise for 20-30 minutes. Bake at 325° F for 30-40 minutes. Top will be golden brown and ring will sound hollow when tapped with knuckles. If glaze is desired:

Mix ½ cup powdered sugar with one tbsp. warm water. Drizzle over cooled Tea Ring.

HUNDREDS OF ITEMS are included in the inventory of Thebothofus, including a number of consignment items from area craftsmen. Dee Trudeau, one of the partners in the business, handles consignments and does the book work for the partnership.

What's Thebothofus?

Unique Gift Shop Opens Its Doors

by Marvin Landin
Times Editor

Just inside the door an artificial hen sits in a box of excelsior. The glass counter to the left displays original ceramic work by James Thurber's daughter and Indian peace pipes by Dan Needham of Goodridge. Customers in the cozy team room sip chocolate coffee and lunch on sweet and sour bean soup or sandwich loaf.

Serving the team room customers—in a bright long dress and bonnet—is Jean Michalek. In a matching outfit, Dee Trudeau banters with visitors to another room in Thief River Falls' newest and probably most unique business place. Jean and Dee are Thebothofus—the name they have adopted and worked into their novel and interesting emporium of epicurean gifts.

The name of the business—boldly displayed on their completely refurbished house at the corner of LaBree avenue and Fifth street—was inadvertently supplied by an antique dealer. Jean and Dee had purchased some antiques, and the dealer asked to whom they should be billed.

"Charge them to the both of us," they replied. So the dealer did as directed, dutifully writing on the sales slip "The Both Of Us". The idea was later crammed into a shortened Thebothofus, and that is how it remains.

Thebothofus is a model of how ingenuity and endeavor can combine to create a high interest business which causes nearly all visitors to marvel at its novelty. "A "nice old house", built in 1901 by a Mr. Aas who operated a general mercantile store, was purchased by Richard Trudeau and Edward Michalek under the formal partnership of T & M Investments. They lease the downstairs to their wives and rent out the upstairs as living quarters.

The ladies completely refurbished the outside—scraped, sanded, nailed, caulked and primed every board on the house. They hauled in a wrought iron railing from Quebec and—after a hail storm hit when they were nearly finished—replaced a lot of broken glass including some acid glass windows.

Nothing structurally was changed inside the house which has solid oak woodwork, eight foot one inch doors and an oval window. In the period around 1920 the upstairs rooms were rented to workers on the Soo Line railroad.

Dee and Jean had worked together in decorating and refinishing the Thief River golf club. Jean ran a Christmas boutique in her home on LaBree av. N. for two years

Gives Ruling On Teacher Salary

Arbitrator's decision on a teachers' association grievance on salary schedule advancement will be among discussion topics when the Thief River Falls board of education meets tonight at 8 p.m. in the school district service center.

According to Al Sollom, director of the Kramer-Brown Uniserve unit (a division of the Minnesota Education association), arbitrator Arnold Karlins has ruled for the Thief River Falls Education association.

"In layman's terms," Sollom said, "The award means that the part of the local teachers, pay which has been held back by the school board since the beginning of the school year will now be paid to the teachers as provided for in the master contract."

School board attorney John Novacek, however, said he has been investigating possible appeal procedure under the law. A board decision is expected tonight. Among the issues in the question—with the 1975-76 and 1976-77 teacher contract issue still unresolved—is which figures are to be used as a starting point in computing percentage of increase in the new salary schedule. Granting the annual increment would reduce the percentage of any additional increase given under the new contract.

Arbitrator Karlins stated that, in his opinion, although the master contract expired on June 30, 1975, it does not follow that the expiration cuts off obligations incurred or rights and benefits earned and acquired while the agreement was in force, Sollom said.

He cited Karlins' ruling as follows:

"All teachers employed by the board in the 1974-75 school year and retained for the 1975-76 school year shall forthwith be advanced to that experience step which reflects

The 23 sales and marketing students hope to accumulate approximately 1,000 completed surveys. Results will be available to the chamber of commerce, local government officials, the news media and interested citizens in December.

County Tax Levy To Rise $157,288

Pennington county board of commissioners, in a meeting Friday in the county courthouse, approved substantially increased tax levies to county residents in 1976. The total net levy for the coming year was set at $1,096,614 compared to $939,326.17 in 1975—an increase of $157,288.

Part of the reason for the increase were payments toward bond retirement on two county projects—$110,000 for the Oakland Park nursing home and $62,000 for the law enforcement center. Also in 1976, the county's annual appropriation to the Northwest Regional Development Commission was sharply increased (due to a request from the commission) to $4,452 compared to $2,501 for this year.

In the three major areas for levy, the total levies were: Revenue—Increased from $130,469.17 in 1975 to $220,954; roads and bridges—increased from $255,857 to $309,208; and welfare—decreased from $553,000 to $390,000.

County auditor C.W. Rodekuhr reported that also contributing to the revenue increase were 1975 salary adjustments for county personnel, county court costs, public pensions and $6,500 in matching funds to the soil conservation service for soil sampling.

Approximately $38,000 of the $53,351 increase in the roads and bridges levy resulted from repairs to county roads necessitated by last summer's flooding and heavy rainfall that were not reimbursed by the state and federal government.

The sizeable decrease in the welfare levy was possible because of a law passed by the History Society Solicits Stories

"Preserving Pennington Past" is the motto cited by Mrs. Inga Geving, president of the county historical society, as she encourages Thief River Falls and other county families to send in histories for inclusion in the county historical book.

"History must be written to be preserved," Mrs. Geving said. "You are making history today—everyone does—and although the routine events may not seem important, they may prove to be part of major developments when viewed in the future from a perspective of the past."

The pattern of history is not always visible in the present, she noted, but it becomes clearer in the future as time passes and "someone sorts it out".

"In today's swiftly changing world, it is increasingly important that those who share concern for the past, present and future work together to help save what is meaningful," she said. "Today quickly becomes yesterday and what is lost can never be recovered."

At the last official count, the local historical society has received 646 stories or histories for the book to be published. More recent histories are expected to have boosted the total to beyond 700. Hickory township has the most active writers with 117 articles being received. Thief River Falls, in spite of containing more than half of the total county population, has only 75 histories submitted.

Mrs. Geving encourages the public to visit the one-room school building at the Pennington Pioneer village to see what the township and community chairmen have accomplished in gathering historical items.

PLACEMENT OF COLUMNS for the second story of the medical office building addition to Northwestern hospital services in Thief River Falls was taking place as this Times photo was taken late last week. Progress on the building is considered to be on schedule. With the top decking of the first story partially in place, two additional stories will remain to be constructed where the second story columns are now being placed. The curved concrete area at the right of the photo is where elevator shafts and restroom areas will be located. Main entrance to the medical office building and hospital will be in the center foreground where men can be seen working. The three large pillars at the left of the photo indicate where the north wall of the connecting link between the hospital and medical building will be located. Structural work at the left where decking has not yet been placed will form the basis for radiology, emergency and laboratory departments.

Filmed in the homes of handicapped persons who have learned to work around their limitations, the program offers tips on grocery shopping, washing clothes, making beds and purchasing and altering clothing for wheelchair comfort and ease of dressing for many handicaps.

The six-program series is produced by the University of Minnesota's agricultural extension service and deals with household techniques and adaptations to aid persons with a variety of handicaps.

The clothing and housekeeping hints program will appear at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday on channel 2 or channel 13.

Thebothofus Gift Shop Has Grand Opening

after having the same type of business for 11 years in Chacago. She also has experience in restaurant operation. Dee operated a general store in Euclid for five years and worked in stores run by her parents, including a store at Dorothy some years ago. She was eager to get into the antique business.

The decision to go into Thebothofus together was made in June of this year and work started. Included in the effort was some politicking in the neighborhood and city hall to obtain a variance from zoning regulations to allow the business operation in a residential district. The house, on a corner lot, is surrounded on two sides by a commercial zone.

Now that the place is open for business (it opened October 25) on a regular basis from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, what can the gift customer expect to find?

Would you believe flavored coffees and teas in the gourmet room, pendants and plaques made in California by monks expelled from Communist China, imported Scandinavian items, folk toys from the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia, original art work and prints, original and replica antiques and unique items made by local and area craftsmen? That is just a sample.

The team room seats 16 people cozily at four small tables. The menu isn't large, but its not exactly ordinary. There is a new delicate soup each day, such as cream of lettuce, cream of carrot or sweet and sour bean. Sandwich loaf is the main luncheon course and a house salad and desserts are different every day.

Flavored teas and coffees served in the team room are the same as those offered for sale in the gourmet room—allowing customers an opportunity to sample before they buy. The same applies to dessert sauces.

Jean presides in the kitchen and tea room, serving lunches from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and dessert and coffee to 3:30 p.m. Dee handles the book work, front part of the house where giftware is sold, and takes care of consignments. Presently the business has 48 consignors of items, ranging in price from less than a dollar to $300. Among them are a large wood carving, an all-wool afghan in Icelandic pattern, 60x34 advent tree wall hangings, jewelry and other items.

"We don't like to call our merchandise exclusive because that isn't really a proper description. What we try to do is offer items which are different from those which can be purchased at normal retail establishments," Dee said.

"And our tea room isn't big," Jean added, "but it is about all I can comfortably handle by myself and we are not prepared to hire regular help at this stage of the game. It gives people a place to meet and allows our customers of gift items to sit down and have a cup of tea or coffee while considering the merchandise we have to offer."

A grand opening is scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day. The tea room will be closed but free coffee and cookies will be served. "It should be a lot of fun," Dee and Jean said.

"Come and see Thebothofus."

Historical Society Seeks More Stories

recipes and other items recalling the fun, hardships and experiences of parents and grandparents of county residents," she said.

"One of the things we are seeking now are the words to singing games which were played in the early schools of the county. Some of these were probably in foreign languages. We would appreciate having some of these written down before the people who used to play them are no longer here to remember."

Sherryl Cardella is working on a full-time basis for the historical society at the one-room school in preparation of the histories and is assisted by Carol Thode on a part-time basis in filing and typing.

At last recording, the following numbers of histories had been received from Pennington county communities and townships: Thief River Falls, 75; St. Hilaire, 8; Goodridge, 8; Black River, 2; Bray, 14; Cloverleaf, 45; Deer Park, 3; Goodridge township, 13; Hickory, 117; Highlanding, 66; Kratka, 38; Mayfield, 30; and Norden 23;

Also North, 28; Numedal, 11; Polk Centre, 8; Reiner, 24; River Falls, 5; Rocksbury, 17; Sanders, 26; Silverton, 24; Smiley, 20; Star, 32; Wyandotte, 9.

Among the items received was a poem written by the late H. O. Berve, a former Pennington county attorney, state legislator and Marshall county attorney. The poem follows:

HOPE AND PEACE
By H. O. Berve

There is hope in the early morning,
When the sun shines bright and clear,
And we go to our work a-singing,
With never a doubt or fear.

There is hope in the happy days of youth,
As we feel our youthful strength,
And the rushing youngster, long and lean,
May win in the race of life.

There is peace in the quiet evening,
When the darkness gathers around,
And we sit in the shadows dreaming,
Of the joys that we have found.

God grant as our final day draws nigh,
And our evening sun sets low,
The hope and peace of a life well spent,
As we gaze at the sunset's glow.

County Tax Levy To Rise By $157,288

1975 legislature which enables the state to assume 90 per cent of the counties' 50 per cent share of medical assistance benefits.

As a result of the added costs, the mill levy was tentatively raised from 33.53 in 1975 to approximately 39.65. However, the new mill factor was based on the 1975 valuation of $28,016,048 because the 1976 valuation has not yet been received by the county. When the 1976 valuation is available (and providing that the valuation has increased, as is expected) the mill levy will be adjusted lower than the current estimate.

The county board will consider the 1976 salary schedule for commissioners and per diem rates at the December 9 meeting. In other matters the board set the annual appropriation for the occupational development center at 30 cents per capital, or $4,377.60. Jobs Incorporated will receive $1,500 for agricultural promotion. Finally, the board set an appropriation of $300 for the law library.

Arbitrator Gives Teacher Salary Ruling

full credit for all years of experience acquired prior to the 1975-76 school year. The board, having elected to follow the 1974-75 schedule pending agreement on a new contract and schedule, those teachers shall be paid the increments attributable to such experience as shown on the 1974-75 salary schedule retroactive to the first pay period of the 1975-76 school year."

The arbitrator's decision also indicated that the board was not necessarily required to place teachers new to the system on the same schedule, but suggested that such a policy be followed.

Karlins heard the school board and teachers present their views at an arbitration hearing October 20 at the school district service center.

Chronic alcoholic mothers are more likely to give birth to physically and mentally deficient children, reports The National Foundation-March of Dimes. A recent study showed that their babies may be abnormally short, underweight, mentally below par, suffer heart and joint defects, and be slow to grow and develop.

Seniors Here Take Test On Homemaking

Twenty-second annual Betty Crocker search for leadership in family living, a $110,000 college scholarship program sponsored by General Mills, gets underway December 2. High school seniors at Lincoln school and throughout the country will join in a written knowledge and attitude examination which will determine individual college scholarship awards of $500 to $5,000.

Participating seniors will compete in a 50-minute examination prepared and graded by Science Research Associates, Chicago, who are also responsible for all judging and selection of winners. The local winner will receive a certificate from General Mills and will, together with other school winners, remain in the running for state and national honors.

Need Improved Farm Property Tax Climate

Increases in property valuations, primarily on agricultural land and farms, ordered this week in some 30 Minnesota counties by the state board of equalization, points up the urgent need for "an improved property tax climate" for farmers, the president of the Minnesota Farm bureau federation said recently.

Carroll G. Wilson of Faribault noted that while legislative steps over the past eight years have relieved the burden statewide, "property taxes continue to weigh heavily on real estate in rural Minnesota." Assessment increases, ranging from 10 to 20 per cent on farmland, will "most likely mean that affected farmers will be picking up more of their taxing district's levy—and that means more money for taxes," Wilson said.

Property taxes, which this year for the first time in history increased in all of the state's 87 counties, rank Minnesota 21st among the 50 states in per capita collections and 19th in collections per $1,000 of personal income, Wilson said. "Add to this our Number Two ranking in the nation in state individual income tax revenues per $1,000 of personal income," he added, "and it's understandable why we're often called a 'high-tax' state."

Inflated land values is the "real culprit" behind mandated assessment level increases," the state Farm Bureau head said, adding that deficit spending by government is inflation's major cause. "We have yet to make any serious effort toward holding the line and cutting back on local and state spending, in my opinion," the farm leader commented. "If every attempt is made to do so, then we'll see reduction in our tax bills, but not unless and until."

Wilson said also that he felt assessors for taxation pruposes should place "all the emphasis they possibly can" on the earnings potential of agricultural land in addition to its market value.

Farm Bureau, its state president concluded, intends continuing its long-time efforts to make the property tax "an equitable one for all taxpayers."

State Adopts Local Program

Lincoln high school's community action program, offered by the social studies department each semester, has been adapted for use by many other high schools in the state, according to a report by the center for youth development and research, University of Minnesota and the state association of secondary school principals.

Thief River Falls was one of the first schools in the state to offer a service-learning course in its social studies department. Initiated in January, 1974 by Mark Schug, CAP is designed to provide students with an opportunity to spend one hour per day, Monday-Thursday, doing volunteer work at various social service agencies in the community, and in return gaining social studies credit for their experience.

A total of 22 students are presently enrolled in the program, which is divided into two learning situations. In the first four days volunteers serve at Washington and St. Bernard's schools, Valley and Crestview homes, the Northwestern hospital CNC unit and Falls' day activity center. School volunteers primarily tutor students individually or in small groups, while volunteers in the other agencies provide a variety of activities including recreation, letter writing, story reading, parties on holidays, personal hygiene and conversation.

On Fridays, volunteers meet in a classroom where they take part in activities geared to help students succeed in their community assignments and to learn more about the various social services. Instructive devices include reading, class discussion, field trips, films and filmstrips, special training workshops and role-playing.

The reliance on placement in human services stems from a belief that students should be engaged in productive tasks that fulfill community needs. Social agencies given students volunteer tasks which allow them to perform recognizably beneficial services.

After a one semester pilot period in 1974, CAP was evaluated by a pre and post attitudinal survey, input from agency supervisors, student volunteers, and the instructor, and approved for the regular social studies curriculum by the city board of education. When Mark Schug resigned from his position in Thief River Falls to take a position in Rochester, the CAP program was assumed by Cal Lindberg.

Schug transplanted the program in Rochester's Mayor and Marshall high schools. Other schools now implementing CAP are Eisenhower high in Hopkins, Rosemount high, Henry and Central highs in Minneapolis, Jefferson high in Bloomington, St. Paul academy and North Branch high.

Humphrey Is Concerned Over Sales Of Arms

"Disorganized and uncontrolled are the words that characterize our nation's arms export policy." States Sen. Hubert Humphrey. "We have had an alarming and steady escalation of exports, many to unstable and volatile areas.

"What we need is a complete and thorough overhaul of the military assistance and sales laws, with their conflicting potential for preserving peace and promoting war.

"Since 1968, there has been a ten-fold increase in government arms sales. We now are the world's leading arms merchant, outdistancing our nearest rival, the Soviet Union, by twice as much.

"Just in the last fiscal year," he added, "we sold $9.6 billion in military equipment and supplies to 71 nations and gave away nearly $600 million in arms. In addition, $601 million in arms were sold during the last fiscal year through commercial channels.

"To put some order into this situation, I introduced legislation on November 13 to check the momentum of programs which have expended far beyond common sense and the nation's security needs.

"Among the major changes which my bill would make in our nation's arms export policy, it would improve the scrutiny given to the foreign policy aspects of arms sales proposals, both within the Executive Branch and the Congress," he added.

"It would provide better coordinating of arms sales by vesting the authority for licensing all arms exports, government and commercial, within the state department.

"It would phase out the grant military programs during the next two fiscal years and terminate the 44 U.S. military missions and groups abroad, as well as other similar units.

"It would require that all government-to-government contracts be available for public inspection. Too much of the sales program in the past has been conducted in secrecy, without the knowledge of Congress or the public.

"To summarize my views then on the arms sales question, I do not believe that the sale of arms to foreign countries is evil or wrong. We have important security and foreign policy interests in the sale of arms to many countries.

"This legislation will not halt arms sales, but it will bring rationality to these programs. It will open the policy process to public scrutiny and congressional oversight, enabling foreign policy aspects of arms sales to be evaluated in a new fashion. We must not miss the opportunity to play a leadership role in the control of trade in conventional weapons," the Senator concluded.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

by Ellen M. Spray

. . .and they paused, giving thanks for their blessings.

(A number of local residents who stopped at the office or called were asked the question, "For what are you thankful for this year, at Thanksgiving?" A few were called. Some told of deaths in the family, illnesses and problems encountered during the year—yet all gave the same answer, "I have so much to be thankful for . . .")

Mrs. Sherryll Irvine, administrator at Oakland Park Nursing home, stated, "that although the building of the new nursing home is a materialistic thing, it is the most beautiful thing that has ever happened in my life. We can't turn away from the problems of the aged. We no longer can hide the elderly in a back bedroom or shut them away in a dingy upstairs room. They deserve a better life than that. They deserve to live their remaining years with dignity, with a chance to live to their full potential of productivity, regardless of their potential. What has touched me most, and for which I am the most thankful, is the receptiveness of the people in this community to the problems of the aging. Happiness is having a place for these aged people to call home."

Mrs. Anna Magnuson, 86, who resides at 410 Knight Avenue North, said, "I'm so thankful that I am still able to care for myself, most of the time; and that there is a God to pray to—a God who hears and answers prayers."

Mrs. Oscar Johnson, who operates an intermediate care facility for mentally retarded adults, was rocking her little granddaughter when contacted. She stated "I'm especially thankful for our grandchildren, a 1½ year old granddaughter and a four-year-old grandson. It is a thrill to watch how much enjoyment the residents receive from their contact with the children. The bond between them emphasizes what love is all about. I'm also very thankful for the community support in our program and for God's grace that had been with us every day in our boarding home." Mrs. Johnson's plans for Thanksgiving includes a dinner for 25, including the 14 residents in the home.

Alan Noreen, manager of the American Legion club: "I'm thankful that my family is healthy; that all are well."

David Drotts, insurance Agent: "That we have been offered salvation. The older I get, the more I appreciate it. I'm also very thankful for our country. I believe, that even with it's problems, we live in the best country in the world."

Mrs. Earl Ripley, 215 South Merriam: "Of all my many blessings, my greatest is for knowing my Lord Jesus Christ and that a number of our grandchildren have also accepted Him as their savior. I'm also thankful for health, strength and a good husband."

Robert Lundbloom, advertising agent for the Thief River Falls Shoppers Guide: "Today, I'm thankful for the beautiful fall weather."

Ole Engelstad, councilman, was at a meeting, but his wife said that I'm sure he'd say, he's thankful for good health that permits him to continue visiting the hospital every day.

Mrs. Val Chommie, volunteer worker with the Friendship club: "I'm so thankful to God that there has been no let up of His goodness and mercy. His blessings are many and choice, all so undeserved. I'm also thankful for the many blessings received even in sorrow; but most of all, I'm thankful for His steadfast love, patience and guidance and for the many friendships given me."

Inga Geving, president of the Thief River Falls Historical society: "I'm thankful that I'm well enough to continue my work of preserving the past and present for the future. Today will soon be yesterday and then it may be too late. I'm especially grateful for the many dedicated people helping to preserve the history of Pennington county and for those working in establishing the Pioneer Village. Although I've had many sad experiences, I'm thankful that my Christian parents taught me to pray. I'm also thankful for my church and for my pastor, who is teaching me to appreciate the little things in life.

Bob Carlson, Mayor of Thief River Falls: I'm so thankful for my immediate family, my wife, son, a wonderful daughter-in-law and a beautiful granddaughter." (Doesn't that sound like a typical grandfather?) "Although it may sound repetitious, I'm thankful for the confidence that the people of Thief River Falls have placed in me and for being able to serve them for the past 18 years."

Mrs. Key Teeters, a student at AVTI, who is also employed at the school: quickly replied to the question by stating, "For my fantastically understanding friends."

Mrs. Vernon Nelson, insurance office secretary: "I'm thankful that my husband's cancer hasn't progressed. We are so thankful for the Thief River Falls doctors, for their thoughtfulness and concern and for the many prayers that have sustained us through the year."

Norman Peterson, Northwestern hospital administrator: "I'm thankful that I'm able to do what I'm doing as I'm happy in my work. Today I'm expecially happy as we received word that the grandchildren will be with us for Christmas."

Ebba Sagmoen, past president of the Thief River Falls Women's club: "Mostly I'm thankful that I've retained my faith in the Good Lord and that He has sustained me through illness and problems with my eyes. At my age one tends to dwell on lofty thoughts, rather than on material things."

Mrs. A. Dahlstrom, 103 Kendall Avenue South; replied, "For Salvation, family and good health."

Mrs. Mitch Evenson, a newcomer to this community, "I'm so thankful that our young son has finally adjusted to his new surroundings and is finding happiness."

(Thanks, everyone for answering the question. May you all have a peaceful Thanksgiving with your family and friends. E.M.S.)

Viking-Land Endorses Plan On Road Signs

Board of directors of Viking-Land, USA, has endorsed a plan of public signing along Minnesota trunk highways to replace private road signs which are now banned.

In 1965, the federal highway beautification act provided for the removal of most privately owned road signs as an environmental improvement. Funds have been appropriated to reimburse the owners of those signs removed. States not complying with the act have been threatened with loss of federal aid to the state trunk system.

Over the past 10 years, various private industry groups have protested the federal act. One among them, the travel industry, has pointed out that removal of private identification and directional signs without a public program to replace them is not in the interest of the traveling public. Often cited as a result of lack of knowledge by travelers about the local area is the amount of fuel consumed as the traveler tries to find his destination. Those destinations are often far removed from the state trunk system.

As a result of research conducted by Viking-Land and the West Central regional development commission, Fergus Falls, it has been determined that the state of Vermont has devised a workable substitute to private signing. The Vermont plan has been approved by the Federal highway administration and allows for directional and informational signs representing private concerns to be erected on state highway rights of way. The plan also has a system of informational plazas giving more detailed information about individual commercial facilities, primarily travel related facilities.

Viking-Land directors view the Vermont plan as workable in Minnesota and have endorsed it to legislators and public officials as well as to the travel industry in Minnesota. Comment on the plan is invited from those interested. A copy of the Vermont plan may be obtained from Viking-Land, USA, Box 545 Dept. RS, Battle Lake, MN 56515.

Fitzsimons Tribute

In a tribute to Sen. Richard Fitzsimons of Warren who has announced he will not seek another term in the Minnesota senate, the editor of the Murray County Herald at Slayton makes a point of interest to all rural Minnesotans:

A lot of people in southwestern Minnesota, unfortunately, are not well acquainted with many of the efforts of Sen. Richard Fitzsimons of Warren. Knowingly or not, however, we will be missing his influence in the future as he has announced that he will not be a candidate for re-election to the state senate.

Fitzsimons is an extremely capable man. The fact that he is a conservative is mere coincidence. The fact that he is also a farmer who feels he cannot afford to be a member of a full time legislature, however, is indicative of the trend in which Minnesota now finds itself.

"Now that the Minnesota Legislature has annual sessions it is very difficult to serve in the legislature unless you are self-employed," he said.

What bothers us is the fact that so many very able men have dropped from the political picture for this same reason, and many more will do so in the future. The days of farmers and small town business or professional people serving in the legislature appear to be numbered. They simply cannot afford to do it under the new system, and most unfortunate is the fact that the new system is no more effective than the old.

It was under the leadership of farmers and small business operators that Minnesota enjoyed good government for many years. With their passing from the picture it become doubly important for the outstate areas to send trained, experienced and skilled politicians to the state house. We will be sending spokesmen to St. Paul in the future, or we will be at an ever greater disadvantage than we are today.

Business Hit Again

Following editorial is from the Fargo Forum:

It looks as if Minnesota businessmen will be hit by a tax increase in the 1976 legislative session, despite the fact that the even-numbered year session is not regarded as a time to go into tax and budget matters.

The increase is expected to come in the unemployment compensation tax which, according to recent estimates, may have to be doubled. This, in the face of a rise in unemployment compensation payments and employer contributions already built in by the 1975 Legislature.

The new increase is regarded as inevitable because the state's unemployment compensation fund has run up a $24 million debt due to a rate of unemployment that has risen beyond all expectations.

The Minnesota Employment Services department announced last week that as of Oct. 17, $159.3 million had been paid out in unemployment compensation checks, compared with $85.8 million in the same period a year ago. And high seasonal unemployment in the construction industry was yet to come.

Under the formula, every employer in the state pays a payroll tax to help support the unemployment fund. The employe pays nothing into this fund.

The tax varies, depending on how many workers a firm has fired or layed off in the past. This amount can vary from nine-tenths of one per cent to as high as six per cent of an adjusted payroll figure. Under a 1975 law the wage ceiling upon which the tax is calculated will go from $4,800 to $6,200 Jan. 1 and can go as high as $6,500 by 1977, depending on how high the average Minnesota wage goes.

With unemployment increasing at such a rapid rate, it becomes apparent that Minnesota has indeed participated in the recession.

As employers contribute more and more to unemployment compensation, the cost of doing business goes higher, the price [illegible] is increased accordingly, and the inflationary cycle continues to mount.

Efforts to decrease the cost of doing business in Minnesota have not met with much success.

The Republican minority pressed hard in the last session to get the recently-enacted two-mill payroll tax repealed, but to no avail. This is a payroll tax attached to payrolls in excess of $100,000 annually. It was enacted in 1973 to replace a tax on ponderous equipment. This tax is in excess of the other taxes for unemployment, workman's compensation, rpoperty, corporate income.

Efforts to get an investment credit on taxes passed in Minnesota have also failed.

Perhaps the Legislature will see its way clear in the 1976 session to repealing the two mill payroll tax. Some Republicans believe that the majority faction, the DFL, held off on repeal of the tax until 1976 as an election-year gambit. Whether or not this is true, it is time the two-mill payroll tax was eliminated.

No-Confidence Vote

Even members of Congress apparently are becoming fed up with the endless stream of costly regulations emanating from the nation's capital, according to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The House of Representatives voted 224-180 to give Congress veto power over standards, rules and regulations promulgated by the relatively new consumer product safety commission.

This is the agency that last November announced recall of its own lapel buttons—as hazardous because they had sharp edges, paint with too much lead and clips that could fall off and be swallowed by children. The button promoted toy safety.

More recently, the agency announced it was considering a new safety standard for power lawn mowers which—in the studied opinion of the Stanford research institute—would add $44 to the cost of the least expensive power mowers, put 15 to 20 manufacturers out of business, depress sales 20 per cent and cost consumers nearly $400 million its first year.

A legislative newsletter of the Chamber of commerce of the United States, observed that the House action reflects "growing disillusionment with excessive federal regulation."

It also reflects a growing tendency in Washington of the Congress to second-guess itself. Already there is talk of rewriting an election campaign reform law passed only last year. Reportedly, even one of its sponsors admitted: "I didn't know what was in the bill."

Back To Spanking

Following editorial is from the Milbank (S.D.) Grant County Review:

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled the other day that teachers may spank pupils, even if their parents object. Some other type of punishment must "ordinarily" have been tried first, the judges suggested.

The decision comes as a big surprise in view of the court's recent liberalism and concern for the rights of the individual. It surely came as a surprise to teachers who have seen many of their colleagues sued by parents who objected to disciplinarian actions by the teachers. And it must certainly have been a disappointment to the children's rights lobby.

Students should never be abused by teachers, but there are times when a little physical persuasion will work wonders. In hundreds of schools throughout the nation, the break down of discipline has created uncontrollable situations. It is the awful truth that some schools' policemen must be on duty to protect pupils and teachers alike.

Every now and then we read of a killing or act of violence in a school. Most of us know of teachers who have left the profession because the hassle of dealing with undisciplined youngsters was too discouraging.

Perhaps this is what the judges were thinking about when they made their "spanking decision." This decision was probably not based on constitutional guarantees but a time honored old adage the wisdom of which is beyond dispute. It is this: "Spare the rod and spoil the child".

Senate Report

— by —

Senator Richard Fitzsimons
Minnesota District One

Is a "super board" of higher education needed for Minnesota? You are likely to hear a lot about this proposal in the coming months.

Senator Nick Coleman, senate majority leader, has authored such a proposal for introduction in the senate. Representative Peter Fugina has the companion bill in the House.

Under this proposal all institutions of higher learning, except perhaps the vocational technical colleges, would be under this new 16 member board.

At the present time the university is governed by the board of regents, the community colleges by the Community college board, and the state colleges by the state college board. The authors of the bill point out that Wisconsin has accomplished part of what this bill proposes in their merger of institutions.

I have serious doubts about the desirability of making this kind of change. At the same time, I think Senator Coleman is to be commended for provoking discussion on how our present boards are working.

If the public and the legislature establish the proper dialogue about this proposed change in the coming months, our whole system of management of our higher education would be strengthened.

In any event, the board of regents of the university was established in the state constitution and only a vote of the people can change that.

I hope enough people in District I will take the time and effort to acquaint themselves with Senator Coleman's proposal and after coming to their own conclusions, will feel free to express them.

Protecting your dollar!

By Warren Spannaus
Attorney General
State of Minnesota

Young children will eat and drink almost anything! Keep all liquids and solids that may be poisonous out of their reach.

This year an estimated 500,000 children will be victims of accidental poisoning. Ninety percent of all cases reported involve children under five years of age. Medicines, household preparations, insect sprays, kerosene, lighter fluid, some furniture polishes, turpentine, paints, solvents and products containing lye and acids are most frequently the cause of accidental poisoning among children.

Never leave a bottle of aspirin or other pills out of place. Return it to a safe place immediately after using. Aspirin is the most common cause of accidental poisoning. Keep it out of sight and out of reach—even if it has a "safety cap."

Keep all products in original containers. Never place kerosene, anti-freeze, paints or solvents in cups, glasses, milk or soft-drink bottles or other containers customarily used for food or drinks.

Never call medicine "candy." Children should not be deceived by having flavored medicines called "candy." When left alone, they may locate the bottle and eat or drink its contents.

If a child is in the crawling stage, arrange to keep household products in places other than below the kitchen sink unless the cabinet is locked. If the child is walking, be certain that bottles and boxes containing medicines or household products are put away before answering the telephone or doorbell. If the child is able to climb, find a shelf that is completely beyond his ability to reach, or—better yet—lock the products in a cabinet or closet.

To "poison-proof" your home take the following steps:

1. Keep household products and medicines out of reach and out of sight of children, preferably in a locked cabinet or closet. Even if you must leave the room for only an instant, remove the container to a safe spot.
2. Store medicines separately from other household products, and keep these items in their original containers—never in cups or soft-drink bottles.
3. Be sure that all products are properly labeled, and read the label before using.
4. Always turn the light on when giving or taking medicine.
5. Since children tend to imitate adults, avoid taking medications in their presence.
6. Clean out your medicine cabinet priodically. Get rid of old medicines by flushing them down the drain, rinsing the container in water and then discarding it.

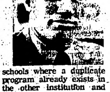
notes from the governor



Wendell R. Anderson

In 1973, Minnesota and Wisconsin established higher education reciprocity between our two states in what has since been called the most successful program of its kind in the nation. In July of this year, we began a similar program with North Dakota.

A reciprocity agreement does away with nonresident tuition for those young people from Minnesota and North Dakota who attend public universities and colleges in the two states. Such an agreement gives students a greater range of school choices, sharply reduces the cost of their education, and allows the higher education systems of the two states to avoid unnecessary duplication of resources and facilities.

On a recent visit to Moorhead, I met with officials from Moorhead State University and North Dakota State University to discuss the progress to date on the new reciprocity arrangement. They were universally enthusiastic about it and gave every indication that it will be as successful as our agreement with Wisconsin.

The number of North Dakota students registering at Moorhead State University is up nearly 100 per cent over 1974 and is projected to increase even more. North Dakota officials, while lacking final figures, were confident their enrollment of Minnesota students would experience similar gains.

While it is still too early to assess this kind of impact under the North Dakota agreement, administrators from Moorhead State and North Dakota State indicated that it might soon be possible to begin eliminating academic programs in one of the schools where a duplicate program already exists in the other institution and the demand can be met in a single school.

I was much encouraged by this preliminary report. I think we can do even better in the next state of educational cooperation with North Dakota by including the vocational-technical schools. And in the near future similar agreements with South Dakota and Iowa are a real possibility creating a truly regional post - secondary educational system for our young people.

We're doing our best to hold down costs, because we know that these costs have to be passed along to you, the consumer.

We believe in trying to keep energy costs down, with sensible land reclamation and environmental procedures that are not burdensome to the paying public, yet that will do the job. We believe in protecting and reclaiming our resources for future generations, while providing the necessary energy for present and future use.

We believe that this nation faces a long-term oil and gas shortage. Electric power produced by lignite can alleviate these shortages by replacing oil and gas in some applications, thus making more oil and gas available for fertilizer, farm tractors, transportation and in food production.

Higher costs place disproportionate burdens on the farmer, working people, the poor, and those on fixed incomes. Sound mining laws are necessary, but frivolous or punitive mining laws could be wasteful of resources, and contribute to higher prices. Coal extraction taxes also must be passed on to the general public.

We don't like inflation and higher costs any more than you do, and we are doing our best to keep the cost of electricity down. We know we have to pass higher costs along to you. We don't like to do that, and we do care because it is your money.

Keeping up with mounting energy demands and trying to keep electrical costs DOWN are our problems. We are working hard to solve them, and believe that part of the solution is in the use of lignite to generate electricity.

Class On Human Sexuality At U Of M Is Debated

Refusal of the University of Minnesota board of regents to routinely pass on two requests to state and federal agencies for grants to the medical school's program on human sexuality raised basic questions about academic freedom which were debated at the November board meeting.

The regents voted 7-5 against a request by L. J. Lee, a regent from the small town of Bagley in northwestern Minnesota, for a committee to investigate the sexuality program. Lee also moved that the committee membership be approved by those who supported his motion.

Summing up the views of the majority on the board, Lester A. Malerson said, "We're getting on very thin ice when we as regents might get involved in what faculty members can say and what they can't say on the campus or off the campus." Reading from a description which he said was furnished by a former student in a sexuality seminar, Lee said the course is an affront to "religious" and "normal" people. "You are told," Lee said, "that anything goes. You can have sex with yourself, your wife, your neighbor or your dog."

The program uses sexually explicit slides and movies in a "pillow room" where seminar participants relax with their "significant others"—spouses, fiances or friends and watch movies which become the basis for discussion of sexuality issues.

Donald Hastings, a professor of psychiatry and chairman of the faculty advisory committee to the program, said people in the helping professions are generally naive about dealing with sexual problems.

For example, one study in 1960 of first-year medical students revealed that two-thirds of them believed masturbation causes insanity.

The average person will try to confront a professional person with his sexual problems only once in a lifetime and the way that attempt is handled is most important, Hastings said. "What we've done in the past is to tell the patient to go home and find a more respectable problem and we'll treat that," he said.

"Participants come away from the seminars with a feeling they have a much better grasp of the spectrum of human sexual activity," Hastings said. "I think any physician going through this course will be able to deal with sexual problems on a more objective, non-judgemental basis."

Regent David C. Utz, a physician at the Mayo clinic in Rochester, moved that the board approve the grant requests as a "logical extension, an amplification of the program in human sexuality." Lee's proposal was an amendment to Utz' motion.

"Class size restrictions and priorities for professionals obviously restrict those that can attend," Utz said, "but I acknowledge the entitlement of students and others to know more about sexuality taught by knowledgeable, sincere, sensitive educators."

Lloyd Peterson, a farmer from Paynesville, disagreed. "I am fearful you people have gone too far, too fast," Peterson said, noting that some 7,200 people have participated in the course. "How far is this going to multiply?"

He said some of the staff members in the program do not have degrees. "This course has created instant counselors to prey on defenseless children and the mentally ill of all ages who will do anything to feel good about themselves," Peterson said.

Lee said that the use of so much explicit material reminds him of Hitler's propaganda techniques which, he said, were based on the assumption that "if you lied enough and lied long enough and often enough, people would finally believe what you said."

"The concern of myself and the people that I hear from is the way in which the program is presented and the manner in which it is presented and the kind of materials that are used to so-called 'desensitize' people," Lee said.

"Seemingly throughout the realm of this course, especially the desensitization part of this course, there is a repeated effort to flaunt in the face of normal people that which they all know about but which they are sensitive enough to try and keep to themselves," he said.

St. Paul regent George Latimer, a lawyer, said Lee's request was "profoundly and perfectly wrong. I simply cannot support the proposition that we take a majority vote every time a large segment of the population finds something incompatable with their interests."

Latimer said he disagrees with some of the ways in which the course is presented, but regents' involvement in such a discussion, he said, would be a violation of academic freedom.

"It is not for me to get into the shoes of people who are trained to run this program. It could be that the very ideas that are anathema to me are closer to the truth than the ideas I hold. But we will never know if every time someone steps out with a progressive program we come out and appoint a committee to study it, a committee which is more likely to stultify it than to promote it," Latimer said.

Involvement of the regents in course content, he said, would be crossing the line between policy-making and administration. Latimer cited the historical examples of Galileo, Socrates and Charles Darwin who were unpopular in their time.

"The whole history of intellectual endeavor is one in which we cannot expect the academic world to be in step with us," Latimer said.

Malkerson, who has been on the board 24 years, said regents have faced similar public outcry in the past when they allowed animal scientists to research artificial insemination and the cross-breeding of cattle.

The debate ensued after a presentation by Richard Chilgren, director of the program in human sexuality, and other officials of the university's health sciences.

The presentation was requested by the regents in October when they delayed action on a request for $229,493 from the national institute of mental health for training alcoholism counselors and $193,167 from the Minnesota department of public welfare for training state social service personnel in human sexuality.

Chilgren and Hastings outlines the need for people in the health and other helping professions to be able to deal with sexual problems of their clients. The program has also developed sexuality seminars for handicapped and mentally retarded people.

4-H Launches Gardening Program

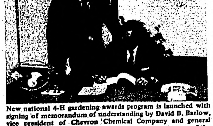
SPECIAL—Young people who like to grow and work with plants can look forward to the support and encouragement of Ortho Division, Chevron Chemical Company.

With the recent signing of a memorandum of understanding, Ortho assumed sponsorship of a national 4-H gardening program to be launched in 1976.

The announcement came from Omer G. Voss, president of the National 4-H Service Committee, a nonprofit citizens' group that channels private sector support for 4-H into the Cooperative Extension Service conducted 4-H youth program.

The new program will be a broad approach to gardening, with emphasis on exploration of careers in agriculture and horticulture. 4-H members, whether city, suburban, or rural, will learn practical and scientific approaches to growing ornamentals, flowers, vegetables and fruits, both indoors and out.

David B. Barlow, vice president of Chevron Chemical and general manager of Ortho, described the program as "action-oriented, giving 4-H'ers 9 to 19 the opportunity to work as individuals or in groups. Young persons will experience the excitement of growing things," he said, "and at the same time contribute to the family food supply and to home beautification."



New national 4-H gardening awards program is launched with signing of memorandum of understanding by David B. Barlow, vice president of Chevron Chemical Company and general manager, Ortho Division. Norman C. Mindrum, director of the National 4-H Service Committee, looks on. New program, to be supported by Ortho, will be a broad approach to gardening and will offer incentives to 4-H members through awards ranging from medals of honor to $1,000 college scholarships.

Program members will be eligible for awards donated by Ortho for excellence in 4-H gardening projects and activities. Eight top 4-H'ers can earn national college scholarships of $1,000. Sectional winners will receive expense-paid trips to the annual National 4-H Congress, and 50 state winners will be awarded U.S. Savings Bonds. In addition, Ortho will provide medals of honor to an estimated 7,000 young people, a maximum of four per county.

Ortho has supported 4-H for 19 years through scholarship awards in food production. More recently, the Chevron companies have supported 4-H Community Pride activities, a local improvement grant program.

Founded in 1907, Chevron Chemical Company manufactures under the ORTHO trademark insecticides, fungicides, weed killers and fertilizers for home garden beautification and for increasing farm crop production.

Begin Stroke Program At Sister Kenny's

Sister Kenny institute, Minneapolis, announced recently that it has inaugurated a stroke evaluation and follow-up program that is the first of its kind in the nation.

The new program, SEAF, has as its two major goals: (1.) The reduction of the incidence of complication that occurs after the stroke patient has been released from the hospital, and (2.) Elimination of unnecessary emergent hospitalization.

In addition, Sister Kenny physiatrist, Keith Sperling, M.D., who is directing the new program, states that the SEAF program will significantly reduce the cost of health care for the stroke patient.

One-third of the patients admitted to the Sister Kenny institute are stroke patients. Sister Kenny, Dr. Sperling states, instituted the new SEAF program because in its experience it learned that the physician could not do the evaluation alone. The reason: the physician focuses on the medical problems primarily and gives limited attention to those problems related to the adjustment process such as marital relationship, sexual activity—essentially the total living situation which surrounds the patient in his daily life.

Many problems basic to the patient's adjustment—as well as the family's adjustment—to a new life are overlooked. Through it's team approach Sister Kenny will consider all of the patient's needs.

Sister Kenny's stroke evaluation and follow-up program (SEAF) is a comprehensive program during which persons who have had a stroke are completely re-evaluated following discharge from the hospitals. The evaluation is done to assure that complications have not developed and to determine if further progress is possible. This evaluation is then followed by an evaluation by a full clinical team that includes occupational therapists, physical therapists, psychologists, speech therapists, nurses, vocational counselors and social workers.

Sister Kenny Institute is a pioneer in the use of the rehabilitation team approach to patient care and the development of the nurse-clinician's role as a primary member of the team—thus occupying a unique position among health care institutions in the nation. Trail

Mrs. Albert Aaknes, Trail

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Aknes and Mrs. Howard Flateland and Judy attended the funeral of Norman Rusten at the Cease funeral home chapel at Bagley on Saturday forenoon. Mr. Rusten was a mail carrier from Bemidji to Grail for a number of years. He made his home at the Albert Aaknes home. When he was a young boy he worked as a lumberjack and helped support his sister and half sister and a brother. His father passed away when he was a young boy. Everybody called him "Tiny". He never forgot the kids in Trail on all the holidays. They always got goodies from Norman. He just loved to write poems. At the funeral Judy Flateland remarked that she got a big envelope of poems he wrote. Thanks Judy.

Bake A Morning Cake

Vary family breakfast meal patterns with a home-baked Coconut Chocolate Coffee Cake middle of the week. No need to wait for company or weekends. Serve a warm, fragrant-from-the-oven treat made with Baker's Angel Flake coconut, Baker's semi-sweet chocolate, and biscuit mix. There's a luscious topping of flaked coconut with cinnamon, sugar, and butter on this moist, marbled "special."

Coconut-Chocolate Swirl Coffee Cake

- ⅓ cup flaked coconut
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, melted
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 squares semi-sweet chocolate
- 2 tablespoons milk
- 2 cups biscuit mix
- ¾ cup milk
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons salad oil

Combine coconut, butter, 1 tablespoon sugar, and the cinnamon; set aside. Melt chocolate with 2 tablespoons milk in saucepan over low heat, stirring constantly; cool. Meanwhile, combine biscuit mix, ¾ cup milk, sugar, egg, and salad oil; beat vigorously about 30 seconds. Add half the dough to the melted chocolate; blend well. Alternately spoon chocolate mixture and remaining dough into greased 8-inch square pan. Cut through batter with spatula or knife in zigzag pattern to marble. Evenly sprinkle reserved coconut mixture over batter. Bake at 400° for about 30 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool; cut into squares. Makes about 9 servings.

From Farm To Fair: 4-H Beef Program In Action

CHICAGO—Beyond souvenir stands, commercial exhibits and carnival attractions on the midway lie what many young people might call the "real action" at the state fair: the junior livestock judging events.

Last summer's fairs are only a memory now to many of the 160,000 boys and girls in the national 4-H beef program. To others, the experience is to come in the next month or two. Regardless of time, 4-H'ers who take part in judging contests get a real-life workout in decision making and confidence building that perhaps can never be duplicated.

Producing quality beef

Learn-by-doing experiences like judging and showmanship events are only part of the 4-H beef program sponsored by Celanese Chemical Company, A Division of Celanese Corporation. In a variety of projects supervised by the Cooperative Extension Service, 4-H members from 9 to 19 acquire breeding, feeding and management skills they can apply to caring for one or more beef animals.

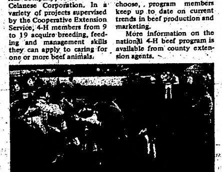
4-H'ers also earn awards donated by Celanese through the National 4-H Service Committee. The company offers $800 college scholarships to six national winners in the program, and expense-paid trips to the 54th National 4-H Congress, Nov. 30-Dec. 4 in Chicago, to one winner from each state.

Up to four 4-H'ers per county are eligible for medals of honor. All winners are selected by the Extension Service on the basis of their records of accomplishment in 4-H beef projects.

Projects for fun and profit

A beginning beef project may involve raising one or more feeder calves to market weight, then selling them for a relatively quick return. More advanced 4-H cattlemen can undertake beef breeding and stocker-feeder projects. Whatever activity they choose, program members keep up to date on current trends in beef production and marketing.

More information on the national 4-H beef program is available from county extension agents.



Judging and showmanship contests test the decision making abilities of the 160,000 young people in the national 4-H beef program sponsored by Celanese Chemical Company. The program, supervised by the Cooperative Extension Service, enrolls 4-H'ers 9-19 in a wide range of breeding, feeding and management "learning by doing" projects.

Soviet Health Officials On Minn. Visit

Eight Soviet health care specialists are visiting the University of Minnesota Health sciences center, the Mayo clinic and family practitioners for six days beginning November 21.

The group, headed by the Soviet deputy minister of public health, is returning a visit made to the USSR earlier this year by a group of American physicians, including Edward Ciriacy, chairman of the University's department of family practice and community health.

In addition to visiting health care facilities in the state, the Soviets will participate in a conference Tuesday at Nolte center for continuing education on the Minneapolis campus.

The conference, organized by Paul Elwood, president of Inter Study, health care consultants, will analyze and compare the health-care delivery systems of the two countries.

The exchange is sponsored by the Citizens exchange corps of New York and the Institute for Soviet-American relations in Moscow. The national coordinator, Bio-medicus, Inc., which manufactures a blood pump for open-heart surgery and is developing an artificial heart, will host the group Wednesday at their Minnetonka headquarters.

Smith Receives Nebraska Honors

Kent Smith, sophomore monsterback in the University of Nebraska defensive secondary, was named defensive player of the week by the Cornhusker coaching staff following his role in Nebraska's 52-0 rout of Iowa State November 15.

The Thief River Falls all-stater started ahead of Nebraska All-American candidate Wonder Monds and made five assisted tackles, one unassisted stop, broke up two passes on key plays and came up with an interception against the Cyclones before 76,131 fans in the Cornhuskers' final 1976 home game.

Smith's second consecutive starting role hiked his season statistics to seven unassisted tackles, 10 assisted stops, one tackle for a loss, one fumble recovery, two pass interceptions and four plays in which he broke up passes.

Nebraska, beaten by Oklahoma 35-10 Saturday for its first loss after 10 straight wins, will try to cap a near perfect 1975 season when the Cornhuskers meet the winner of this week's Arizona-Arizona State game in the Fiesta Bowl December 26 in Tempe, Arizona.

Conference Ties Discussed

Jim Carrington, sports writer for the Bemidji Pioneer commented last week that he doesn't feel Brainerd will necessarily join the Northwest Conference, even though Warrior athletic director-football coach Ron Stolski attended the recent NWAC fall meeting.

"A more likely alignment will have Brainerd, Little Falls, St. Cloud Tech and St. Cloud Apollo as the basis of a new league," says Carrington.

Concerning possible new conference ties, Carrington said "Aitkin is reported leaving the Mid-State for the Rum River after being switched from District 24 to 25. Crosby-Ironton may follow. Should Little Falls pull out (of the Mid-State Conference), this would leave Staples, Wadena, Park Rapids and Detroit Lakes as the remaining teams which might lead to a merger with the Northwest."

UND Sports Bonanza

University of North Dakota is planning quite a day full of athletic competition Saturday when the Sioux football, basketball and hockey teams will all be in action in Grand Forks.

North Dakota will host Livingston (Ala.) University in a first round NCAA Division II football playoff game beginning at 12:30 p.m. Then the UND basketball team hosts Great Falls College at 7 p.m. and the Sioux hockey team plays host to powerful Michigan State University at 8:30 p.m.

Thief River Falls has ties in all three games since freshman middle guard Scott Kays is a member of the Sioux football squad, junior guard Dave Dickey is a member of the Sioux basketball squad and junior wing Tom Goddard is a member of the Sioux hockey squad. Kays and Goddard are Lincoln high school graduates and Dickey is a Northland community college graduate.

Miscellaneous

+Bemidji high school will have three new football opponents for 1976. Schools Bemidji played in 1975 who won't appear on next year's schedule include Aitkin, Milaca and Minnehaha Academy. The Lumberjacks added Chisholm and Grand Rapids and are seeking a ninth game.

+Myron Brusven, 5-8, 140-pound Mahnomen halfback, rushed for over 1,000 yards for the third straight year in 1975 to help the Indians post their second consecutive 10-1 season record and a spot in the state Class B playoffs.

+Bemidji high school's hockey team has lost the services of goalie Dan Olson for the 1975-76 season through a freak accident. Olson was doing pre-season conditioning when he fell on a shin guard and broke a bone in his leg.

+Clearbrook native Wes Westrum was fired last week as manager of the San Francisco Giants. Westrum started his baseball career by playing with the Crookston Pirates of the Northern League during the late 1930's while playing Sunday ball with the old Plummer Red Sox. He reached the major leagues, playing his best ball while catching for coach Leo Durocher's New York Giants. Westrum had earlier managed the New York Mets, taking over when Casey Stengel finally retired in 1965.

TRF, Bemidji Girls Meet In Cage Opener

Coach Judy Charlebois begins her second year at the Prowler helm tonight as the girls basketball program enters its third year of existence here.

Thief River Falls pieced together a strong 12-4 record in the 1974-75 season, but graduation took a heavy toll on that District 31 runner-up ball club.

Only Marty Minor, a 5-1 senior guard, returns from last year's Prowler squad. She's expected to direct the Prowler offense as Thief River Falls faces Bemidji for the first time ever.

Junior varsity action precedes tonight's varsity game, starting at 5:45 p.m.

Following tonight's stiff test, Thief River Falls will be on the road for games at East Grand Forks Mon., Dec. 1; at Red Lake Falls Thurs., Dec. 4; and at Crookston Central Mon., Dec. 8; before the Prowlers return home to meet another Region Eight AA power, Moorhead, on Thurs., Dec. 11.

Northland To Delay Hockey Season Start

Northland community college hockey coach Curt Geatz announced that his team's 1975-76 season opening game against the University of North Dakota junior varsity has been postponed until Wed., Dec. 3.

The Northmen and the Sioux junior varsity were scheduled to meet tomorrow (Tuesday).

Northland will open its season with back-to-back encounters against the North Dakota junior varsity. Northland will play at Grand Forks Wed., Dec. 3, and North Dakota will visit Thief River Falls the following night, Thurs., Dec. 4.

NCC Basketball Scrimmage Is Slated Tonight

Northland community college basketball team will initiate its 1975-76 season tonight (Monday) with a 6:30 p.m. sophomore-freshman inter-squad scrimmage in the Northland gym.

The event, open free of charge to the general public, is a "get to know each other-type of event," explained Northland coach Chet Engelman. "We would like to get to know our fans a little bit, and of course, we're giving the fans a chance to watch us and maybe have an idea what kind of team we'll be this year."

The sophomore team members will included Preston Curtis, Frank Ridley, Bill Whitney, Tom Johnson, Joe Brown and Bill Gusa, all MJCAA state tournament veterans.

The freshman line-up includes newcomers Dave Davenport, Dave Caspers, Tom Sumpter, Dallas Kemmer, Keith Cheek, Rod Hopkins, John Baril and Steve Sparby.

Engelman said players and fans will have a chance to "mix and mingle" after the game if anyone is interested in doing so. "We're hoping some fans will come out and take a look at us," said Engelman. "And we're playing the game at 6:30 so people will still have lots of time to get home to watch the football game."

Northland will host its annual alumni game at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Prowlers, Rams Meet To Open Basketball Season

New head coach Glen Peters will make his debut as Lincoln high school basketball coach tomorrow (Tuesday) when the Prowlers host Roseau in a 7:30 p.m. 1975-76 season-opening game in the Lincoln gym.

"After two weeks of practice the kids are looking forward to playing a game," commented Peters. "Roseau will be a good opener for us. We both lost a lot of players to graduation, but I think (head coach) Larry Peterson does a good job at Roseau. I have a lot of respect for his coaching abilities," said Peters of Peterson, a Thief River Falls native.

Thief River Falls claimed a one-sided 58-27 triumph a year ago when both ball clubs boasted some of their best personnel in years. Steve Singer, Ross Thacker and Carl Fugelberg are missing from the 15-9 Roseau team, but Wayne Peterson, Jerry Sandahl and Dallas Kemmer are absent from last year's 20-5 Prowler squad.

Peters is unsure of his line-up for the season opener. Any one of seven players may appear in the Prowler starting line-up and as many as nine ball players are nearly assured of seeing action.

Probable Prowler starters include 6-6 senior center Jeff Neelan, 5-7 senior guard Don Forney and 5-8 junior guard Terry Dyrdal. The forward spots are up for grabs, however, between 6-3 senior John Larson, 6-2 junior Dave Poole, 6-1 junior Mike Wiebolt and 5-10 junior Brian Peterson.

Murray Semanko, a 5-8 junior guard, and Dave Peterson a 5-10 senior guard, are also expected to see action, although Peterson has been slowed by a groin pull and his availability for the opener is questionable.

"We plan of using our running game if we can get the rebounds," confirmed Peters who will employ a full-court pressing defense when Roseau has the ball.

"We want to win to get off on the right step," said Peters.

+The 7:30 varsity game will be preceded by a 4:30 freshman game and a 5:45 junior varsity game, with Roseau providing the opposition for all three contests.

+Prowler cheerleaders Pam Engelstad, Joyce Schmidt, Kelly Bjorkman, Joan Jury, Shelly Lund and Jocy Sholin will be tossing miniature Prowler basketballs into the crowd at halftime of the varsity game. The souvenir items are again sponsored by First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Thief River Falls.

Gary Hamilton Is New Goodridge Cage Coach

Goodridge, under the direction of new head coach Gary Hamilton, will open its 1975-76 high school basketball season Tues., Dec. 3, when the Huskies travel to Newfolden.

The Huskies have experienced the highs and lows of high school athletic competition during the past two basketball seasons when coach Mike Borgman's ball clubs fell from a District 31 runner-up finish in 1973-74 to a dismal 1-20 record in 1974-75.

However, Hamilton has now taken over the reigns from Borgman and renewed optimism has surfaced at the school since three starters and four of the top six players on last year's squad return this winter.

Rick Easthouse, a 6-0 junior forward, Jim Johnson, a 5-9 senior forward, and Kelly Dahlen, a 6-2 junior center, were all starters a year ago and Randy Nelson, a 6-0 senior center, was the team's sixth man. Easthouse and Nelson serve as Goodridge co-captains this season.

Easthouse was the second leading scorer on last year's ball club with a 10-point average. He shared the team assist leadership with Johnson with 64 and helped out with 138 rebounds from his guard spot he played last winter. Dahlen was one of the team rebound leaders last year when he pulled down 182 caroms. He also blocked 29 shots and averaged seven points per game.

Only three seniors graduated from the 1974-75 team that avoided a winless season only be beating Oklee 48-45 in the regular season finale.

"Our biggest asset is the fact that we have about 10 people who can play for us," pointed out Hamilton who is entering his first coaching role after graduating from Hamline University in St. Paul. He is a Hastings native.

Team depth will aid the Huskies who like to run. "We'll try to fast break if at all possible," offered Hamilton who said his team would play different types of defenses depending upon game situations. However, a man-to-man defense is preferred by Hamilton and first year assistant coach Greg Stauss, a St. Cloud State University graduate.

Others joining Easthouse, Nelson, Johnson and Dahlen as possible starters this winter include 5-7 senior guard Randy Haugen, 5-4 senior guard Kermit Overton, 5-11 senior center Tom Scheef, 5-7 junior guard Bob Blue, 5-8 junior center Larry Weber and 5-7 sophomore guard Ryan Haugen.

"We should be pretty decent," offered Hamilton whose team will play at home for the first time this season Tues., Dec. 9, when Plummer visits Goodridge.

Defense Dominates Region 8 Jamboree

Thief River Falls came away from the sixth annual Region Eight pre-season hockey jamboree with a win and a tie Saturday at Roseau.

Coach Bill McGann's Prowlers edged Moorhead 1-0 and skated to a scoreless tie against Bemidji in a pair of 11-minute periods.

Low scoring encounters were commonplace with just four goals being scored in the 66 minutes of hockey playing time.

With pairings based on a north-south basis, the jamboree results showed a dead-even tie with each side winning twice, losing twice and tying twice. Roseau, Thief River Falls and Warroad were the Region Eight north half representatives while East Grand Forks, Bemidji and Moorhead skated for the south.

Thief River Falls decisioned Moorhead 1-0 to start the activity, then Roseau and East Grand Forks skated to a scoreless draw, Bemidji edged Warroad 1-0, Moorhead tipped Roseau 1-0, Thief River Falls and Bemidji were scoreless and Warroad shaded East Grand Forks 1-0.

"It was about what I expected," said McGann who praised the defensive aspect of the Prowler play. "You can't get a real idea of how things are going in just a short time, but we're getting there. We got our young kids out of nursery school, now we're entering kindergarten."

"The Moorhead part went real well for us," pointed out McGann. "We put good pressure on for the full 11 minutes and our defensemen did an excellent job of moving people out from in front of the net."

Juniors Keith Daley and Joel Klosterman shared the Prowler goaltending chores against Moorhead. The Prowlers finished with a 12-6 shots-on-goal advantage, with each goalie coming up with three saves.

Penalties hampered the Prowler play against Bemidji. "We had to spend most of the period penalty skating," explained McGann.

Despite the penalties and a decided 13-2 Bemidji shots-on-goal advantage, Thief River Falls salvaged a scoreless tie, thanks in part to the strong goaltending of senior Terry Sullivan. "He came up with a couple of big saves for us," pointed out McGann.

"Again, we did a good job of moving people around in front of our net," said McGann who took special pride in his team's ability to kill off a two-man penalty situation against the Lumberjacks.

"We've still got a long way to go," admitted McGann. "Now we're aiming toward December 2 and Moorhead. Moorhead looks like they're going to be a very respectable team this year said McGann about the Prowlers' season opening foe. That game will be played in the sports arena.

+Thief River Falls suffered some bad luck Saturday afternoon during a scrimmage against East Grand Forks when senior defenseman Chris Biegner was checked into the boards in the sports arena and broke a collarbone. He is expected to be out of action for about six weeks. Junior Steve Erickson is slated to take Biegner's spot on the blueline.

Jury Tops Prowler State Meet Effort

Junior co-captains Joan Jury was the only Lincoln high school swimmer to gain a place finish over the weekend as the North Central Section champion Prowlers competed in the 1975 Minnesota state girls swimming meet at Hamline University in St. Paul.

Jury placed ninth in the 200-yard freestyle and finished 11th in the 400-yard freestyle. No other Prowler swimmer advanced past the preliminary events against the extremely strong competition.

Minnetonka was crowned state champion in the first girls state swim meet since 1942.

"They swam consistent with their times they've swam before," pointed out coach John Hustad about his Prowlers' showing, "but they didn't make that big improvement like they were hoping they would to push them among the top swimmers."

The Prowler state meet delegation included Jury in the 200 and 400-yard freestyle races, Beth Nichols in the 50-yard backstroke, Marci Pluth in the 100-yard freestyle, the 400-yard freestyle relay team of Shelly Lund, Joy Grant, Pluth and Jury and the 200-yard medley relay team of Nichols, Deb Williams, Georgi Desrocher and Kathy Omdahl.

"I think the tension of the state meet might of affected them a little," said Hustad. "They didn't seem to have the confidence. It's probably the first time all year our inexperience showed because we're still young."

"It was a good experience for them," explained Hustad. "It was probably frustrating, but they tried hard and I'm proud of them just for being able to make it to the state meet."

Area Girls Start Basketball Season

Newfolden and Grygla clash tomorrow (Tuesday) in the Marshall County Central high school gym to start the 1975-76 season for area girls high school basketball teams.

Under a new Minnesota State High School League rule, all Minnesota high school girls basketball teams are playing the sport in the winter for the first time. In the past, a portion of the teams played fall seasons while others played the sport in the winter.

Newfolden, Grygla, Goodridge and Plummer are all anticipating successful seasons on the hardcourt. Short previews of the four teams are as follows:

Goodridge

Five returning letter winners have Goodridge coach Linda Bruggeman eyeing another successful season. A year ago the Huskies posted a 9-1 record enroute to a District 31 (fall) championship.

Seniors Shirley Grabowska and Jane Prestebak, juniors Georgine Troska and Bev Horachek and sophomore Shelly Wiseth earned letters on last year's squad. Grabowska and Troska will serve as Goodridge co-captains this winter.

"We're playing a tougher schedule this year," pointed out Bruggeman, "but things look pretty good right now. One thing in our favor is that we have more height than we did last year."

Goodridge opens its 1975-76 season with a Mon., Dec. 1, game at Warren. The Huskies' home opener is scheduled Thurs., Dec. 4, against East Grand Forks Sacred Heart.

Grygla

Second year coach Debbie Kolp lost only three players from a strong 9-4 squad in 1974-75 and she anticipates a successful 1975-76 campaign.

Among the list of returning letter winners are LeeAnn Holte, Bev Byklum and Dawn Satre. There are 22 girls out for the sport at the school.

"We had a very good team last year," explained Kolp, "and since we lost only three players, we think we'll be strong again this year. The girls play real well together."

Grygla visits Newfolden tomorrow (Tuesday) in its season opener.

Plummer

Plummer changes from fall to winter basketball for the first time this year and the change has far-reaching effects on the Cardinals.

"Things are really different this year," pointed out second year coach Liz Howard. "We're only playing one team that we had on our schedule last year; we're in a different district; and we're playing bigger schools. We're hoping for a good year, but everything is kind of up in the air."

Six letter winners return from last year's 7-6 ball club, including seniors Joyce Baune and Donna Pederson and juniors Nancy Zimple, Janet Kvasager, Cindy Jagear and Cindy Carpenter.

The Cardinals open their 1975-76 season by hosting Argyle Fri., Dec. 1.

Newfolden

Five returning starters nearly assures Marshall County Central high school of a successful 1975-76 campaign.

Coach Karen Leverty, in her third year of directing the basketball program at Newfolden, has 43 girls out for the sport, including nine returning letter winners.

Co-captains Jodie Halvorson and Diane Anderson, along with Cheryl Larson, Pam Odberg and Colleen Stokke were all starters a year ago.

Newfolden hosts Grygla tomorrow (Tuesday) in its season opener.

Deer Report

Two best deer hunting reports have come from Northwestern Minnesota. The Twin Valley Times records the success of four parties of hunters. One party of 19 had 11 deer during the two-day season in that area. One of the bucks had 12 points on one side and 13 points on the other.

Another party of five hunters got two deer including an albino buck. The best report shows a party of 11 hunters getting 11 deer. In all, 39 Twin Valley hunters got 25 deer in the two-day season.

Blackduck Report

"We registered 401 deer during the first 10 days of the season," he said. "The breakdown being 211 bucks and 190 does. This compares quite favorably with last year's registration at this time of the season considering the 'bluebird' weather and two days of non-hunting. Hunters reported lots of signs but deer were hard to see. Some laid aside their guns during the nice days and caught their limit of walleyes on Red Lake."

"Also registered six bear, and a like number during the regular bear season. Among the better success stories was the Lorimor party of 24 hunters from Austin and surrounding area who got 24 deer while hunting west of Kelliher and north of Blackduck. Jean DeWitz, 13, of Rochester got a 240-pound, five-point buck—her first deer.

"Duck hunting in the area was fair to good especially on Blackduck and Rabideau Lakes."

State Symbol

Several towns in Minnesota have symbols depicting various features of Minnesota outdoor life. Bemidji has Paul Bunyan and Babe the Blue Ox. Hackensack has Paul Bunyan's sweetheart.

On the shores of Long Lake at Vergas is the world's largest loon. The loon is Minnesota's state bird. The replica at Vergas is 20 feet in height and overlooks beautiful Long Lake. This entire area is known for its great year-round fishing, excellent hunting and peaceful vacations. There are more stores in Vergas selling fishing tackle than you'll find in any other town this size. This is the home town of state senator Roger Hanson who serves on several committees including the natural resources and the game and fish committees.

Other towns have symbols include Baudette with a statue of a walleye, Minnesota's state fish; Nevis with a statue of a muskie; Akeley is the home of Paul Bunyan's cradle; and, of course, once you've visited in Alexandria, you'll never forget the Viking.

John Case

John Case is the new outdoor editor of WBBM-CBS radio in Chicago, 780 on the dial. John has taken over the radio shows formerly hosted by Art Mercier, who passed away last month.

Outdoor news from this column is heard on John's programs twice a week. He is heard seven times each day Monday through Friday, seven times on Saturday and five times on Sunday.

John is member of the international fishing hall of fame and has served as national treasurer of the Izaak Walton league and is a member of the legislative advisory committee for the Illinois department of conservation. He is an excellent outdoorsman, holding the world record for catching an Arctic grayling on spinning tackle.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Now that a jury of six men and six women have brought in a verdict of not guilty in my case of shooting five elk, it has proven a point of law that a man does have a right to protect and defend his property to such an extent when all other means have failed.

That is really all this case has proven. The problem which brought about this case—the elk—are still here in the area. This winter they [illegible] someone's hay as they have in the past. Next spring they will again be in the farmer's fields.

Now I believe it is up to the people of Minnesota who have an interest in the elk to write to your legislators in your district; and perhaps to the heads of the department of natural resources, and demand something be done about this elk problem.

Whether you disagreed with me on this elk case or not, or whether you have seen an elk in this state, shouldn't matter. These elk really belong to all the people in the state. Since the DNR has ceased to provide feed for them, they are allowed to roam as they please.

I feel that it is a shame that hundreds of these elk have had to be killed over the years when we have never had an open season on them in over 35 years. Only a few permits were given to farmers years ago to compensate for damages; they were allowed to take one elk.

There have been some of the herd shot when mistaken for deer. Also some were shot by poachers, but most have been killed in defense of property.

I believe it is unfair for local DNR officials to have this problem to deal with when there is no provision for solving it. The only thing the local officers have to control the elk with are a few exploding devices which we know—and they know—will only work a few days until the animals get used to them.

Now it is up to the people who live in all parts of the state. Do you want something done to help preserve the elk and provide for their well being, or will you remain silent and allow things to go on as they have for another 35 years?

Sincerely,
Gordon Foss

Much To Be Learned Yet About Stars

by Jeannie Hansen
U of M News Service

At this moment there are thousands of stars being born and thousands dying. Astronomers do not know very much about these events.

In your body at this moment are elements that once were part of stars. Astronomers don't know exactly how these heavy elements, carbon and oxygen, were formed.

Professors John Gallagher and John Warner, astronomers at the University of Minnesota, are guides to the field of astronomy—a field where there is more that is not known than is known.

According to Warner, astronomers know that new stars are formed in clouds of gases and dust and that gravity causes the clouds to collide and condense. As the matter condenses, the hydrogen fuses to form helium, and nuclear reactions begin. But how do the new stars emerge from their dust and gas cocoons? This is very poorly understood, Warner said.

The death of stars is also mysterious. Some die quickly and violently. Others die slowly.

Stars which undergo fast deaths are called supernovae. In a supernova, a star's outer shell explodes, expanding at the rate of 4,000 kilometers per second or more. It releases as much energy in only two weeks as our sun does in 10 billion years. The star can change from being barely visible to being the brightest star in the sky in a few hours, Warner said.

Part of the dying star may condense in the center of the explosion. It becomes a trillion times denser than water, spins fast, and emits pulses of light and other radiation. According to John Gallagher, a cubic inch of this star could crush a person to death. The physical principles causing the explosion and the resulting pulsar are not fully understood, he said.

The stars that die more slowly are equally problematic. They throw off their nuclear material at the "slow" rate of 10 kilometers per second, Warner said. The result at the center is a hot, ultraviolet star which eventually cools to a very small one called a white dwarf. Exactly how this matter is thrown off is also a mystery, according to Warner.

A third unusual variety of "starlike" object—called a quasar—emits more energy than a trillion suns but is very small. These quasars now seem to astronomers to be moving away from us at nearly the speed of light. The farther they are, the faster they are moving. There is some feeling that quasars are related to the birth of galaxies but this is still an astronomical unknown, Gallagher said.

Another "starlike" object, about 31 of which have been found so far, is called "B L Lac." Astronomers are not yet sure exactly what they are, or how far away they are, or even whether they are a type of quasar. Warner calls them "certainly one of the most interesting of current astronomical problems."

Several other of these dramatic "astronomical" problems involve the relationships between the evolution of stars, the evolution of solar systems, and the evolution of galaxies, swirling systems of millions of stars such as our Milky Way.

The mass of many galaxies is known from their movements. Yet they act as though they were heavier than they look. "It is quite possible," Gallagher said, "that a great amount of the mass of these galaxies is in a form that we have not yet detected." The unknown mass could be in the form of black holes, cold gas or large planets.

The evolution of solar systems is also an incomplete astronomical story. Astronomers would like to be able to discover a definite solar system other than our now. Stars with planets around them wobble slightly, because of the unknown mass of the planets, but the amount is so small that the earth's own atmosphere interferes with our seeing the effect.

Plans for a large orbiting telescope have not yet been successful. Gallagher estimates that, if the telescope is launched and scans the sky for other solar systems, at least one such system could be found. It is on planets such as these that intelligent life could be found.

Life exists on earth because it has evolved from the original hydrogen and helium still found throughout space. The role of these gases, and the heavier molecules formed from them, in the recycling of the universe is a central question in astronomy.

Stars convert hydrogen and helium into elements in their nuclear furnaces. The stars consume the material in several billion years. Then they explode, quickly or slowly.

Minnesota Air Nat'l. Guard Is Combat Ready

Twin Cities unit of the Minnesota air national guard is ready for combat, according to a letter received by Brigadier General James G. Sieben, Minnesota's adjutant general recently.

In the letter, Major General Thomas A. Aldrich, commander of the 22nd air force, military airlift command, told Sieben, "The exemplary and noteworthy achievements outlined in a recent inspection report clearly evidence the outstanding management and leadership of the 133d Tactical airlift wing of the Minnesota air national guard.

"You can be comfortable knowing the 133d is combat-ready and proud of the fact it is part of the total force."

The Minnesota wing was the first air national guard unit in the entire military airlift command to receive an "outstanding" rating during the annual general inspection conducted by the United States air force.

"Receiving such high honors is indeed an accomplishment to be proud of" stated Sieben, an army guard officer. "I always have admired the 'blue-suiters' of the air national guard and I feel fortunate to have them as part of the Minnesota guard team."

The 133d Tactical airlift wing is stationed at the air national guard base, Minneapolis-St. Paul International airport. Flying the C-130 "Hercules" aircraft, the wing provides tactical airlift missions for the regular air force as well as local training missions.

The wing is commanded by Brigadier general John R. Dolny, 1048 south Smith street, St. Paul.

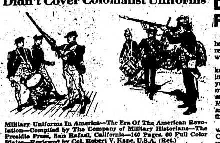
Didn't Cover Colonialist Uniforms



Military Uniforms In America—The Era Of The American Revolution—Compiled by The Company of Military Historians—The Presidio Press, San Rafael, California—140 Pages, 60 Full Color Plates—Reviewed by Col. Robert V. Kane, U.S.A. (Ret.)

In striking contrast to General Washington's ragged troops at Valley Forge were many splendidly uniformed regiments of Colonials, British and mercenaries serving on both sides in the American Revolution. Actually, Washington had issued "general orders" covering uniforms for the Colonials, but the militia units representing the separate colonies wore their own distinctive uniforms and the Continental Army rarely wore regulation uniforms. This was due partly to confusion about what the cut and style of the uniform should be since the orders covered only color, insignia and such things as facings and braid. Mostly, of course was the more critical reason—lack of supply.

There was no real source of information on uniforms worn during the Revolutionary period before 1882 when a survey illustrated by H. A. Ogden was published.

Just how elegant and richly accoutred were the regimental uniforms of Colonial, British, French and German troops during the period of 1755-1795 is now handsomely illustrated with 60 full color plates in the Bicentennial Commemorative book "Military Uniforms in America." This book brings together for the first time in a single binding a complete and authentic collection of the uniforms worn by units garrisoned in America. The illustrations are the work of 12 artists who have accurately depicted the various uniforms from details researched over a 25 year period. Historical data covering the regiments and military units represented is verified and described by 21 well known authors.

Early painters and illustrators were hampered in their work by the lack of information on military uniforms of the Revoluntionary period. A Gilbert Stuart painting of Washington in a scene dated 1776 shows him wearing a uniform, details of which would not be designed for another ten years.

An idea of how interesting and colorful are the illustrations in "Military Uniforms in America" is the decision by one large library to withhold the book from general circulation because borrowers were cutting the pages out and framing them for wall hangings.

Interesting also is the number of militia units organized in the Colonies, each with its own distinctive uniform which lacked for nothing in bright color, brass, braid and plummage.

As a souvenir of the Bicentennial and as a Historical reference accurately depicting the garb of troops engaged in the Revolutionary period, this book is well worth the $25 price. Compiled by The Company Of Military Historians, it is available from the Presidio Press, 1114 Irwin Street, San Rafael, California 94901.

Set Hearing On Smoking In Public Places

A public hearing pertaining to the Minnesota clean indoor air act, which regulates smoking in public places, has been announced by the Minnesota department of health.

The hearing will begin at 9:30 a.m. December 2, in the board room of the health department building at 717 S.E. Delaware st., Minneapolis.

Proposed rules on smoking in public places and in public meetings will be considered at the hearing. The rules apply to all enclosed, indoor areas used by the general public or serving as a place of work, including offices, public conveyances, health care facilities, restaurants and many other categories of public places.

Copies of the proposed rules are available from Kent Peterson at the Minnesota department of health, 717 S.E. Delaware st., Minneapolis 55440. Additional copies will be available at the hearing.

Minnesota residents are encouraged to submit their views on the proposed rules either orally or in writing at the public hearing or by mailing a statement to Warren R. Lawson, M.D., secretary and executive officer, state board of health, at the health department building.

In order to save time and avoid duplication, Peterson suggests that organizations and associations having a common viewpoint or interest join together and present a single statement.

Immediately following the health department hearing, the department of labor and industry will conduct a hearing on proposed rules for smoking in factories, warehouses and similar places of work.

Marilyn Hassett stars as courageous Jill Kinmont, and Beau Bridges as Dick Buek, the irrepressible champion skier-flyer whose love enables her to overcome personal tragedy in "The Other Side of the Mountain," now playing at the Galaxy Twin Theatre.

More Earnings To Be Taxable For SS In '76

People earning over $14,000 a year will be paying social security tax on more of their earnings in 1976, and those getting benefits will be allowed to earn more with out losing monthly payments.

William Phalen, manager of the Grand Forks social security district, said today that beginning next January 1 the maximum earnings per year subject to social security tax will increase to $15,300. The present taxable maximum of $14,100 will remain in effect through 1975. The social security tax rate will not be increased in 1976; only those earning over $14,100 will pay more tax.

In return for the higher taxes, workers affected by this change will have greater protection under social security because more of their earnings will be credited toward benefits.

Also in 1976, the amount that a beneficiary may earn without losing any of his social security checks will increase to $2,760 a year. The current maximum of $2,520 a year still applies to 1975 earnings.

Phalen said that people who earn more than $2,760 in 1976 may still get some social security benefits. For every two dollars earned above $2,760 a beneficiary will give up one dollar in benefits for the year. Full benefits are payable, however, for any month in which a beneficiary does not earn more than $230 in wages or work in self-employment. People 72 or older may earn any amount and still receive all their benefits.

Questions about these changes can be directed to any of the social security offices in the Grand Forks district: Grand Forks, phone 772-5517; Grafton, phone 352-0656; or Crookston, phone 281-4892.

Snow Means Driving Blues For Unprepared

In case the Indian summer has blurred your memory, be reminded—winter is on its way.

As all Minnesotans should know, the first rule of driving in winter storms is: Unless you have to, don't!! But if you must venture out, Jinx Brady, automotive consultant for the Minnesota State automobile association (AAA), offers these practical tips:

Before you drive—scrape all windows free of ice and snow. Clear snow away from the air vents on the hood. This allows fresh air to circulate into the heater and blower system for best operation of defrosters.

Check for proper tire tread depth and inflation. A tire is "bald" if it has less than one-sixteenth inch tread depth between any two or more grooves. For every ten degree drop in temperature, tire pressure may drop one pound. Under-inflated tires can cause erratic steering, excessive wear and increased gas consumption.

Handy items to have along are battery booster cables, flares or reflectors, a first-aid kit and a flashlight. Tire chains, which provide four to seven times the traction of conventional tires, may also be needed. Sand bags should be placed over or ahead of the rear axle.

Cold weather starting—turn off all electrical accessories and shift into "neutral" or "park". Depress the gas pedal all the way to the floor ONCE, then let it up. This cocks the automatic choke so your car is ready to start. Do not pump the accelerator or you will flood the engine. Engage the starter for 10 seconds. Cranking the engine for longer periods may damage your starter motor.

If the engine fails to start, press the gas pedal again and turn the key to "start" for an additional 10 seconds. Repeat until engine starts, allowing about 15 seconds between each try. If you should flood the engine, press the gas pedal to the floor and hold it for about one full minute. With the pedal still down, engage the starter. When the engine starts, release the accelerator slowly, but do not pump it.

When the car is moving—go easy on the brakes, accelerator and steering wheel to avoid skids.

Increase following distance. The braking distance on glare ice may be as much as nine or ten times the normal dry pavement distance.

When stopping or slowing down, "pump" your brakes, don't jam them. Avoid shifting to a lower gear—the sudden drag could cause skidding.

Be wary of shady spots, bridges and overpasses where ice forms more quickly and stays longer.

If the car starts skidding, ease up on the accelerator and steer in the direction of the skid. Don't slam on your brakes and don't oversteer.

Check frequently for ice and snow buildup on headlights, taillights and windshield wipers. Keep the windshield washer reservoirs filled with non-freezing liquid and use the washer frequently to combat salt spray from highways.

After stopping—avoid applying the parking brake during extreme cold—it can freeze.

Door locks often freeze, too. If entry through another door isn't possible, heat the end of the key with a match or lighter and quickly insert it into the lock. Repeat the procedure several times if necessary until the lock is free.

Barrier Removal Aids Handicapped

By Markie Harwood
U of M News Service

When a physically handicapped person encounters an able-bodied person on the street, he is often confronting a person who either feels unnecessarily sorry for him or is excessively curious about his handicap. The able-bodied person is likely either to react nervously and try to end the encounter as soon as possible or to ask a lot of questions.

Instead of treating the handicapped person as a pathetic creature or an oddity, the able-bodied person should treat the handicapped as just another person—a person who can enjoy a beer or a movie as well as anyone can, according to John Schatzlein, community resources coordinator and counselor in the University of Minnesota's department of physical medicine and rehabilitation.

"Many of these encounters could be ego-damaging, but the handicapped person must learn to realize the lack of education among able-bodied people concerning the abilities and needs of the handicapped," Schatzlein said. "Handicapped people must learn to appreciate their own value as individual human beings and ignore comments that emphasize their outward appearances," he said.

Although there is still a long way to go, Schatzlein said, relations between handicapped and able-bodied people are improving because of the increasing presence of the handicapped in the community.

With the gradual removal of architectural barriers and the lessening of discrimination against the handicapped in housing, employment and transportation, handicapped people are in the community more and can be observed by the able-bodied as individuals, not as people to feel sorry for, Schatzlein said. "Interaction has a chance to be more honest," he said.

However, before the handicapped can move into the community without hesitation and this honest interaction can result, Schatzlein said, barriers in transportation, housing and employment must be totally eliminated.

"People will have to stop opposing laws that would allow total participation of the handicapped in society," he said. "They'll have to get over the fear of increased taxes to implement this participation and realize the benefits to be derived from it."

The increasing understanding and tolerance among people with different types of disabilities must also continue, he said. "They must learn to work together for their common goals."

The media could also help by presenting the handicapped more fairly, Schatzlein said. Instead of being presented only as people in need of sympathy and of the proceeds of money-raising benefits, they should also be shown as tax-paying citizens like others in the community, he said. "For example, a bank advertisement could show a handicapped person depositing his paycheck alongside able-bodied people."

At present, handicapped people go before television cameras to solicit donations for their needs from sympathetic viewers, Schatzlein said. Ultimately, he said, they should have enough power to request funds for research and other needs from legislative bodies.

Cold Weather Can Cause Tire Problems

This time of year, when temperatures sometimes drop suddenly and sharply, tires bear special watching, says the Tire industry safety council.

"For every ten degree drop in temperature a tire may lose a pound of air pressure," said council chairman Malcolm R. Lovell, Jr.

"As always, it's a good idea to check your tires for proper inflation with your own gauge before starting out," Lovell said.

"Underinflated, soft tires can cause erratic steering and excessive wear as well as make engines work harder to overcome rolling resistance," Lovell explained, "and the more energy your engines needs, the more gas it uses."

The Tire industry safety council offers these other safety and maintenance tips for colder weather: Now is a good time to have your alignment checked, following the traditionally busy driving season. Most dealers and stations won't charge you unless alignment is needed;

If you plan to use winter, or snow tires, store your regular tires flat in a cool, dry place. Make sure they are out of the sun and away from electric motors, which produce rubber-deteriorating ozone:
